GENERAL INDEX

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1935.

[25 & 26 GEO V, CH 42]

An Act to make further provision for the government of India.

{2nd August 1935}

Be it enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows —

* * * * *

FINANCE, PROPERTY, CONTRACTS AND SUITS

* * * * *

PROPERTY, CONTRACTS, LIABILITIES AND SUITS

* * * * *

176.—(1) The Federation may sue or be sued by the name of the Federation of India and a Provincial Government may sue or be sued by the name of the Province, and, without prejudice to the subsequent provisions of this chapter, may, subject to any provisions which may be made by Act of the Federal or a Provincial Legislature enacted by virtue of powers conferred on that Legislature by this Act, sue or be sued in relation to their respective affairs in the like cases as the Secretary of State in Council might have sued or been sued if this Act had not been passed

Section 176
Suits and proceedings

(2) Rules of Court may provide that, where the Federation, the Federal Railway Authority, or a Province sue or are sued in the United Kingdom, service of all proceedings may be effected upon the High Commissioner for India or such other representative in the United Kingdom of the Federation, Authority or Province as may be specified in the rules

* * * * *

179.—(1) Any proceedings which, if this Act had not been passed, might have been brought against the Secretary of State in Council may, in the case of any liability arising before the commencement of Part III of this Act or arising under any contract or statute made or passed before that date be brought against the Federation or a Province, according to the subject-matter of the proceedings, or, at the option of the person by whom the proceedings are brought, against the Secretary of State, and any sum ordered to be paid by way of debt, damages or costs in any such proceed-

Section 179
Legal proceedings as to certain matters

ings, and any costs or expenses incurred in or in connection with the defence thereof, shall be paid out of the revenues of the Federation or the Province, as the case may be, or, if the proceedings are brought against the Secretary of State, out of such revenues as the Secretary of State may direct

The provisions of this sub-section shall apply with respect to proceedings arising under any contract declared by the terms thereof to be supplemental to any such contract as is mentioned in those provisions as they apply in relation to the contracts so mentioned

(2) If at the commencement of Part III of this Act any legal proceedings are pending in the United Kingdom or in India to which the Secretary of State in Council is a party, the Secretary of State shall be deemed to be substituted in those proceedings for the Secretary of State in Council, and the provisions of sub-section (1) of this section shall apply in relation to sums ordered to be paid, and costs or expenses incurred, by the Secretary of State or the Secretary of State in Council in or in connection with any such proceedings as they apply in relation to sums ordered to be paid in, and costs or expenses incurred in or in connection with the defence of, proceedings brought against the Secretary of State under the said sub-section (1)

(3) Any contract made in respect of the affairs of the Federation or a Province by or on behalf of the Secretary of State after the commencement of Part III of this Act may provide that any proceedings under that contract shall be brought in the United Kingdom by or against the Secretary of State and any such proceedings may be brought accordingly, and any sum ordered to be paid by the Secretary of State by way of debt, damages or costs in any such proceedings, and any costs or expenses incurred by the Secretary of State in or in connection therewith, shall be paid out of the revenues of the Federation or the Province, as the case may be

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed as imposing any liability upon the Exchequer of the United Kingdom in respect of any debt, damages costs or expenses in or in connection with any proceedings brought or continued by or against the Secretary of State by virtue of this section, or as derogating from the provisions of sub-section (1) of the last preceding section

(5) This section does not apply in relation to contracts or liabilities solely in connection with the affairs of Burma or Aden, other than liabilities which are by this Act made liabilities of the Federation, or to contracts or liabilities for purposes which will, after the commencement of Part III of this Act, be purposes of His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States

PART IX THE JUDICATURE

CHAPTER I.

THE FEDERAL COURT.

200.—(1) There shall be a Federal Court consisting of a Chief Justice of India and such number of other judges as His Majesty may deem necessary, but unless and until an address has been presented by the Federal Legislature to the Governor-General for submission to His Majesty praying for an increase in the number of judges, the number of puisne judges shall not exceed six.

(2) Every judge of the Federal Court shall be appointed by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual and shall hold office until he attains the age of sixty five years

Provided that—

- (a) A judge may by resignation under his hand addressed to the Governor-General resign his office
- (b) A judge may be removed from his office by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual on the ground of misbehaviour or of infirmity of mind or body, if the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on reference being made to them by His Majesty report that the judge ought on any such ground to be removed

(3) A person shall not be qualified for appointment as a judge of the Federal Court unless he—

- (a) has been for at least five years a judge of a High Court in British India or in a Federated State or
- (b) is a barrister of England or Northern Ireland of at least ten years standing or a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland of at least ten years standing or
- (c) has been for at least ten years a pleader of a High Court in British India or in a Federated State or of two or more such Courts in succession

Provided that—

- (i) a person shall not be qualified for appointment as Chief Justice of India unless he is or when first appointed to judicial office was a barrister, a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader and
- (ii) in relation to the Chief Justice of India for the references in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this sub section to ten years, there shall be substituted references to fifteen years

In computing for the purposes of this sub section the standing of a barrister or a member of the Faculty of Advocates, or the period during which a person has been a pleader any period during which a person has held judicial office after he became a barrister a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader as the case may be, shall be included

(4) Every person appointed to be a judge of the Federal Court shall, before he enters upon his office make and subscribe before the Governor-General or some person appointed by him an oath according to the form set out in that behalf in the Fourth Schedule to this Act

201. The judges of the Federal Court shall be entitled to such salaries and allowances, including allowances for expenses in respect of equipment and travelling upon appointment and to such rights in respect of leave and pensions, as may from time to time be fixed by His Majesty in Council

Section 201,
Salaries, &c., of judges

Section 201.

Provided that neither the salary of a judge nor his rights in respect of leave of absence or pension shall be varied to his disadvantage after his appointment

Section 202

Temporary appointment of acting Chief Justice

202. If the office of Chief Justice of India becomes vacant, or if the Chief Justice is, by reason of absence or for any other reason, unable to perform the duties of his office, those duties shall, until some person appointed by His Majesty to the vacant office has entered on the duties thereof or until the Chief Justice has resumed his duties, as the case may be, be performed by such one of the other judges of the court as the Governor General may in his discretion appoint for the purpose

Seat of Federal Court

203. The Federal Court shall be a court of record and shall sit in Delhi and at such other place or places if any, as the Chief Justice of India may, with the approval of the Governor-General, from time to time appoint

Section 204

Original jurisdiction of Federal Court

204.—(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, the Federal Court shall, to the exclusion of any other Court, have an original jurisdiction in any dispute between any two or more of the following parties that is to say, the Federation, any of the Provinces or any of the Federated States, if and in so far as the dispute involves any question (whether of law or fact) on which the existence or extent of a legal right depends

Provided that the said jurisdiction shall not extend to—

(a) a dispute to which a State is a party, unless the dispute—

(i) concerns the interpretation of this Act or of an Order in Council made thereunder, or the extent of the legislative or executive authority vested in the Federation by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of that State, or

(ii) arises under an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration in that State of a law of the Federal Legislature, or otherwise concerns some matter with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws for that State, or

(iii) arises under an agreement made after the establishment of the Federation, with the approval of His Majesty's Representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, between that State and the Federation or a Province, being an agreement which expressly provides that the said jurisdiction shall extend to such a dispute,

(b) a dispute arising under any agreement which expressly provides that the said jurisdiction shall not extend to such a dispute

(2) The Federal Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction shall not pronounce any judgment other than a declaratory judgment

Section 205
Appellate jurisdiction of Federal Court in appeals from High Courts in British India

205.—(1) An appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from any judgment, decree or final order of a High Court in British India if the High Court certifies that the case involves a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of this Act or any Order in Council made thereunder, and it shall be the duty of every High Court in British India to consider in every case whether or not any such question is involved and of its own motion, to give or to withhold a certificate accordingly.

(2) Where such a certificate is given any party in the case may appeal to the Federal Court on the ground that any such question as aforesaid has been wrongly decided and on any ground on which that party could have appealed without special leave to His Majesty in Council if no such certificate had been given, and, with the leave of the Federal Court, on any other ground, and no direct appeal shall lie to His Majesty in Council either with or without special leave

206.—(1) The Federal Legislature may by Act provide that in such civil cases as may be specified in the Act an appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from a judgment, decree or final order of a High Court in British India without any such certificate as aforesaid, but no appeal shall lie under any such Act unless—

Section 21
Power of Fed.
Legislature to large appe
jurisdiction

- (a) the amount or value of the subject matter of the dispute in the court of first instance and still in dispute on appeal was and is not less than fifty thousand rupees or such other sum not less than fifteen thousand rupees as may be specified by the Act, or the judgment decree or final order involves directly or indirectly some claim or question respecting property of the like amount or value, or

(b) the Federal Court gives special leave to appeal

(2) If the Federal Legislature makes such provision as is mentioned in the last preceding sub section, consequential provision may also be made by Act of the Federal Legislature for the abolition in whole or in part of direct appeals in civil cases from High Courts in British India to His Majesty in Council either with or without special leave

(3) A Bill or amendment for any of the purposes specified in this section shall not be introduced into, or moved in, either Chamber of the Federal Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor-General in his discretion

207.—(1) An appeal shall lie to the Federal Court from a High Court in a Federated State on the ground that a question of law has been wrongly decided, being a question which concerns the interpretation of this Act or of an Order in Council made thereunder or the extent of the legislative or executive authority vested in the Federation by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of that State, or arises under an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration in that State of a law of the Federal Legislature

Appellate jur diction of Fed.
Court in app
from High Cot in Federat
States

(2) An appeal under this section shall be by way of special case to be stated for the opinion of the Federal Court by the High Court, and the Federal Court may require a case to be so stated, and may return any case so stated in order that further facts may be stated therein

208 An appeal may be brought to His Majesty in Council from a decision of the Federal Court—

Section 208
Appeals to Majesty in Cou
cil

- (a) from any judgment of the Federal Court given in the exercise of its original jurisdiction in any dispute which concerns the interpretation of this Act or of an Order in Council made thereunder, or the extent of the legislative or executive authority vested in the Federation by virtue of the Instrument of Accession of any State or arises under an agreement made under Part VI of this Act in relation to the administration in any State of a law of the Federal Legislature without leave and

(b) in any other case by leave of the Federal Court or of His Majesty in Council

Section 209
Form of judgment on appeal

209—(1) The Federal Court shall where it allows an appeal remit the case to the court from which the appeal was brought with a declaration as to the judgment decree or order which is to be substituted for the judgment decree or order appealed against and the court from which the appeal was brought shall give effect to the decision of the Federal Court

(2) Where the Federal Court upon any appeal makes any order as to the costs of the proceedings in the Federal Court it shall as soon as the amount of the costs to be paid is ascertained transmit its order for the payment of that sum to the court from which the appeal was brought and that court shall give effect to the order

(3) The Federal Court may subject to such terms or conditions as it may think fit to impose order a stay of execution in any case under appeal to the Court pending the hearing of the appeal and execution shall be stayed accordingly

Enforcement of decrees and orders of Federal Court and orders as to discovery &c

210—(1) All authorities civil and judicial throughout the Federation shall act in aid of the Federal Court

(2) The Federal Court shall as respects British India and the Federated States have power to make any order for the purpose of securing the attendance of any person the discovery or production of any documents or the investigation or punishment of any contempt of Court which any High Court in British India has power to make as respects the territory within its jurisdiction and any such orders and any orders of the Federal Court as to the costs of and incidental to any proceedings therein shall be enforceable by all courts and authorities in every part of British India or of any Federated State as if they were orders duly made by the highest court exercising civil or criminal jurisdiction as the case may be in that part

(3) Nothing in this section—

(a) shall apply to any such order with respect to costs as is mentioned in sub section (2) of the last preceding section or

(b) shall as regards a Federated State apply in relation to any jurisdiction exercisable by the Federal Court by reason only of the making by the Federal Legislature of such provision as is mentioned in this chapter for enlarging the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Court

Letters of request to Federated States

211 Where in any case the Federal Court require a special case to be stated or re stated by or remit a case to or order a stay of execution in a case from a High Court in a Federated State or require the aid of the civil or judicial authorities in a Federated State the Federal Court shall cause letters of request in that behalf to be sent to the Ruler of the State and the Ruler shall cause such communication to be made to the High Court or to any judicial or civil authority as the circumstances may require.

212 The law declared by the Federal Court and by any judgment of the Privy Council shall so far as applicable be recognised as binding on and shall be followed by all courts in British India and so far as respects the application and interpretation of this Act or any Order in Council thereunder or any matter with respect to which the Federal Legislature has power to make laws in relation to the State in any Federated State

Law declared by Federal Court and Privy Council to be binding on all Courts

213—(1) If at any time it appears to the Governor General that a question of law has arisen or is likely to arise which is of such a nature and of such public importance that it is expedient to obtain the opinion of the Federal Court upon it he may in his discretion refer the question to that court for consideration and the court may after such hearing as they think fit report to the Governor General thereon

Section 213
Power of Governor General to consult Federal Court

(2) No report shall be made under this section save in accordance with an opinion delivered in open court with the concurrence of a majority of the judges present at the hearing of the case but nothing in this sub section shall be deemed to prevent a judge who does not concur from delivering a dissenting opinion

214—(1) The Federal Court may from time to time with the approval of the Governor General in his discretion make rules of court for regulating generally the practice and procedure of the court including rules as to the persons practising before the court as to the time within which appeals to the court are to be entered as to the costs of and incidental to any proceedings in the court and as to the fees to be charged in respect of proceedings therein and in particular may make rules providing for the summary determination of any appeal which appears to the court to be frivolous or vexatious or brought for the purpose of delay

Rules of Court &c

(2) Rules made under this section may fix the minimum number of judges who are to sit for any purpose so however that no case shall be decided by less than three judges

Provided that if the Federal Legislature makes such provision as is mentioned in this chapter for enlarging the appellate jurisdiction of the court, the rules shall provide for the constitution of a special division of the court for the purpose of deciding all cases which would have been within the jurisdiction of the court even if its jurisdiction had not been so enlarged

(3) Subject to the provisions of any rules of court the Chief Justice of India shall determine what judges are to constitute any division of the court and what judges are to sit for any purpose

(4) No judgment shall be delivered by the Federal Court save in open court and with the concurrence of a majority of the judges present at the hearing of the case but nothing in this sub section shall be deemed to prevent a judge who does not concur from delivering a dissenting judgment

(5) All proceedings in the Federal Court shall be in the English language

215 The Federal Legislature may make provision by Act for conferring upon the Federal Court such supplemental powers not inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act as may appear to be necessary or desirable for the purpose of enabling the court more effectively to exercise the jurisdiction conferred upon it by or under this Act

Section 215
Ancillary powers of Federal Court

Section 216
Expenses of Federal Court

216.—(1) The administrative expenses of the Federal Court, including all salaries, allowances and pensions payable to or in respect of the officers and servants of the court, shall be charged upon the revenues of the Federation, and any fees or other moneys taken by the court shall form part of those revenues

(2) The Governor-General shall exercise his individual judgment as to the amount to be included in respect of the administrative expenses of the Federal Court in any estimates of expenditure laid by him before the Chambers of the Federal Legislature

Construction of references to High Courts in States

217. References in any provision of this Part of this Act to a High Court in a Federated State shall be construed as references to any court which His Majesty may, after communication with the Ruler of the State declare to be a High Court for the purposes of that provision

Section 218
Savings

218. Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as conferring or empowering the Federal Legislature to confer any right of appeal to the Federal Court in any case in which a High Court in British India is exercising jurisdiction on appeal from a court outside British India, or as affecting any right of appeal in any such case to His Majesty in Council with or without leave

CHAPTER II

THE HIGH COURTS IN BRITISH INDIA

Section 219
Meaning of High Court

219.—(1) The following courts shall in relation to British India be deemed to be High Courts for the purposes of this Act, that is to say, the High Courts in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Lahore and Patna, the Chief Court in Oudh, the Judicial Commissioners Courts in the Central Provinces and Berar, in the North West Frontier Province and in Sind, any other court in British India constituted or reconstituted under this chapter as a High Court, and any other comparable court in British India which His Majesty in Council may declare to be a High Court for the purposes of this Act

Provided that, if provision has been made before the commencement of Part III of this Act for the establishment of a High Court to replace any court or courts mentioned in this sub-section then as from the establishment of the new court this section shall have effect as if the new court were mentioned therein in lieu of the court or courts so replaced

(2) The provisions of this chapter shall apply to every High Court in British India

Section 220
Constitution of High Courts

220.—(1) Every High Court shall be a court of record and shall consist of a chief justice and such other judges as His Majesty may from time to time deem it necessary to appoint

Provided that the judges so appointed, together with any additional judges appointed by the Governor-General in accordance with the following provisions of this chapter, shall at no time exceed in number such maximum number as His Majesty in Council may fix in relation to that court

(2) Every judge of a High Court shall be appointed by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual and shall hold office until he attains the age of sixty years

Provided that—

- (a) a judge may by resignation under his hand addressed to the Governor resign his office
- (b) a judge may be removed from his office by His Majesty by warrant under the Royal Sign Manual on the ground of misbehaviour or of infirmity of mind or body if the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on reference being made to them by His Majesty report that the judge ought on any such ground to be removed

(3) A person shall not be qualified for appointment as a judge of a High Court unless he—

- (a) is a barrister of England or Northern Ireland of at least ten years standing or a member of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland of at least ten years standing or
- (b) is a member of the Indian Civil Service of at least ten years standing who has for at least three years served as or exercised the powers of a district judge or
- (c) has for at least five years held a judicial office in British India not inferior to that of a subordinate judge or judge of a small cause court or
- (d) has for at least ten years been a pleader of any High Court or of two or more such Courts in succession

Provided that a person shall not unless he is or when first appointed to judicial office was a barrister a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader be qualified for appointment as Chief Justice of any High Court constituted by letters patent until he has served for not less than three years as a judge of a High Court

In computing for the purposes of this sub section the standing of a barrister or a member of the Faculty of Advocates or the period during which a person has been a pleader any period during which the person has held judicial office after he became a barrister a member of the Faculty of Advocates or a pleader as the case may be shall be included

(4) Every person appointed to be a judge of a High Court shall before he enters upon his office make and subscribe before the Governor or some person appointed by him an oath according to the form set out in that behalf in the Fourth Schedule to this Act

221 The judges of the several High Courts shall be entitled to such salaries and allowances including allowances for expenses in respect of equipment and travelling upon appointment and to such rights in respect of leave and pensions as may from time to time be fixed by His Majesty in Council

Salaries &c of judges

Provided that neither the salary of a judge nor his rights in respect of leave of absence or pension shall be varied to his disadvantage after his appointment

Section 222
Temporary and additional judges

222.—(1) If the office of chief justice of a High Court becomes vacant, or if any such chief justice is by reason of absence or for any other reason, unable to perform the duties of his office those duties shall, until some person appointed by His Majesty to the vacant office has entered on the duties thereof, or until the chief justice has resumed his duties, as the case may be, be performed by such one of the other judges of the court as the Governor-General may in his discretion think fit to appoint for the purpose

(2) If the office of any other judge of a High Court becomes vacant or if any such judge is appointed to act temporarily as a chief justice or is by reason of absence, or for any other reason unable to perform the duties of his office the Governor-General may in his discretion appoint a person duly qualified for appointment as a judge to act as a judge of that court, and the person so appointed shall, unless the Governor General in his discretion thinks fit to revoke his appointment, be deemed to be a judge of that court until some person appointed by His Majesty to the vacant office has entered on the duties thereof, or until the permanent judge has resumed his duties

(3) If by reason of any temporary increase in the business of any High Court or by reason of arrears of work in any such court it appears to the Governor-General that the number of the judges of the court should be for the time being increased, the Governor General in his discretion may, subject to the foregoing provisions of this chapter with respect to the maximum number of judges appoint persons duly qualified for appointment as judges to be additional judges of the court for such period not exceeding two years as he may specify

Jurisdiction of existing High
Courts

223 Subject to the provisions of this Part of this Act to the provisions of any Order in Council made under this or any other Act and to the provisions of any Act of the appropriate Legislature enacted by virtue of powers conferred on that Legislature by this Act, the jurisdiction of, and the law administered in, any existing High Court and the respective powers of the judges thereof in relation to the administration of justice in the court including any power to make rules of court and to regulate the sittings of the court and of members thereof sitting alone or in division courts shall be the same as immediately before the commencement of Part III of this Act

Section 224
Administrative functions of High
Courts

224—(1) Every High Court shall have superintendence over all courts in India for the time being subject to its appellate jurisdiction and may do any of the following things that is to say—

- (a) call for returns
- (b) make and issue general rules and prescribe forms for regulating the practice and proceedings of such courts,
- (c) prescribe forms in which books entries and accounts shall be kept by the officers of any such courts, and
- (d) settle tables of fees to be allowed to the sheriff attorneys, and all clerks and officers of courts

Provided that such rules forms and tables shall not be inconsistent with the provision of any law for the time being in force and shall require the previous approval of the Governor

(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as giving to a High Court any jurisdiction to question any judgment of any inferior court which is not otherwise subject to appeal or revision

Section 224.

225—(1) If on an application made in accordance with the provisions of this section a High Court is satisfied that a case pending in an inferior court being a case which the High Court has power to transfer to itself for trial involves or is likely to involve the question of the validity of any Federal or Provincial Act it shall exercise that power

Section 225
Transfer of certain cases to High Court for trial

(2) An application for the purposes of this section shall not be made except in relation to a Federal Act by the Advocate General for the Federation and in relation to a Provincial Act by the Advocate-General for the Federation or the Advocate General for the Province

226—1) Until otherwise provided by Act of the appropriate Legislature no High Court shall have any original jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue or concerning any act ordered or done in the collection thereof according to the usage and practice of the country or the law for the time being in force

Jurisdiction in revenue matters

(2) A Bill or amendment for making such provision as aforesaid shall not be introduced into or moved in a Chamber of the Federal or a Provincial Legislature without the previous sanction of the Governor General in his discretion or as the case may be of the Governor in his discretion

227 All proceedings in every High Court shall be in the English language

Section 227
Proceedings of High Courts to be in English

228—1) The administrative expenses of a High Court including all salaries allowances and pensions payable to or in respect of the officers and servants of the court and the salaries and allowances of the judges of the Court shall be charged upon the revenues of the Province and any fees or other moneys taken by the court shall form part of those revenues

Section 228
Expenses of High Courts

(2) The Governor shall exercise his individual judgment as to the amount to be included in respect of such expenses as aforesaid in any estimates of expenditure laid by him before the Legislature

229—(1) His Majesty if the Chamber or Chambers of the Legislature of any Province present an address in that behalf to the Governor of the Province for submission to His Majesty may by letters patent constitute a High Court for that Province or any part thereof or reconstitute in like manner any existing High Court for that Province or for any part thereof or where there are two High Courts in that Province amalgamate those courts

Power of His Majesty to constitute or reconstitute High Court by letters patent

(2) Where any Court is reconstituted or two Courts are amalgamated, as aforesaid the letters patent shall provide for the continuance in their respective offices of the existing judges officers and servants of the Court or Courts and for the carrying on before the reconstituted Court or the new Court of all pending matters and may contain such other provisions as may appear to His Majesty to be necessary by reason of the reconstitution or amalgamation

Section 230
Extra provincial jurisdiction of High Courts

230—(1) His Majesty in Council may if satisfied that an agreement in that behalf has been made between the Governments concerned, extend the jurisdiction of a High Court in any Province to any area in British India not forming part of that Province and the High Court shall thereupon have the same jurisdiction in relation to that area as it has in relation to any other area in relation to which it exercises jurisdiction

Section 230

(2) Nothing in this section affects the provisions of any law or letters patent in force immediately before the commencement of Part III of this Act empowering any High Court to exercise jurisdiction in relation to more than one Province or in relation to a Province and an area not forming part of any Province

(3) Where a High Court exercises jurisdiction in relation to any area or areas outside the Province in which it has its principal seat nothing in this Act shall be construed—

- (a) as empowering the Legislature of the Province in which the Court has its principal seat to increase restrict or abolish that jurisdiction or
- (b) as preventing the Legislature having power to make laws in that behalf for any such area from passing such laws with respect to the jurisdiction of the court in relation to that area as it would be competent to pass if the principal seat of the court were in that area

Saving and definitions

231.—(1) Any judge appointed before the commencement of Part III of this Act to any High Court shall continue in office and shall be deemed to have been appointed under this Part of this Act but shall not by virtue of this Act be required to relinquish his office at any earlier age than he would have been required so to do if this Act had not been passed

(2) Where a High Court exercises jurisdiction in relation to more than one Province or in relation to a Province and an area not forming part of a Province references in this chapter to the Governor in relation to the judges and expenses of a High Court and references to the revenues of the Province shall be construed as references to the Governor and the revenues of the Province in which the Court has its principal seat and the reference to the approval by the Governor of rules forms and tables for subordinate courts shall be construed as a reference to the approval thereof by the Governor of the Province in which the subordinate court is situate or if it is situate in an area not forming part of a Province by the Governor General

' Order XXIV.

Suits relating to mortgages of immoveable property

I Subject to the provisions of this Code, in every suit on a mortgage for foreclosure, sale or redemption—
Parties to suits

(a) all persons having an interest in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption shall be joined as parties provided that a prior mortgagee need not be joined as a party to a suit relating to a subsequent mortgage except on application made by him in that behalf.

(f) the plaint shall include a statement of all persons who to the knowledge of the plaintiff are interested in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption, and

(c) the Court may direct that any party claiming any present remedy in respect of the mortgaged property shall prove his claim and have such remedy as may be included in the decree in the suit

2 In a suit by a mortgagee for foreclosure of a mortgage by conditional sale or an anomalous mortgage whose terms provide for this remedy if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall make an order as to which (if any) of the parties shall personally pay the costs of the suit and shall ascertain the amount due by the mortgagor to the plaintiff (a) for the redemption of the mortgaged property (i) for the costs of the suit (if any) payable by the mortgagor to the plaintiff and (c) for such costs charges and expenses if any and interest thereon as may be legally recoverable by the plaintiff from the mortgagor in respect of the mortgage deducting therefrom the costs charges and expenses if any legally recoverable by the mortgagor from the plaintiff in respect of the mortgage and the costs of the suit (if any) payable by the plaintiff to the mortgagor.

and the Court shall pass a preliminary decree declaring the amount so found due and further declaring that the plaintiff shall subject to the provisos hereunder stated be

Provided that—

(a) the mortgagor or any other party to the suit who has a right to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage may apply for and obtain a final decree for redemption on payment into Court of the amount so declared to be due on or before a date to be fixed by the preliminary decree (not being more than six months after the date of such decree) or such later date as the Court may substitute therefor on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court and on compliance with all orders of the Court and on payment of such further sums as the Court may determine to be payable under Rule 7, and

(b) in the case of an anomalous mortgage the Court may at the instance of any party to the suit pass a decree for sale as under Rule 3 in lieu of a decree for foreclosure

3 (1) In a suit by a mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall make an order as to which (if any) of the parties shall personally pay the costs of the suit and shall ascertain the amount due by the mortgagor to the plaintiff (a) for principal and interest on the mortgage (b) for the costs of the suit (if any) payable by the mortgagor to the plaintiff and (c) for such costs charges and expenses if any and interest thereon as may be legally recoverable by the plaintiff from the mortgagor in respect of the mortgage deducting from such sums the costs charges and expenses if any legally recoverable by the mortgagor from the plaintiff in respect of the mortgage and the costs of the suit (if any) payable by the plaintiff to the mortgagor

and the Court shall pass a preliminary decree declaring the amount so found due and further declaring that the plaintiff shall subject to the proviso hereunder stated be entitled to apply for and obtain a final decree for sale of the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof

Provided that the mortgagor or any other party to the suit who has a right to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage may apply for and obtain a final decree for redemption on payment into Court of the amount so found due on or before a date to be fixed by the preliminary decree (not being more than six months after the date of such decree) or such later date as the Court may substitute therefor on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court and on compliance with all orders of the Court and on payment of such further sums as the Court may determine to be payable under Rule 7

(2) In pursuance of a final decree for sale the property shall be sold as the Court may direct, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) shall subject to any orders made by the Court as to setting off the amount due against the purchase money, be paid into Court and applied in payment of the amount found due as aforesaid together with such further sums as the Court may determine to be payable under Rule 7.

Provided that at any time before the confirmation of the sale the mortgagor or any other party to the suit who has a right to redeem the plaintiff's mortgage may apply for and obtain a final order for redemption on payment into Court of the amount found due as aforesaid together with such further sums as the Court may determine to be payable under Rule 7, and a compensatory amount equal to five per cent of the purchase money (if any) paid into Court by the purchaser, which said compensatory amount shall be paid to the purchaser together with the said purchase money on his application

(3) Where there is included in the preliminary decree a declaration of the priorities of the parties to payment out of the proceeds of sale the Court shall (subject to the provisions of Sect on 61 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882) pass a final order for payment in accordance with such priorities provided that a mortgagee having priority over the plaintiff may (subject to the provisions of section 57 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882) elect that the property shall be sold subject to his mortgage

(4) Where the proceeds of the sale are not sufficient for the payment of the money due to the plaintiff or any other party to the suit, and the balance due to the plaintiff or such other party is legally recoverable by him from the mortgagor the Court shall, on application made in this behalf by the plaintiff or such other party, pass a decree against the mortgagor personally for the payment of such balance

(5) The provisions of this Rule shall, so far as may be, apply to every suit to enforce a charge in respect of which the Court may pass a decree for sale of the property charged

(6) In territories to which the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 has been extended, a mortgagee who has obtained a decree for payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under his mortgage shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by a suit for sale under this Rule and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in O 2 R 2

4 (1) In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall make an order as to which (if any) of the parties shall personally pay the costs of the suit, and shall ascertain the amount due by the plaintiff to the defendant (a) for principal and interest (if any) due on the mortgage, (b) for the costs of the suit (if any) payable by the plaintiff to the defendant and (c) for such costs, charges and expenses, if any, and interest thereon, as may be legally recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff in respect of the mortgage, deducting therefrom the costs, charges and expenses, if any, legally recoverable by the plaintiff from the defendant in respect of the mortgage and the costs of the suit (if any) payable by the defendant to the plaintiff

(2) If it appears that nothing is due to the defendant on the mortgage or that he has been overpaid, the Court shall pass a final decree for redemption directing further that the defendant shall pay to the plaintiff the amount (if any) overpaid with such interest thereon as the Court may deem reasonable

(3) If the account is in favour of the defendant the Court shall pass a preliminary decree declaring the amount found due by the plaintiff to the defendant, and further declaring that, on payment into Court of the said amount on or before a date to be fixed by the said decree (not being more than six months after the date of such decree) or such later date as the Court may substitute therefor on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court and on compliance with all orders of the Court and on payment of such further sums as the Court may determine to be payable under Rule 7 the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for and obtain a final decree directing the defendant to deliver to the plaintiff or to such person as the plaintiff appoints in this behalf the mortgaged property in the possession of the defendant and all documents in the possession or power of the defendant relating to the said property, and to execute and have registered (as required by the plaintiff and at the cost of the plaintiff) either (a) an acknowledgment in writing that all rights created by the mortgage have been extinguished or (b) a re transfer to the plaintiff or to such third person as he may direct of the property freed from the mortgage and from all encumbrances created by the defendant or by any person deriving title from him or where the defendant claims by derived title by those under whom he claims or (c) a transfer of the mortgage to such third person as the plaintiff may direct.

and further declaring that if the plaintiff fails to make full payment as aforesaid the defendant shall be entitled to apply for and obtain a final decree for sale of the property subject to the provisions of Rule 3 or a final decree for foreclosure subject to the provisions of Rule 2 where such remedy is legally available

5 Where in any suit on a mortgage a party other than the mortgagor claims to be Subrogation subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee the Court may, on the application of such party make an order declaring that the mortgage subsists for his benefit

6 In any decree passed in a suit for foreclosure sale or redemption, where interest Interest is legally recoverable, the Court may order payment of interest to the mortgagee as follows, namely—

(a) Interest up to the date on or before which payment of the amount declared due is under the preliminary decree to be made by the mortgagor or other person redeeming the mortgage—

(i) on the principal amount declared due on the mortgage—at the rate payable on the principal or, where no such rate is fixed, at such rate as the Court deems reasonable,

(ii) on the amount of the costs of the suit awarded to the mortgagee,—at such rate as the Court deems reasonable from the date of the preliminary decree, and

(iii) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee for costs, charges and expenses properly incurred in respect of the mortgage security up to the date of the preliminary decree—at the rate agreed between the parties or, failing such rate, at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or failing both such rates, at nine per cent per annum, and

(b) Subsequent interest up to the date of realization or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems reasonable—

(i) on the aggregate of the principal sums specified in Clause (a) and of the interest thereon as calculated in accordance with that Clause, and

1 Scope and object of the Rule

This rule entitles a trustee to represent the beneficiaries in all suits concerning properties vested in the trustee where the contention is between the beneficiaries and third persons¹ But the Rule is an enabling one and does not disentitle a person who happens to be a trustee from suing in his individual capacity at his option² Nor can it be construed to mean that for the purpose of suits under the Code of Civil Procedure no person who is not a party can be represented by any person who is not a trustee, executor or administrator³

In order that this rule may apply it is essential that

- (1) the suit should be concerning pr perty vested in the trustee, executor or administrator. A suit for a declaration of plaintiff's right to worship in a temple and for an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with such right is not a suit concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator and the rule will not apply to such a suit⁴
- (2) the contention in the suit must be between the beneficiaries and a third person, although the beneficiaries are unascertained or unascertainable persons⁵ or body of persons⁶ The rule does not apply where the contention is between the beneficiaries themselves or between the beneficiary and the trustee, executor or administrator⁷

Under section 43 of the Specific Relief Act 1877 a declaration granted in a suit in which any of the parties are trustees is binding on the beneficiaries

2 When beneficiaries may be added as parties

In suits by or against trustees, executors or administrators concerning property vested in them, it is not necessary that the beneficiaries should be impleaded as parties¹ But the Court may, if it thinks fit order them or any of them to be made parties. The beneficiaries may apply to be added as parties where there are reasonable grounds to suppose that their interest will not be sufficiently represented by the trustees or will be endangered unless they are made parties. Thus the beneficiaries can be added as parties where the trustee has no interest in the case or has an interest adverse to that of beneficiaries² or where the question in the suit is one of accounts and the trustee is the accounting party³ or where the beneficiaries are absolutely entitled to a major portion of the property and complain of breach of trust on the part of the trustee⁴ or where the interests of the beneficiaries are likely to be affected by their not being impleaded in the suit⁵. The trustee, executor or administrator may also apply in a proper case for adding the beneficiaries as parties for the purpose of appointing himself⁶ but the beneficiaries may come in only where there is a trust admitted or proved to exist where the factum that it is is in dispute the beneficiaries are not necessary parties⁷.

Where a beneficiary is added in a suit by or against trustees under this Rule it is not an addition to the addition or substitution of new plaintiff or defendant under the provisions of section 22 of Limitation Act⁸.

Where a decree has been obtained by a trustee under this Rule the beneficiary is entitled to sue for recovery of the benefit thereunder⁹.

R. 2. [S. 438] Where there are several trustees, executors or administrators they shall all be made parties to a suit against one or more of them:

Provided that the executors who have not proved their testator's will and trustees, executors and administrators outside British India, need not be made parties.

the will or all administrators should be made parties¹ If this has not been done, no decree can be passed against any of them² Where one of them is an infant a guardian ad litem must be appointed for him and properly served, otherwise the suit will be dismissed for defect of parties³ It has been held in the undermentioned cases that the rule applies only to suits, and not to applications, and that therefore it is competent for the Court to entertain an application for the appointment of a Receiver in a suit even though all proving executors are not made parties thereto The proviso to the rule clearly indicates that executors who have not proved their testators will need not be made parties⁴ But when an executor intermeddles with the estate⁵ or has acted as executor⁶ he may be made a party even if he has not proved the will

SUITS BY OR AGAINST MINORS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND

GENERAL

Synopsis

Suits by or against minors and persons	Not No 1	Applicability of the Order to execution proceedings	Note No 2

1 Suits by or against minors and persons of unsound mind

An infant is, in law regarded as of immature intelligence and capacity and owing to his want of capacity and judgment is disabled from binding himself except where it is for his benefit² Thus the law will as a general principle treat all acts of an infant which are for his benefit on the same footing as those of an adult but will not permit him to do anything prejudicial to his own interests³ This principle regulates not only the infant's capacity to aquire and dispose of property but also his capacity in reference to legal proceedings instituted by or against him⁴ Thus a decree of a court in favour of a minor without his being represented by a next friend in the suit is not a nullity whereas no effectual or valid decree can be passed against a minor without his being represented by a proper next friend *ad litem*⁵ A minor who is a party to a suit is considered to be under the protection of the Court and it is consequently the duty of the Court to watch his interests vigilantly and to see that he is represented by a proper person⁶

Persons who are of unsound mind or are suffering from mental infirmity are thereby in a state of incapacity of protecting their interests and are placed on the same footing as minors for the purposes of legal proceedings by or against them

This order has been made applicable to proceedings under the Ganjam and Vizagapatnam Act (XXIV of 1839) (see R 20) and to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act [see Act VI of 1908 S 265 (3)]

2 Applicability of the Order to execution proceedings

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this order directly applies to execution proceedings According to one view this order applies only to suits and not directly to execution proceedings and therefore the fact that no guardian ad litem is appointed for a minor party in such proceedings will not vitiate the proceedings if, in substance, his interests were represented by the other parties on the record¹ and if no injury has resulted to him by such non-representation² Another view is that proceedings in execution are a continuation of the suit that this Order applies to such proceedings³ and that a compromise entered into by the guardian in execution proceedings is not binding on the minor if no sanction is required by Rule 7 is obtained therefor. It is submitted that this last view is correct. As pointed out by Wallis C. J., in *Muthiah Chettiar v. Krishna Doss Varu*⁵ the Code expressly provides by O 22 R 12 that nothing in Rr 3, 4 and 8 of that order shall apply to execution proceedings and in O 23 R 4 that nothing in that order shall apply to execution proceedings while it contains no such provision in O 32. It would appear to follow from this that the Code has been drafted on the basis that an application for execution is a proceeding in a suit.

1 Scope and object of the Rule

This rule provides that every suit by a minor plaintiff shall be brought in his name by a next friend.¹ The reason why no proceedings can be taken by a infant without the assistance of a next friend is on account of the infant's supposed want of discretion and his inability to bind himself and make himself liable for costs. But the minor is the real plaintiff, the next friend is no party to the suit in the proper sense of the term. He only represents the minor's interest and acts for him. In the course of such representation he can choose his own solicitor or even change him although he is under an obligation not to make an appointment which would be detrimental to the interests of the minor.²

Though the word "shall" is used in the rule a suit by a minor without a next friend should not normally be treated as abortive but an opportunity should be given to constitute the suit in the regular manner.³ In Doorga M'har D. v. Tahur M'har 11 I. L. R. 22 (A. 190) Sale J. observed: "It would seem that the rule was intended for the protection and benefit of defendants for it has been held that when a defendant waives this benefit and permits the suit to proceed without a next friend." See Note 3 to Rule 2 following.

The rule does not provide for suits by or on behalf of idols. On the analogy of this rule however it has been held that the Manager or the Shikari of an idol can sue on behalf of the idol which is considered to be a perpetual minor in the eye of the law.⁴

2 Minor who is

Under section 3 of the Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875) every person domiciled in British India shall be deemed to have attained majority when he shall have completed his age of 18 years and not before. But if before the expiry of the age of 18 a guardian for the person or for the property or for both of the minor has been appointed or declared by a Court of Justice (apart from the provisions of Order 32 of the Code) or the minor's property is taken charge of by a Court of Wards then the period of minority is extended till the completion of the age of 21.¹

3 When a minor may sue without a next friend

Under Section 32 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), a minor may institute a suit for any sum of money not exceeding 300 rupees which may be due to him under S. 70 of the Contract Act, 1872, for wages of piecework or for work as a servant, in the same manner as if he were of full age.

4 Minor suing as adult—See Note 2 to the next Rule

5 Suit on behalf of an alleged minor who is not a minor in fact

Supposing a suit is filed through a next friend on the allegation that the plaintiff is a minor and it is subsequently found that the plaintiff was in fact a major even on the date of the suit, what is the proper procedure to be followed in such a case? The High Court of Allahabad in the undermentioned cases held that the suit should be dismissed the reason given being that there is no valid plaint before the Court. This view has, however, been overruled by a Special Bench decision of the same High Court which holds that where the mistake in filing suit is due to a bona fide doubt as regards the age of the minor, the defect is a formal one not affecting the merits of the case and can be cured by amendment.² The High Courts of Calcutta,³ Lahore,⁴ Madras,⁵ the Chief Court of Oudh and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur have all held that the defect in such a case can be remedied by amending the plaint and by removing the next friend.

6 Where question of minority is in dispute

Disputes as to the question of minority may arise—

- (a) where the defendant who is sued as a major pleads that he is a minor. In such cases a preliminary issue should be framed for the purpose of deciding the plea of minority, and for the trial on this issue a guardian ad litem should be appointed for the alleged minor. See also Note 4 to R. 3 infra.
- (b) Where the plaintiff sues as a major without a next friend and the defendant pleads that he is a minor, in such a case the procedure prescribed by rule 2 should be followed.

7 Objection in appeal to authority of next friend

If the minor plaintiff has the right to sue objection as to the want of a defect in the authority of the next friend is not fatal to the suit and cannot be raised for the first time in appeal. Such a defect does not affect the merits of the case and comes within the purview of Section 99 of the Code.

8 Title of suit

In a suit by the minor plaintiff, the title and description of the minor should be A a minor by his next friend Y, versus A B, defendant. Similarly when the minor is the defendant he should be described as X, a minor by guardian ad litem Y. But a defect or misdescription in title as for instance where the mother of the minor plaintiff describes herself as J for herself and as guardian of her minor daughter S, is not fatal to the suit. The defect is a formal one and cannot afford a ground per se for interference on appeal.

9 Liability of next friend for costs

The words "and may be ordered to pay any costs in the suit as if he were the plaintiff" occurring in the corresponding section 440 of the old Code have been omitted. But the omission does not affect the discretion of the Court in proper cases to order the next friend to be personally liable for costs as for example when it finds that the suit was instituted by him without bona fides or where the suit is dismissed and the Court is not satisfied that the suit was instituted for the benefit of the minor. Where, however, the Court finds that there were reasonable grounds for filing the suit and the next friend has been bona fide in his conduct, it will direct the costs to come out of the minor's estate.

Save in exceptional cases neither the infant plaintiff nor the next friend ought to be required to give security for costs.⁴ Where on the death of a deceased creditor, his minor legal representative demands the debt, the debtor is entitled to refuse to pay until his interests are safeguarded by the production of a succession certificate or of a probate or Letters of Administration, where the minor in such a case sues the debtor for the amount, the defendant is not liable for the costs of the suit.⁵

10 Effect of decree in suits by minors

If a minor is properly represented by the next friend and there is no fraud or collusion or gross negligence on his part, the decree passed in the suit is binding on the minor as on an adult and will operate as res judicata.¹ See also Note 13 to R 3, infra and Note 69 to S 11, ante

11 Estoppel

A Court of Equity will deprive a fraudulent minor of the benefit of the plea of infancy when by his conduct or representation he induces others to believe that he is a major. Thus where a minor, representing himself to be of full age collects rents and grants receipts¹ or where he executes a registered sale-deed representing himself to be a major² he will be estopped from filing a suit through a next friend questioning the validity of those transactions. But the person relying upon the plea of estoppel must himself come with clean hands and prove not only that fraud was practised upon him by the minor but that he was deceived into action by such fraud.³ In other words there can be no estoppel when the truth (of minority) is known to both the parties.⁴

12 Limitation

As already pointed out in Note 1, the suit though filed by the next friend is really that of the minor plaintiff and is governed by the law of limitation applicable to the minor.¹ He is entitled to the exemption prescribed by sections 6 and 7 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908).²

13 Attorney's costs

The costs incurred by the attorney or solicitor of the guardian or next friend of a minor party in properly prosecuting or defending the suit are recoverable from the estate of the minor as "necessaries" under section 68 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872).¹ The High Court of Madras has, however, held that, where a suit instituted on behalf of a minor, is repudiated by him on his attaining majority pending the suit, and the suit is dismissed, the solicitor cannot recover his costs from the estate of the quandam minor but can proceed against the next friend personally.² But in any case the attorney is entitled only to a charge on the minor's estate and cannot get a personal decree against the infant.³

1 Scope of the Rule

Where a minor sues without a next friend the defendant can under this Rule apply to have the plaint taken off the file. But even without any such application the Court is bound to take notice of the minority of the plaintiff if the same is disclosed in the course of the trial and suspend all proceedings in the suit until the defect is remedied by the minor getting himself properly represented by a next friend.¹

Where there is a certificated guardian appointed for a minor under the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) but a suit is filed by a third person on behalf of the minor it has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the suit should be considered to be filed by the minor without a next friend and should be taken off the file.²

2 Suit by minor without a next friend

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that this Rule applies only to cases where the fact of minority is apparent on the face of the plaint and that the rule does not contemplate an inquiry into the question of minority where the plaint prima facie shows that the plaintiff is a major.³ In the latter case where on enquiry the plaintiff is actually found to be a minor the proper procedure according to that Court is to suspend all proceedings and to allow sufficient time to enable the minor to have himself properly represented in the suit by a next friend. If the Court purports to act under this rule and takes the plaint off the file the order must be treated as a decree dismissing the suit or an order rejecting the plaint in both of which cases an appeal will lie.⁴ On the other hand the High Court of Bombay has held that this rule applies even to cases where the fact of minority is disclosed on enquiry but that the Court should as a matter of practice stay proceedings and allow sufficient time to enable the minor plaintiff to be represented by a next friend unless the plaintiff instituted the suit with the knowledge of the fact of minority and with the intention of deceiving the Court and of evading the payment of costs in the event of failure in which case the suit should be taken off the file.⁵ The High Courts of Lahore⁶ and Madras and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Oudh⁷ have taken the same view.

In any view where the plaintiff attains majority by the time of the enquiry as to his minority there is no necessity for an amendment inasmuch as he can elect to proceed with the suit.⁷

3 Waiver of objection by defendant

Where a defendant against whom a suit is instituted by a minor is a next friend of the plaintiff and elects to proceed to trial and take the chance of obtaining a decree in his favour on the merits without raising any objection under this rule he cannot be allowed for the first time in appeal when the trial has gone against him to contend that the suit is not maintainable owing to the minority of the plaintiff. The decree passed in such a case is not a nullity. The non representation of the minor by a next friend is only an irregularity capable of being waived by the defendant.⁸

On the same principle it has been held that where on objection taken by the defendant a next friend is appointed for the plaintiff, the defendant cannot object in appeal that the suit was originally filed without a next friend and was therefore not maintainable.⁹

4 Costs

Where the plaintiff is found to be a minor and the plaint is consequently directed to be taken off the file of the Court costs should not be ordered to be recovered from the estate of the minor; the pleader or other person procuring the plaint should be made liable therefor.¹⁰

1 Scope and object of the rule

The object of the rule is to see that the minor's interest does not suffer and that he is properly represented in a suit filed against him.¹ The Court cannot, therefore, be too jealous in observing the requirements of the law in regard to infants and in seeing that their interests are properly safeguarded. It should be satisfied not merely that the proposed guardian is a fit and proper person to act as guardian but also that he has no interest, directly or indirectly, adverse to the minor.² As to the applicability of the rule to proceedings other than suits—see the undermentioned cases:

2 Shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit

The provisions of the rule are mandatory and the Court is bound to appoint a proper guardian for a minor defendant.³ The appointment is not a mere matter of form. The Court is bound to satisfy itself that the proposed guardian is a fit and proper person to represent the interests of the minor.⁴ A decree obtained against a minor without appointing a guardian for him as required by this rule is nullity (see Note 5, infra). The principle that the manager of a joint Hindu family represents in litigation the other members including minor co-parceners does not apply when minors are made parties to a suit, the Court is, therefore, bound to appoint a guardian for the minor defendant even though the managing member of the family of which such minor is a member is a co-defendant.⁵

But the fact that the validity of the proceedings depends upon the appointment of a proper guardian for a minor defendant does not mean that for purposes of limitation a suit is not validly filed until a guardian ad litem is appointed for the minor: the institution of a suit is complete and saves limitation even though the further progress of the suit depends upon the appointment of a suitable guardian.⁶

2 A Title of suit against minor

In a suit against a minor the minor should himself be made, and described as a defendant, some other person being named as guardian. Thus a suit against CD a minor, should describe him as "CD, a minor, of whom EF is guardian ad litem."

3 On being satisfied of the fact of his minority See the under-mentioned case.

4 When defendant pleads minority

When a defendant who is sued as a minor pleads that he is a minor, the proper procedure is to raise a preliminary issue on the question of his minority and give a finding thereon. In the proceedings for the determination of such issue however the alleged minor should be represented by a guardian ad litem appointed by the Court. If it is found that the defendant is in fact a minor then a guardian should be appointed for the suit. If not, the guardian appointed for the enquiry should cease to act. On the analogy of this principle it has been held that where a minor applies to be brought on record as the legal representative of a deceased party the Court ought to appoint a guardian for the purpose of the enquiry as to his being the legal representative.

5 Non representation

A minor cannot be considered to be a party to a suit unless he is represented therein by a duly qualified guardian. A decree passed against a minor not so represented must be regarded as a decree passed against a person not a party to the suit and is, therefore without jurisdiction null and void. In order to set aside such a decree it is not necessary to show that the minor has suffered any prejudice by non representation? It is not, however, necessary to set aside such a decree. The minor may ignore or disregard the decree. Not being a party to the suit the minor will not be barred by the principle of res judicata from raising the same questions in a subsequent suit as were decided in the prior suit.³ On the same principle their Lordships of the Privy Council have held in Rashid un nissa v Muhammad Ismail, I L R 31 All 572 that a minor not represented in the suit cannot in execution object to the execution of the decree.⁴ Their Lordships observed as follows:—Section 244 (now S 47) of the Civil Procedure Code applies to questions arising between parties to the suit in which the decree was passed that is to say between parties who were properly made parties in accordance with the provisions of the Code. It will also follow from this that a minor not properly represented in the suit and against whom an ex parte decree has been passed cannot apply under O 9 R 13 to set aside the ex parte decree inasmuch as under that rule only a defendant, that is a person properly made a defendant can apply. This is the view of the High Court of Madras⁵ and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Nagpur.⁶ The High Court of Allahabad⁷ and the Chief Court of Oudh⁸ have however held that such an application is maintainable. In view of the Privy Council decision mentioned above it is submitted that the latter view is not correct.

Where an incompetent or disqualified guardian is appointed for a minor party the position is the same as if no guardian is appointed at all.⁹ As to when a guardian ad litem can be regarded as a disqualified person and when not see Notes 4 to 8 to R 4 infra.

Where a minor is represented in the suit by a duly qualified guardian he becomes legally a party to the suit and the Court acquires jurisdiction to decide his case.¹⁰ The decree passed against him in such a case is binding on him as much as on an adult and the judgment will operate as res judicata against him in subsequent proceedings.¹¹ The law however recognises a

3. substantive right in him to avoid the decree so passed if he can establish that the guardian has been grossly negligent in the conduct of the suit and if he suffered prejudice by reason of such negligence. The minor can exercise this right in various ways —

- (1) If the decree is an ex parte one, he may apply under O 9, R 13 to set aside the ex parte decree. The negligence of the guardian may constitute a sufficient cause for setting aside the decree within the meaning of that rule 12.
- (2) He may prefer an appeal from the decree 12a.
- (3) He may apply for a review of the judgment 12a.
- (4) He may file a suit to set aside the decree 13.
- (5) He may even, in defence, show that the decree is not binding on him on the ground of gross negligence of the guardian and consequent prejudice 14.

Where a decree is set aside on the ground of non-representation or on the ground of gross negligence of the guardian in the conduct of the suit, the minor is remitted to his original rights as it stood before the decree, and the Court, can, under its inherent powers, revive the first suit and proceed with it from the stage at which it was declared that the proceedings were illegal as against the minor 15.

6 Absence of formal order of appointment of guardian—Substantial representation

Where a minor defendant is effectively represented by a guardian with the sanction of the Court the mere fact that a formal order of appointment was not passed will not render the decree a nullity as in the case of non-representation. The absence of the order of appointment is only an irregularity which in the absence of any prejudice to the minor resulting therefrom, will not be a ground for setting aside the decree ¹. On the same principle it has

8 Decree against major treating him as minor and vice versa

A major defendant who is described and impleaded as a minor or a minor who is treated as a major and impleaded as such cannot be treated as a party to the suit and is not bound by the decree passed in the suit. But if the major defendant is aware of the defect or takes part in the proceedings without objection he will be estopped from questioning the validity of the decree later on.

9 Such application shall be supported by affidavit—Sub clause (3)

An application for the appointment of a guardian should be supported by an affidavit stating the fact of minority of the defendant and that the proposed guardian is a fit person to be appointed as guardian. The Court must be satisfied that the person it appoints will safeguard the interests of the minor and that he has no interest of his own which will come into conflict with that of the minor. But as already pointed out in Note 7 the absence of such an affidavit is only an irregularity and cannot render the decree invalid.²

See sub-R (3) of R 3 substituted by the Madras High Court as to the contents of the affidavit in support of a petition under this rule.

10 Service of Summons

There is no specific mode provided for the service of summons on a minor defendant. It should therefore be served in the manner prescribed for service of summons under O 5 ante.¹ Where however a guardian has been appointed in the suit for the minor notice of an appeal from a decree in that suit need only be served on the guardian.²

11 Notice to the minor and his guardian

No order should be made under this rule appointing a guardian for a minor defendant unless and until the necessary notices are given to the persons referred to in the rule.¹ The object of giving a notice to the minor is twofold: he may not be a minor at all in which case he may come to Court and defend

1 Legislative changes

Sub R (1) corresponds to Ss 445 and 457 of the old Code and sub R (2) to Ss 440 and 443 second paragraph. Sub R (3) is new. Sub R (4) corresponds to the second paragraph of S 456 of the old Code. The provision as to the direction with regard to the costs to be incurred by the Court guardian is new.

2 Scope of the Rule

This Rule deals with the question as to who can act as next friend or be appointed as guardian of a minor for the suit. The general rule is that any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may so act or be so appointed, provided his interests are not adverse to that of the minor (sub-Rule 1).¹ Where there is a certified guardian for the minor, it is he that should be allowed to act as next friend or be appointed as guardian and not any other person unless it is for the welfare of the minor that another person should be appointed (sub-R 2). Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian, the Court may appoint its own officer to act as guardian (sub R 3).

The powers of the Court under this Rule and R 11 of this Order are exercisable by the Registrar under S 105 of Sch I of the Rangoon Small Cause Courts Act (VII of 1920).

3 Who may be next friend or guardian of a minor

Any person can be the next friend or the guardian of a minor, provided:—

- (1) he is not of unsound mind
- (2) he is himself not a minor,^{1a}
- (3) his interests are not adverse to that of the minor^{1b} and,
- (4) he is not the opposite party, i e, a defendant in the case of a next friend or a plaintiff in the case of a guardian

Provided these conditions are satisfied the mere fact that he happens to be an undischarged insolvent will not invalidate his appointment as a guardian²

4 Married woman

Under S 457 of the Code of 1882 a married woman was disqualified from being appointed as guardian ad litem in a suit. Consequently it was held that a decree obtained against a minor with a married woman as his guardian was a nullity.¹ But it was held that the prohibition did not apply to the case of a next friend and that a married woman could validly represent a minor plaintiff.² Under the present rule the disqualification has been removed altogether so that a married woman can now represent the minor plaintiff as well as a defendant.

5 Persons with adverse interest

The proviso to sub-R (1) prohibits the appointment of a guardian ad litem whose interests are adverse to that of the minor. Such a person is disqualified to be the guardian of the minor.¹ A minor represented by such a person is not legally represented at all and a decree obtained against him will be a nullity.² In the undermentioned cases,³ however it was held by the High Court of Madras that the mere fact that the interest of the guardian was adverse to that of the minor is not sufficient to invalidate the decree passed against the minor, but that the minor should be shown to have suffered prejudice by such appointment. The decisions do not advert to the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Rashid Unnissa v. Muhammad Ismail, I L R 31 All 572, in which it is laid down that a person having an interest adverse to that of the minor is a disqualified person and that the minor cannot be deemed to have been legally represented by him. The said decisions cannot, therefore, be considered to be correct.

The question whether the interests of the guardian are adverse to that of the minor depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a person who has executed a document or entered into a transaction on behalf of the minor is a person whose interests are adverse to that of the minor in a suit on that document or transaction. According to the High Courts of Allahabad⁴ and Patna⁵ his interests are adverse and he cannot therefore be appointed as guardian of the minor. According to the High Court of Madras,⁶ and the Chief Court of Oudha⁷ his interests are not necessarily adverse to that of the minor in all cases, but whether they are so in any particular case depends upon the facts of that case.

6 Guardian appointed by competent authority

Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by a competent authority, the Court is bound to appoint that guardian as guardian ad litem of the minor unless for reasons to be recorded it considers that in the interest and welfare of the minor some one else should be appointed. According to the High Courts of Allahabad,² Calcutta,³ and Patna,⁴ the violation of this provision is only an irregularity and does not, by itself, vitiate the decree. Thus where the mother of certain minor defendants was appointed their guardian ad litem in ignorance of the fact that there was a certificated guardian, it was held that the decree could not be set aside in the absence of any proof of prejudice to the minors.⁵ The High Court of Madras⁶ has, on the other hand held that in such a case the appointment is illegal and the decree obtained against the minor, void.

The words 'appointed by competent authority' do not include the case of a Hindu father purporting to appoint a testamentary guardian to his son even assuming that he has the power to appoint a guardian under the general Hindu Law.⁷

7. 'Another person be permitted to act'

A Court can in the interests of the minor permit a person other than the certificated guardian to act or appoint him as a guardian ad litem of the minor notwithstanding the existence of a certificated guardian. Thus where the appointment or the identity of the certificated guardian is not known¹ the Court may appoint another person as guardian ad litem of the minor.

8 Appointment of person as guardian without his consent

Sub-Rule (3) controls both Sub-R (1) and Sub-R (2)¹ and provides that no person, shall, without his consent, be appointed guardian for the suit. The consent may, however, be express or implied.² The object of the rule is to safeguard the interests of the minor by ensuring that the guardian has taken upon himself the onerous duty of defending the interests of the minor.² Where a person is appointed guardian of a minor without his consent express or implied there is a conflict of opinion as to whether the decree passed must be deemed to be one passed against the minor who has not been represented in the suit and to be therefore a nullity. The High Courts of Allahabad and Calcutta have held that the decree passed under such circumstances is a nullity. The High Courts of Madras and Patna have expressed conflicting opinions on this point, holding in some cases that it is a nullity,⁴ and in others that it is only an irregularity which, in the absence of proof of prejudice to the minor will not vitiate the decree.⁵ It is submitted that the last view is correct. As has been seen in Note 5 to R. 3, ante, where, on the face of the record the minor is represented by a person and such person is not disqualified to be a guardian the Court has jurisdiction to deal with the suit against the minor and the non compliance with the various requirements in the process of appointing the guardian cannot render the judgment a nullity, but would only amount to irregularities which may be grounds for setting aside the decrees in proper proceedings on proof of prejudice to the minor.⁶

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the consent of a guardian cannot be presumed merely from the fact that a notice under O 21, R 22 has been issued to him.⁷ The Chief Court of Oudh has also held that a person who is named as guardian but who does not appear in the suit cannot be said to have consented to be appointed as guardian.⁸ Where, however, the guardian has had an opportunity to object to his appointment and does not do so, the consent, according to the Allahabad High Court, can be presumed.⁹ See also the amendments to this rule made by the various High Courts.

Where a Court guardian is appointed the Court may provide for the payment of the costs to be incurred by him in conducting the proceedings on behalf of the minor⁶ Where the Court guardian is not put in possession of any funds for defending the suit with the result that defences open to the minor are not raised the decree can be avoided by the minor in appropriate proceedings⁷

10 Wishes of the minor if should be considered

The wishes of the minor should, if possible be considered and given due weight in the matter of the appointment of a person as his next friend¹ or guardian *ad litem*² This is the reason why notice is to be given to the minor See Note 11 to R 3

11 Probate proceedings—See Note 14 to R 3 supra

12 Leave to sue or defend on behalf of a minor

Under the present rule leave to sue or defend is necessary only in cases where there is already a guardian for the minor appointed or declared by a competent authority and some other person wishes to represent the minor as the next friend or guardian ad litem But the absence of a formal order granting leave to sue is not necessarily fatal to the suit¹

For cases under the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1858) and the Bombay Minors Act (XX of 1864) (both of them now repealed by Act VIII of 1890) the provisions whereof required the granting of a permission or a certificate to sue on behalf of the minor, see the following cases²

1. Who may apply.

Sub-R 1 of the rule enacts that every application on behalf of a minor other than an application under R 10 sub-R 2 shall be made by his next friend or guardian. An application by a guardian who has been di-charged by the Court is thus not valid and ought to be rejected.¹ Where before a guardian is appointed for a minor defendant in a suit it was found necessary to apply for the transfer of the suit to another Court it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the next friend of the minor could make such an application on behalf of the minor plaintiff.²

2 Effect of an application without a next friend or guardian

It has been seen in Note 5 to R. 3 above that where a minor is not represented in a suit the decree passed against him is a nullity. On the same principle an order made on an application without the minor being properly represented therein by a next friend or guardian does not bind the minor. Sub-R. 2 provides that such an order may be discharged.

3 Appointment of guardian ad litem how long continues

Where a guardian ad litem has once been appointed his appointment endures for the whole of the lis in all its ramifications unless and until it is revoked by the Court or the guardian dies or retires.¹ The appointment continues for purposes of execution² and appeal.³

It has been held that the Deputy Registrar of the High Court who has been appointed guardian ad litem ceases to represent the minor as soon as the appeal to the Privy Council is admitted although he can represent the minor in an application for leave to appeal.⁴

4 Pleader's liability for costs

Where the pleader representing the minor knew or might have known, of the fact of minority and yet files an application without a next friend or guardian he is liable to be saddled with the costs to the opposite party.¹

5 Suit for custody of minor

This rule does not apply to a suit for the custody of a minor. It is not necessary in such a suit that the minor should be separately represented.¹

1-A The object and applicability of the Rule

This rule as well as rule 7 infra are based upon the general principle of law that an infant litigant becomes the ward of the Court and the Court has got the right and also the duty to see that the guardians act properly, and bona fide in the interests of the minors and that no suits are instituted or carried on by them for their own benefit only irrespective of the benefit of the minors.

This rule does not in any way control the substantive provisions of law contained in S 194 of the Indian Succession Act of 1925.

1 Joint Hindu family—Right of manager to withdraw money or give discharge

It was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ganesh Rao v Tulsi Ram Rao (1913) 1 L R 36 Mad 295, that where the managing member of a joint Hindu family is himself the next friend or guardian of a minor party his powers are controlled by the provisions of the law and he cannot do any act in his capacity of father or managing member which he is debarred from doing as next friend or guardian without leave of the Court. According to the High Court of Madras these observations apply equally to cases coming under this rule and the karta, who represents minor parties to the suit as their next friend or guardian cannot without leave of the Court under this rule, give a valid discharge of the decree or withdraw any monies deposited by the judgment debtor for the benefit of the minor members. A contrary view was taken in the undermentioned cases, one of which was before the date of the decision of the Privy Council in Ganesha Row's case and the other, though decided after the decision of Ganesha Row's case, did not advert to it. It is submitted that they are not correct.

But the rule will not apply where the managing member is not the next friend or guardian of the minor party. His right to give a discharge on behalf of the family under the Hindu Law is not affected by this rule. According to the High Court of Bombay where the decree itself dispenses with the separate application and sanction which might be necessary under this rule and allows the manager to receive the amount so long as he furnishes security the latter can give a valid discharge without the leave of the Court under this rule.

2 Payment to next friend without leave

A payment made by the judgment-debtor to the next friend or guardian without the leave of the Court under this rule is not a valid payment and will not prevent the decree from being regarded as a subsisting one.

3 Security for protection of minor's property

The fact that the next friend or guardian is the manager of a joint Hindu family does not exempt him from giving security under sub-R. 2¹ The bond should be duly stamped and affixed with Court-fee stamp as required by Art. 6 Sch. II of the Court Fees Act.

As to the manner in which security given under this rule may be enforced see Note 6-A to S. 145 supra.

2 Scope and object of the Rule

This Rule as well as the other Rules of this Order are enacted for the protection of minors who are unable to look after their own interests and to whom the Court stands in a quasi tutelary position. The guardians and next friends are not invariably honest and even if honest are sometimes careless and occasionally lacking in intelligence. Therefore the duty of safeguarding the interest of the minors so far as is practicable, is thrown upon the Court.¹

The rule forbids the next friend or guardian to enter into agreement or compromise on behalf of the minor without the express leave of the Court and by implication requires the Court to consider in the exercise of its judicial discretion the propriety of the same in the interests of the minor.² But the rule applies only where the minor is a party to a pending suit and not to a case where his interests may be affected by reason of a compromise in a suit to which he is not a party.³ Nor can a person other than the next friend or guardian compromise the suit on behalf of the minor.⁴

No application for leave is necessary to negotiate the particular terms of a compromise,⁵ but such an application is necessary to enter into a compromise. Where such an application is made, the Court will, having regard to the interests of the minor pass a decree in terms thereof under O 23, R 3,^{6a} unless the guardian withdraws his consent or refuses to assent to the compromise before the Court passes the decree.⁷ The reason is that the Court cannot force a compromise upon the minor against the wishes of his guardian.⁸ But if it appears to the Court that the guardian is acting improperly in refusing to assent to a compromise which is prima facie beneficial to the minor, the Court can, in the interests of the minor, remove the guardian and appoint another.⁹

Sub R 2 contemplates the case of a minor on one side ranged against adults on the other. It has no reference to the effect of any compromise between adults alone although the minor may be a party to the suit. A compromise between adults is governed by the general law and not by this rule.⁹

The rule applies to compromises by all guardians including a certificated guardian¹⁰ and a natural guardian. As regards the applicability of the provisions of this rule to other proceedings, see the following cases 11

3 Without the leave of the Court expressly recorded

The requirement as to leave of the Court is based on the principle that a suit relating to the estate of an infant and for his benefit has the effect of making him a ward of the Court and no act can be done affecting the property of the minor unless under the express direction of the Court.¹ The leave of the Court should be express in all cases and cannot be implied from the mere fact that a decree has been passed by the Court adopting the terms of the compromise.² As pointed out by Lord Macnaghten in Manohar Lal v Jadunath Singh (1906) 1 L R 28 All 585 (P C)

There ought to be evidence that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that the minor was a party to the compromise and it ought to be shown by an order on petition or in some way not open to doubt that the leave of the Court was obtained."

The fact that the minor is described as such in the title of the suit and that the terms of the compromise are before the Court is not enough.⁴

The Court should before granting leave exercise a judicial discretion as to the propriety of the compromise in the interests of the minor.⁵ In other words, the Court must have materials before it to satisfy its mind that the proposed compromise is for the benefit of the minor.⁶ No compromise involving an apparent surrender of the infant's rights ought to be sanctioned by Courts.⁷ No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what particular materials a Judge may call for before being satisfied that the compromise is in the interests and for the benefit of the minor. It is a matter for the exercise of judicial discretion in each case. It has been held that an affidavit by the guardian setting forth the terms of the compromise and how he considers them beneficial to the minor should be filed. In heavy cases there should also be an opinion of the counsel or a statement by the counsel at the bar that the compromise is a fit and proper one to be sanctioned in the interest of the minor.⁹ In the undermentioned case¹⁰ their Lordships of the Judicial Committee called for a certificate from the High Court as regards the propriety of a compromise on behalf of a minor before sanctioning the same observing that there should be a clear expression of opinion by the proper Court in India that such a compromise is beneficial one to the minor. There is a conflict of judicial opinion as to the form and nature of the order granting leave to compromise under this rule. In Kalavati v. Chedi Lahu the High Court of Allahabad held that

The Court should record the fact that such application was made to it that the terms of the proposed agreement or compromise were considered by the Court and that having regard to the interests of the minor the Court granted leave to the making of the agreement or compromise.

The High Court of Madras in the undermentioned case¹² also expressed a similar view and held that the order should in terms state that the question of benefit to the minor was considered by the Court. But in a later case¹³ the same High Court however, dissented from that view and held that the order need not on the face of it state in so many words that the Court had considered and come to the conclusion that the settlement was for the minor's benefit and that a mere order on the petition saying granted implied that the Court had applied its mind to the matter. In *Virupax v. Shuddappa*¹⁴ Sir Lawrence Jenkins C. J. expressed the view that the form of expression used for indicating that the Court granted the leave is of slight importance provided the Court really after a consideration of the circumstances intended to grant the required leave but Chandavarkar J. disagreed with this view and held that a mere order of the Court saying granted was not a sufficient compliance with the rule. The High Court of Calcutta has expressed conflicting opinions on this point some decisions¹⁵ following the earlier Madras case, while the case cited below¹⁶ proceeds upon a reasoning similar to that of the later Madras case. The High Courts of Lahore¹⁷ and Patna¹⁸ also hold the same view as that of the later Madras case.

4 Where leave is granted under a mistake

A compromise is only a contract and if entered into under a misapprehension as to material facts or brought about by the mistake of the parties and of the Court with regard to the subject-matter of the suit² is not valid and binding upon the minor even though sanctioned by the Court. See also S. 20 of the Contract Act.

Madras and Patna and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Oudh no prejudice need be shown. The High Courts of Allahabad and Lahore have on the other hand held that it is necessary for the minor to establish that he has been prejudiced by the decree before setting it aside. It is submitted that this latter view is not correct. Where the next friend or guardian has himself not consented to the compromise on behalf of the minor the compromise is of course void in toto.

6 Bond executed by minor and an adult in pursuance of a compromise without the leave of Court

Where a compromise is entered into without the leave of the Court and in pursuance thereof a minor defendant and an adult party jointly execute a bond the bond cannot be enforced as against the minor. But the adult co-obligee cannot be exonerated from liability owing to the failure to obtain leave to compromise on behalf of the minor.

7 Compromise by natural guardian father or managing member of a joint Hindu family.

A father or managing member in a joint Hindu family may in certain circumstances and subject to certain conditions enter into agreements which may be binding on the minor members of the family. But, as pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Ganesha Row v Tulja Ram Row [(1913) 1 L R 36 Mad 295 (P C)] when in a suit in which the minor is a party, the father or managing member is appointed the next friend or guardian of the minor his powers are controlled by the provisions of the law and he cannot do any act in his capacity as father or managing member which he is debarred from doing as next friend or guardian without the leave of the Court. To hold otherwise their Lordships observed, would be to defeat the object of the enactment. The same principle will apply to the case of a natural guardian of the minor dealing with minor's interests.

minor members thereof : But if the karnavan or adult member happens to be the guardian ad litem or next friend of the minor in a suit then on the principles mentioned in Note 7 above, leave of the Court is necessary before he can enter into a compromise binding on the minor

8 a Compromise by adult members of a joint Hindu family

In Rameshwar Prasad v. Ram Bahadur Singh (1907, 1 L R 34 Cal 70, P C) their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that where a compromise was entered into by the adult co-parceners in a joint Hindu family in a pending litigation in which the minor co-parcener had no interest separate from that of the adult members of the family and the Court pronounced the compromise beneficial to the minor, the compromise was binding on the minor

9 Compromise by the Court of Wards on behalf of the ward

It has been held that in cases coming under the Bengal Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879) no leave of the Court is necessary for entering into a compromise on behalf of the minor : The reason is that S 51 of that Act makes it obligatory on the Civil Court to recognise the Court of Wards as the next friend or the guardian as the case may be in a suit by or against the minor Further S 18 of that Act itself gives power to the Court of Wards to enter into a compromise on behalf of the ward Rule 16 of this Order also contains a saving clause in respect of local laws :

10 Agreement to be bound by oath if a compromise

An offer by the next friend or the guardian as the case may be of a minor to be bound by the evidence given on oath by the opposite party or his witness under S 9 of the Indian Oaths Act (X of 1873), does not amount to an agreement or compromise within the meaning of this rule and no leave of the Court is necessary in such a case : The evidence so given is binding upon the minor under S 11 of that Act unless there is fraud or gross negligence on the part of the guardian in the conduct of the suit which results in prejudice to the minor :

But an offer by the guardian ad litem to suffer a decree on the oath of the plaintiff would amount to a compromise and, if not sanctioned by the Court, is not binding on the minor :

11 Abandonment of issue—If a compromise

The abandonment or giving up an issue on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem in the course of the conduct of the suit does not amount to a compromise within the meaning of this rule and therefore no leave of the Court is necessary. Such abandonment will bind the minor unless the guardian is proved to be guilty of fraud or gross negligence.¹

12 Withdrawal of suit

A withdrawal of a suit by the next friend of a minor plaintiff in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant can only be made with the leave of the Court. Otherwise it will be voidable at the instance of the minor.¹ Applications to allow a suit or appeal to be withdrawn where there are parties who are not in jure are not granted without grave consideration. In the undermentioned case the Judicial Committee granted leave to withdraw an appeal only after being assured by the counsel at the bar that the terms on which it was proposed to be withdrawn were beneficial to the minor. But a mere withdrawal of a suit not in pursuance of any agreement or compromise does not come within the purview of this rule although such a withdrawal is open to attack by the minor on the ground of fraud or collusion or gross negligence on the part of the next friend.²

13 Compromise in execution proceedings—See Note 2 to Order 32, General

14 Transfer without leave of decree in favour of minor

The provisions of this rule apply also to a compromise entered into even after a decree has been passed and an adjustment of a decree to which a minor is a party is not binding on the minor unless leave of the Court has been obtained therefor.¹ On the same principle a transfer of a decree obtained in favour of a minor is not binding on the minor unless leave of the Court has been obtained for such transfer.²

15 Agreement to refer to arbitration

This rule does not apply to references made without the intervention of the Court inasmuch as there is no suit pending in such cases.¹ A decree passed on an award passed on such a reference and filed into Court under paragraph 20 of the Second Schedule is not bad for want of sanction, though it may not be binding on the minor for other reasons.² But an application made under paragraph 20 of the Second Schedule is a suit and if, during the pendency thereof the guardian agrees not to object to the filing of the award, the agreement must, like any other agreement be sanctioned by the Court.³

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this Rule applies to agreements to refer to arbitration made pending suit. The general consensus of opinion

16 Compromise when can be set aside

A compromise in order to be valid and binding upon the minor must fulfil the following conditions —

- (1) The leave of the Court must have been expressly obtained (See Note 3)
- (2) It should have been granted by the Court after the exercise of a judicial discretion as regards the propriety of the compromise in the interests of the minor. See also Note 3)
- (3) It should not be vitiated by fraud or mistake (See Note 4)
- (4) There must be proper representation of the minor by the next friend or guardian ad litem. He should not have been guilty of fraud or gross negligence in the matter of compromise (See Notes 17 and 18 below)
- (5) The minor should have continued to be a minor till the passing of the compromise decree (See Note 19 below)

17 Gross negligence of next friend or guardian

As has been seen in Notes 12 and 13 to R 3 ante gross negligence on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem if established will entitle the minor to avoid any decree passed against him. There must be the strictest good faith on the part of the guardian and his acts must be based on considerations of actual necessity and advantage to the minor and not on calculations of any possible benefit. It is his duty to place the Court in

A compromise duly entered into by the guardian and sanctioned by the Court in the exercise of its discretion will not be disturbed except upon very strong grounds.¹ The grounds must be such as to amount to fraud in the party claiming the benefit of the compromise meaning by fraud not moral fraud but what in the eye of this Court is considered as amounting to fraud.

It there be no fraud and equal knowledge on both sides the compromise cannot be disturbed but if there is knowledge on one side which is withheld the compromise cannot stand, because the withholding of knowledge amounts in the view of a Court of equity to fraud.² The question is not whether the Court was satisfied with the information before it and could have called for further information but whether the parties having had this further information in their possession were justified in withholding it.² Fraud however must be strictly proved. A man cannot complain of fraud simply because he regrets a bargain entered into with open eyes. Nor can a minor attack a compromise sanctioned by the Court on his behalf on the ground of fraud on the Court unless he can prove not merely that the compromise was not profitable to him or that his opponent put forward a false plea but also that the Court was deceived either by that plea or about the facts of the case or was deceived into believing that the compromise had been accepted by the minor's guardian or next friend with free consent and knowledge of the facts when it had not been so accepted.³

If the next friend or guardian is proved to be guilty of fraud or collusion then the compromise entered into by him and the decree passed thereon will not bind the minor.⁴

19 Minor attaining majority pending suit

If the defendant who is a minor attains majority during the pendency

Court will ordinarily relieve minor from its effect and give him opportunity to defend the suit.—But this

A minor can file a separate suit to set aside the compromise decree or file an application for review in the same suit¹ He cannot take any objection as to the validity of the decree in appeal as no appeal lies from a consent decree under the present Code (vide S 96, sub-S 3)² Nor can the validity of the decree be attacked in execution proceedings³ See also Note 5 above

1 Retirement of next friend

The provisions of Sub-Rule (1) are mandatory. The mere fact that a guardian of the person and property of the minor plaintiff is appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) during the pendency of the suit superseding the next friend will not amount to a valid retirement in the absence of any application on the part of the next friend.

R 9. 2 Where the next friend does not do his duty

The next friend is liable to be removed under this rule if he fails to do his duty,¹ or if he ceases to reside in British India and leaves the country. Where the Court finds that the next friend does not do his duty in relation to the suit, it should not permit him to prejudice the interest of the minor but should adjourn the suit in order that some one interested in the minor may apply on behalf of the minor for the removal of the next friend and appointment of a new next friend or in order that the minor plaintiff himself may, on coming of age, elect to proceed with the suit or withdraw from it. Similarly, as seen in Note 2 to R 7 if the next friend refuses improperly to assent to a compromise which is clearly beneficial to the minor steps may be taken to remove him.⁴

3 Adverse interest of next friend

If the next friend has an interest adverse to that of the minor plaintiff or his personal interests will come into conflict with his duty towards the minor, he can be removed under this rule.¹

4 Appeal after the expiry of limitation period

Where a decree is passed against the minor and the interest of the minor requires that it should be appealed against but the guardian ad litem refrains from doing so with a view to safeguard his own interest and for his private benefit, it has been held that the minor can on attaining majority be permitted to appeal and that the delay can be excused under S 5 of the Limitation Act.¹

5 Non appearance of next friend

Where the Court finds that the next friend is guilty of neglect and commits default in appearance the proper course is to stay further proceedings and not to dismiss the suit for default.¹

Removal or death of next friend Note No 1

1 Removal or death of next friend

The suit does not abate by reason of the death of the next friend. The Court should either appoint a new next friend or keep the suit pending till the minor attains majority.¹ An order dismissing the suit is a nullity.² The same rule will apply where the minors are appellants and their guardian dies pending appeal. Where however the decision is given in favour of the minor it is not on the principle mentioned in Note 1 to O 32 void by reason merely of the omission to appoint a fresh guardian for him.³

R. 11. [Ss 458 459] (1) Where the guardian for the suit desires to retire or does not do his duty, or where other sufficient ground is made to appear, the Court may permit such guardian to retire or may remove him and may make such order as to costs as it thinks fit

1 Retirement of guardian

When once a guardian has been duly appointed he cannot retire except with the leave of the Court.¹ The Court is not bound to grant permission to retire whenever the guardian wishes to do so. It has a discretion to refuse the permission in a proper case.²

1. A mere statement on the part of the guardian that he declines to act has not the effect of removal unless sanctioned by the Court³

2 Removal of guardian

It is the duty of the Court to protect the interests of a minor. A guardian is appointed for that purpose and for that purpose alone. If the Court finds that the guardian is not acting properly it would be its duty to remove him in the interests of the minor¹

The only way of getting rid of a guardian ad litem, who has once been properly appointed, is under the provisions of this rule². Where in a suit against a minor the certificated guardian of the minor is appointed guardian for the suit, the mere fact that he subsequently ceases to be the certificated guardian does not of itself impose such a disqualification as to make him *junctus officio*³. He will continue to be the guardian until he retires or is removed by the Court under this rule.

3 Appointment of new guardian on removal, retirement or death of guardian

It is the duty of the Court to appoint a new guardian where the guardian ad litem dies or retires or is removed by the Court. Where the guardian of a minor respondent dies pending appeal a decree obtained against him without appointing a fresh guardian for him would on general principles be a nullity,² though a decree obtained in favour of the minor would not³. See Note 1 to O 32.

It has been held by the High Court of Patna that no notice to minors is necessary before an order of fresh appointment is made⁴.

The power of the Court under this sub-rule may be exercised at any time during the pendency of the suit and the same is not taken away by the fact that an order to try the suit ex parte has been previously passed⁵. The powers of the Court under this rule are exercisable by the Registrar under S. 105 of the Rangoon Small Cause Courts Act (VII of 1920).

4 Costs

Section 35 ante empowers the Court to make an order as to costs against any party to the suit, while this rule empowers the Court to pass an order for costs against the guardian ad litem who is not a party to the suit¹. This rule cannot be construed so as to restrict the operation of S 35 and, therefore, when the guardian ad litem is himself a party to the suit the Court has

2 Title to be corrected

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the provision of this rule requiring the title of the suit to be corrected applies only where the suit is pending and not to proceedings taken after a final decree has been passed in the suit¹

3 Minor defendant becoming a major during the pendency of suit

No provision has been made in the Code in respect of a minor defendant attaining majority during the pendency of the suit The reason for the omission is that while a plaintiff on becoming a major can as a dominus litis elect either to go on or put an end to the litigation the defendant has no such choice available to him and the suit must proceed against him notwithstanding he becomes a major The minor defendant who comes of age may if he thinks fit come on the record and conduct the defence himself If however he does not do so he must be deemed to have elected to abide by the representation of the quondam guardian and the judgment eventually passed will be binding upon him The decree passed in such a case cannot be said to be a nullity or made without jurisdiction¹

1 Scope of the Rule

This rule deals with the procedure to be followed where a minor plaintiff becomes a major and considers that the suit instituted on his behalf was improper or unreasonable. The Court can in such cases order the next friend to pay the costs of all the parties if it is satisfied as to the impropriety or unreasonableness alleged. But no order as to costs can be made after the death of the next friend.

1 Persons of unsound mind

The present rule places persons of unsound mind in the same position as that of minors and makes the provisions of Rr 1 to 14 applicable to them. Hence a suit on behalf of a person of unsound mind has to be filed by a next friend and where the defendant is of unsound mind the Court has to appoint a guardian ad litem.

2 Mental infirmity

The corresponding section in the old Code was applicable only to persons of unsound mind. Now the scope of the rule has been widened by the addition of the words or mental infirmity. The result is that even a person of weak mind can sue through a next friend provided the Court is satisfied that he is incapable of protecting his interests. The High Court of Lahore has held that the rule applies also to persons who are absolutely deaf and dumb.

The fact that a person of high position has renounced the world and become a Sanyasi neglecting worldly affairs would not of itself justify the Court in holding that by reason of unsoundness of mind and mental infirmity he is incapable of protecting his interests within the meaning of this Rule. But a persistent delusion of being haunted by demons of persecution by imaginary voices and religious magilomania which makes him regard himself as destined to be in some sort a saviour of the world are symptoms which would justify the conclusion that the person is suffering from delusional insanity and incapable of managing his own affairs.³

3 Persons adjudged to be of unsound mind

A person can be adjudged to be of unsound mind under the provisions of the Lunacy Act IV of 1912. For cases under the Lunacy Act and evidence relating to lunacy see the following cases:

4 Persons of unsound mind not so adjudged

The old section applied only to persons of unsound mind adjudged to be so under Act XXXV of 1858 or under any other law for the time being in force. And even so the decisions under the old Code held that the Court had inherent power to appoint a guardian for persons of unsound mind though not so adjudged. Now the Legislature has given effect to these decisions by providing also for cases of persons not so adjudged. If the defendant alleges that he is of unsound mind and the plaintiff denies it the Court must hold a judicial enquiry and come to a finding as to whether he is incapable of protecting his own interests.² It is only when the Court on inquiry finds that the defendant by reason of unsoundness of mind or mental infirmity, is incapable of protecting his interests that it is necessary to appoint a guardian ad litem.³ Thus where a defendant alleged to be a lunatic dies before the issue of process, it cannot be said that the suit was not validly instituted against the deceased on account of the fact that no guardian was appointed. A finding in the lunacy proceedings that a person is not of unsound mind and incapable of managing his affairs does not preclude a finding under the present rule that the same person is by reason of mental infirmity incapable of protecting his interests in the suit.³

5. Appointment of next friend or guardian for persons of unsound mind

As already seen, the Court is bound to appoint a next friend or guardian in the case of persons of unsound mind. If he is not represented by a guardian in the suit, the decree will be null and void.¹ See also Note 5 to R. 3. Where a manager of the property of the lunatic has been appointed under the Lunacy Act such person ought to be appointed as the next friend or guardian ad litem in the suit.² See also R. 4, sub-R. (2).

6 Decree against lunatic not represented, if can be challenged in execution proceedings

As already seen in Note 5 to R. 3, having regard to the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Rashid-un-nissa v. Muhammad Ismail [(1909) 1 L R. 31 All 572 (P C)] an objection as to want of proper representation is not one falling under S. 47 of the Code and cannot be raised in execution proceedings inasmuch as the person not represented cannot be deemed to be a party to the suit.

7 Revision

In the undermentioned case the High Court of Allahabad interfered under its inherent powers and ordered a stay of proceedings in the suit, pending decision in the lunacy proceedings against the defendant under the Lunacy Act.

R. 16. [S. 464] Nothing in this Order shall apply to a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief suing or being sued in the name of his State, or being sued by direction of the Governor-General in Council or a Local Government in the name of an agent or in any other name, or shall be construed to affect or in any way derogate from the provisions of any local law for the time being in force relating to suits by or against minors or by or against lunatics or other persons of unsound mind.

1 Suit by Paupers

The State derives a revenue from Court fee stamps and a plaintiff suing in Courts is under the Court Fees Act 1870 bound to pay the Court fee prescribed at the time of filing the plaint. But in view of the fact that there may be persons who by reason of their poverty, are unable to pay the fee provisions have been enacted in this Order exempting such persons from paying in the first instance the Court fee prescribed and allowing them to prosecute their suits in forma pauperis.¹ But if such pauper succeeds in the suit the Government can recover the amount of Court fee as a first charge from out of the subject matter of the suit (See R 10). And even if the plaintiff fails in the suit the Court should order him under R 11 infra to pay the Court fees due by him.

The executor of a deceased person is entitled to obtain a probate in forma pauperis though the petition for grant of probate is not a suit in the ordinary sense unless caveat is entered.²

The provisions of this order are not applicable to proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) and the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908).

2 Suit may be instituted by a pauper

It is competent to the Court to allow a suit not originally instituted in forma pauperis to be continued in forma pauperis.¹ The substitution of the word instituted in this rule in place of the word brought in S 401 of the old Code has not made any change in the law in this respect.²

3 Is not possessed of sufficient means

The explanation to this rule furnishes two different tests to determine the pauperism of a person¹ —

- (1) Where a fee is prescribed by law for the plaint in a suit a person who is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay such fee is a pauper for the purposes of that suit.²

A person may be entitled to property but may nevertheless be not possessed of sufficient means to pay the Court-fee. It cannot therefore, be assumed that everyone who is entitled to property is possessed of means to the value of that property.⁴ Where though a person is entitled to property, yet if it is out of his reach and is thus not a realisable asset or convertible into cash, it cannot be said that he is possessed of sufficient means to pay the Court-fee.⁵ Thus a mere finding that the applicant is jointly interested in a property with another but over which he has no dominion, would only show that he is entitled to property but not that he is possessed of means.⁶

The word means is according to the High Court of Lahore intended to cover and include all forms of realisable assets which can be converted into cash and as such can be used for financing the litigation.⁷ Thus according to that Court, it would include an interest in a decree or a mortgage in favour of the petitioner. The High Court of Calcutta has on the other hand held that a debt which is due from a third person cannot be said to be means of which the applicant is possessed, and that the words is not possessed of must mean that the applicant has no actual control over it.⁸ Where the petitioner is possessed of some property which is not cash the test according to the High Court of Madras to decide whether he is a pauper, is not whether in the abstract he has the power of raising money but whether in the concrete circumstances of the case he can succeed in raising anything substantial by exercising that power.^{10a}

Where the applicant himself is proved to be a pauper he is entitled to the benefit of the Rule and the fact that he has co heirs or relations who are men of means is immaterial.¹²

The burden of proving that a person is a pauper within the meaning of the explanation lies on the applicant.¹³

4 "Where no such fee is prescribed"—See Note 3 above

5 When he is not entitled to property—See Note 3 above

It has been held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur, that interest of the tenant of a non-transferable occupancy holding is not 'property' but is more in the nature of an expectant claim under an inchoate right.¹

6 Subject matter of the suit, if can be considered in deciding sufficient means

The words, 'other than his necessary wearing apparel or the subject-matter of the suit' do not qualify the first part of the explanation, but apply only to cases where no specific Court-fee is prescribed.¹ But this does not mean that in dealing with the first part of the explanation the subject-matter has always to be taken into consideration.² The subject-matter of the suit may, in some cases, be in the possession of the petitioner and in some cases not. In the former class of cases it cannot be excluded from consideration merely on the ground that it forms the subject-matter of the suit.³ Thus where A files a suit for certain ornaments in the possession of B and obtains a decree and B applies for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, the ornaments in her possession will have to be taken into account in determining whether she has sufficient means to pay the Court-fee on the memorandum of appeal.⁴ In the latter class of cases the subject-matter of the suit cannot be taken into consideration. The reason is that the word 'possession' sufficiently indicates that any amount which forms the subject-matter of the suit and is not in the actual possession of the petitioner, cannot be taken into account for the purpose of determining his means.⁵

Now suppose that in answer to an application by a plaintiff to sue as a pauper, the defendant admits a part of the liability and produces or offers to produce into Court the property or the amount in discharge of such liability, can it be considered in determining whether the plaintiff is a pauper or not? The High Courts of Bombay⁶ and Calcutta⁷ have held that in such a case the time when the application for leave to sue as a pauper, is made is the point of time which the Court has to consider in determining whether the plaintiff is a pauper. The High Court of Madras has on the other hand held that if at the time of the hearing of the application he has become possessed of sufficient means the Court has no jurisdiction to grant him leave to sue as a pauper.⁸ It has also been held by that High Court in the undermentioned cases that where the plaintiff gets a decree in the lower Court, but wants to appeal as a pauper for a higher amount the amount deposited in Court by the judgment debtor to the credit of the plaintiff in pursuance of the decree should be taken into consideration in determining whether he should be allowed to appeal as a pauper.

7 Necessary wearing apparel

According to the High Court of Calcutta ornaments which a woman ordinarily wears should be regarded as being in the nature of wearing apparel.¹ The High Court of Lahore appears to dissent from the above view.²

8 Minor plaintiff

Where an application is filed on behalf of a minor for leave to sue in forma pauperis the circumstances of the next friend should not be considered, the fact that the next friend is possessed of sufficient means will not disentitle a minor plaintiff from suing in forma pauperis.¹ Nor will the fact that such next friend is himself a pauper disentitle him from suing on behalf of the minor in forma pauperis.²

9 Pauper defendant

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned cases that a defendant may, under the inherent powers of the Court, be allowed to defend a suit in forma pauperis although there is no provision to that effect in the Code. But the Chief Court of Punjab has taken a contrary view.² The High Court of Rangoon also has taken a view contrary to that of the Calcutta High Court. It has further held that, in any case, the Court has no inherent power to allow a party to prosecute in forma pauperis an application for review of an order passed in appeal.³

10 'Person'—Meaning of

The word person occurring in the explanation to this rule has not been defined in this Code. According to the definition given in the General Clauses Act (X of 1897) it includes not only individual human beings but also companies or associations or bodies of individuals whether incorporated or not. It has, therefore, been held by the High Court of Madras that the word person indicates a juridical person.¹ But the High Court of Rangoon has however, held that it means a natural person that is a human being and that it does not include a juridical person.² Even according to this view a firm can be considered to be a person. Thus, where a firm brings a suit for damages and afterwards becomes insolvent and the Official Assignee refuses to prosecute the suit and the suit is dismissed, the firm can be granted leave to appeal as a pauper.³

11 Suit by executor administrator or legal representative of pauper

The High Court of Madras has held that an executor or an administrator or the legal representative of a deceased person is entitled to institute or maintain or continue a suit in forma pauperis in his representative capacity, provided he has not come into possession of sufficient means out of the estate of the deceased. It proceeds on the view that the plaintiff in his private capacity and in the capacity of the representative are two different persons in the eye of the law. The High Courts of Bombay and Calcutta and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur have taken a contrary view that he could not do so, unless and until it was shown that he himself is a pauper.⁴ The above view is based on the ground that the provisions of this Code seem to negative the idea of anybody but an actual pauper, a real pauper, a man without means being permitted to maintain a suit in forma pauperis. The decisions of the High Court of Lahore are conflicting.⁵

See also Note 10 to O 22, R 1 and the undermentioned case.⁶

12 Suit by an Official Liquidator or Official Receiver

Applying the definition of the word 'person' as mentioned in Note 10, ante, the High Court of Madras has held that the Official Liquidator of a company, though not a pauper himself, may file a suit in forma pauperis on

13 Suit by Mutawalli trustee or Shebait

As has already been observed in Note 11, ante, the character of a person suing in a representative character must be kept distinct from his personal capacity. Thus when a plaintiff sues in a representative character, for example as a mutawalli trustee or a shebait unless he is in possession of property belonging to the walf estate or trust or the idol for whom he sues, sufficient to enable him to pay the Court fee he may be allowed to sue as a pauper, even if it is shown that he has sufficient personal property of his own :

Where a shebait brought a suit for recovery of endowed property against one who claimed to be the alienor of that property and against three of his *co shebait*s who purported to have alienated it and the plaintiff did not either in his personal capacity or in the capacity of a shebait possess sufficient means to pay the Court-fee it was held that the mere fact that the shebait-defendants possessed sufficient properties belonging to the idol, did not dis-entitle him from suing as a pauper :²

The fact that the applicant's husband has got sufficient property to pay the Court-fees due on her claim is not a ground for refusing the application of a pauper married woman for permission to sue as a pauper :

15 Leave to sue in forma pauperis for removal of trustees

S 402 of the old Code imposed certain restrictions on the right to sue as a pauper. It was held under that section that it did not preclude a person, who had obtained leave to sue under S 18 of the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863) for the removal of the trustees of a temple, from being permitted to sue in forma pauperis : The said section has now been omitted in this Code

16 Award of costs and order for security for costs against pauper

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the Court cannot pass an order for costs against the pauper in interlocutory applications in the suit : The High Court of Rangoon has, on the other hand, held that the Court has power to pass an order for costs against the pauper in such cases :²

A woman who has been permitted to sue as a pauper cannot be asked to furnish security for costs under O 25, R 1 :³ The reason is that it would render nugatory the order permitting her to sue as a pauper

1 Contents of application

Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis should set forth with the utmost good faith a schedule of all the moveable and immovable property belonging to the applicant, with the estimated value thereof. Where the applicant fails to do so the application is not properly framed and is liable to be rejected under Cl (a) of R 5 infra ² It does not however follow that this rule is to be meticulously interpreted against the petitioner. The Code is not designed as a trap which a litigant must try to avoid by all means in his power ³ The object of the rule being to help the Government in ascertaining whether the applicant is in a position to pay the Court-fee payable on the plaint, the Court should not throw out the application unless the omission was an act of bad faith ⁴ Thus the application should not be rejected merely on the ground that an item of property has been omitted to be given in the schedules or that the schedule has not been signed and verified by the applicant ⁵ or that the applicant was unable to name all the persons in possession of the property left by the deceased in an administration suit ^{6a}. The proper course in such cases will be to return the application for amendment,⁷ and on such amendment being made the presentation will be deemed to be a proper presentation as from the date of the original presentation ^{7a}.

Where a plaint is filed with a stamp duty and registered as a suit and it is subsequently found that additional Court-fee is required and the plaintiff thereupon applies to continue the suit in forma pauperis, the fact that the application is not in the form prescribed by this rule will not necessarily entail the dismissal of the application ⁸.

2 Verification

Where the verification of the statements made in the application is not made in accordance with the provisions of O VI, R 15, the Court is bound to reject the application under R 5 infra.¹ But where the applicant did not verify the contents of the petition at the foot of the petition, but did so by a separate affidavit in which the statements contained in the several paragraphs in the application were said to be true it was held that the affidavit might be treated as part of the application.² The schedule of property need not, however, be signed and verified by the applicant and in any case, the omission to do so will not, as has been seen in Note 1 above, entail the rejection of the application.

4 Death of applicant—See O 22, R 1, Note 10

R. 3. [S. 404] Notwithstanding anything contained in these Rules, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person, unless he is exempted from appearing in Court, in which

Presentation of application case the application may be presented by an authorized agent who can answer all material questions relating to the application, and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person.

1 Presentation to Court

The insistence in the Rule is on the words 'in person' and not on the words 'to the Court' as meaning 'to the judge himself'.¹ Therefore where the application is presented to the Sheristadar of the Court² or to an officer of the Court who places it before the judge and the petitioner appears before the judge, the presentation will be valid.³

2 Presentation by applicant in person

This Rule is mandatory as regards the requirement as to the presentation in person, and a Court is bound to reject under R. 5 an application for leave to sue as a pauper, if it is not presented by the applicant in person, except in cases where he is exempted from appearing in Court.¹ Where one only out of several applicants presents the application in person, the Court should reject the application as against those persons who have not joined in presenting it in person.² Where, however, the law by reason of the fact that personal appearance in Courts is impossible either by reason of the party being a company or an infant, or a lunatic allows an appearance by somebody else, an appearance by such person would be sufficient compliance with the law.³

The provisions of this Rule as regards presentation in person do not apply to a case where a plaint, returned by one Court is presented to another Court⁴ or where a plaintiff is allowed to continue his suit as a pauper⁵ or where the application for leave to sue as a pauper is returned for amendment and the amended application is presented by the applicant's pleader.⁶

3 Purdanashin woman

A woman who is exempted under S. 132 from personal appearance in Court e.g. a Purdanashin lady is entitled to present an application for leave to sue as a pauper through an authorised agent.¹

4 Authorised agent

The term authorised agent does not mean the same thing as the expression recognised agent in O. 3 R. 2 ante.¹ A pleader may be a duly authorised agent within the meaning of this Rule.² But he must be specially authorised to present an application under this Order and must fulfil the other conditions detailed in this Rule.³

-------------------	-----------	----------------------------------	-----------

1 Scope of the Rule

This Rule empowers the Court to examine the applicant when the application is duly presented not only with reference to the question of his pauperism, but also with reference to the merits of the claim in order to ascertain whether the allegations in the petition do or do not show a cause of action¹ An enquiry under this Rule should be made by the judge himself²

As to whether persons other than the applicant can be examined on the merits see Notes to Rr 5 and 7 infra

2 Right to cross examine applicant

Where the applicant who seeks permission to sue as a pauper is examined under this Rule the opposite party has a right to cross examine him on the merits of the claim in order to test the statements he makes in his application³

1 Legislative changes

The clause 'when his allegations do not show a cause of action' has been substituted for the clause 'that his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court' which occurred in the old section

2 Applicability of the Rule

The Rule provides that an application for permission to sue as a pauper shall be rejected in the events enumerated in the Rule¹ It is restrictive of the right which every litigant has to seek the aid of a Court of Justice, and should therefore be interpreted strictly²

As in the case of an order rejecting a plaint under O 7, R 11, an order of rejection of an application under this Rule must be made on preliminary grounds, before notice is issued, and before an enquiry is held into the applicant's pauperism³

3 Clause (a) See Note 1 to R 2 and Note 2 to R 3, supra

Where the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is framed in the manner prescribed by Rule 2, but is defective in some particulars with regard to the substance of the plaint, it is not obligatory on the Court to reject the application¹ In proper cases the Court has power to allow an application to be amended so as to make it conform to the law²

4 Clause (b)

The question of the applicant's pauperism has to be decided with reference to the definition given in R 1. The Court in this respect is bound to proceed on the valuation given in the plaint and cannot go into an investigation of the question whether the suit has been overvalued.¹ Nor can it go into the merits of the case when dealing with the question of pauperism of the applicant.²

Where the applicant is found to be a pauper it is not necessary for the Court to give a finding on the other matters enumerated in the Rule unless it finds that the application has to be rejected for any of the other reasons mentioned therein.³

5 Clause (d)

The words used in clause (c) of S 407 of the old Code were right to sue. The expression was however held not to be limited to questions of jurisdiction alone but to include a good and subsisting cause of action capable of enforcement in Court, and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of Limitation or any other law.¹ The present clause (d) gives effect to this view by substituting the words cause of action for the words right to sue so that the Court has got the power to reject an application for permission to sue in forma pauperis where the claim is prima facie barred by limitation² or is unlawful³ or is immoral or opposed to public policy.⁴ But in considering the question whether the applicant has a cause of action or not the Court has to look only into the allegations made by the applicant. This does not mean that the Court should confine itself to the allegations in the petition. It is open to the Court to consider not only the allegations contained in the plaint but also the facts appearing in the examina- tion of the applicant's. Beyond this, however, the Court cannot go. In fact, even in an inquiry under R. 7 the Court can confine itself to the evidence of the plaintiff and refuse to go into other evidence.⁷ Consequently, complicated questions of limitation,⁸ or of res judicata,⁹ or of local jurisdiction¹⁰ cannot be gone into for deciding the application. Nor can the Court refuse the application on the ground that, on the merits, the litigation is very likely to end in failure.¹⁰ The Court should exercise great caution in considering the question of cause of action inasmuch as the applicant is often without the advantage of the aid of Counsel. Further the opposite party will have the opportunity of urging these very objections under R. 7.¹²

The object of the provisions of this Order is to help bona fide litigants. Where, therefore, a litigation is not bona fide, and the plaintiff has been set up by another for the purpose of evading the Court-fee, the Court will not allow him to sue as a pauper.¹

The Clause will apply only if the agreement has reference to the subject-matter of the suit and is of a champertous character.² Further, the agreement

Thus, where a company has gone into liquidation and the liquidator sues in forma pauperis to recover a debt due to the company, the fact that the liquidator is paid a percentage of the collections will not bring the application under this clause.³ The agreement contemplated by this Clause is one which is subsisting and effective of the time of the application.^{3a}

It is however not necessary that the "interest" should be a vested and completed interest. Thus, an agreement with pleader appearing in the pauper suit, that he is to recover his fee out of the fruits of the decree that may be obtained in that suit by the plaintiff is within the prohibition of the Clause.⁴ But a mere agreement to pay the fees when the decree is obtained without any condition by which the pleader could recover the fees from the decretal amount, will not fall under the Clause.⁵

7 Appeal

An order rejecting an application for permission to sue in forma pauperis is not appealable as it is neither a decree nor an order coming within any of the Clauses of O 43 R 1.¹

8 Letters Patent Appeal

An order of a Single Judge of the High Court, sitting on the Original Side, allowing or refusing to allow a plaintiff to sue in forma pauperis is a "judgment" within the meaning of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such.¹

1 Scope of the inquiry under this Rule

Two kinds of examinations are contemplated by this Order —

- (1) An examination of the applicant under R 4, ante, and
- (2) An examination under this Rule¹

It is important to remember the following distinction between the two kinds of examinations —

- (1) An examination under R 4 takes place before issuing notice to the Government pleader and to the opposite party, while the examination under this Rule takes place after such notice. There is thus no cross-examination of the applicant under the former Rule.
- (2) The examination under R 4 is only of the applicant and none else, while the examination under this Rule may be not only of the applicant but also of his witnesses.
- (3) The examination under R 4 may be in respect of the applicant's pauperism as well as the merits of the case, while the examination under this Rule is confined to the question of the applicant's pauperism.² It has accordingly been held that a Court has no power to allow the examination of witnesses on questions other than the pauperism of the applicant such as questions as to the existence of a cause of action³ or as to the title of the applicant to institute the suit⁴ or as to limitation⁵ or as to res judicatae and decide the application on such evidence. It is however, not clear as to whether when the applicant is examined under this Rule as to his pauperism he can be cross examined as to matters relating to the cause of action or limitation^{6a}.

- 1 (1912) 15 Ind Cas 184 (184) (Mad) The Court is bound to enquire into plaintiff's pauperism unless petition is rejected under R 5.

It is only the examination of witnesses on questions other than the pauperism of the applicant that is prohibited by this Rule. The Court is not precluded from hearing arguments on the question whether the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in R. 5^{6b}. But even arguments are confined to the matters specified in R. 5 and the Court has no jurisdiction to reject the applicant on other grounds than those specified⁷. Thus the Court cannot reject the application on the ground that other co heirs who are not paupers are seeking to establish their rights through the applicant who is admittedly a pauper⁸. Nor can it reject the application on the construction of documents filed by parties⁹ or on any complicated questions of law such as limitation res judicata etc.¹⁰

Even if the other party does not offer any arguments as provided under Sub Rule (2) the Court is not precluded from considering suo motu if the application is subject to the prohibitions under R. 5¹¹. This Rule in so far as it relates to the manner of taking evidence does not apply to proceedings under the N.W.F.P. Regulation (VII of 1901 S. 46 Cl. 2) and the Oudh Courts Act (IV of 1925) (S. 16 Cl. 2).

4 Limitation when the application is granted

Where an application to sue in forma pauperis is granted the suit is deemed to be instituted on the date of the presentation of the application and not on the date when the applicant is allowed to sue as a pauper¹. Therefore where an application to sue in forma pauperis was made before the amendment of the Court Fees Act (Madras Act 1922) but was registered as a suit after

As to appeals in forma pauperis, see O 44, infra

5 Limitation when application is refused

Where the application to sue in forma pauperis is rejected the proceedings come to an end and if the applicant thereafter brings a regular suit on payment of the Court-fees prescribed the suit will be deemed to be instituted only on the date when the Court-fees are paid and not on the date of presentation of the rejected application 1 As to whether at the time of refusing the application the Court can grant time for the payment of the Court-fees on the plaintiff and whether if the Court-fees are paid within the time so granted the suit would be deemed to be instituted on the date of the presentation of the application see Note 10 to S 149 supra and the cases cited below

As to appeals in forma pauperis see O 44 R 1 Note 7 infra

6 Limitation when application is converted into a plaint on payment of Court fee

Where during the pendency of an application to sue as a pauper the applicant pays the Court-fee in respect of the plaint and thereupon the plaint is registered as a suit does the institution of the suit date back to the date of presentation of the application? Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Skinner v Orde 1 observed

The petition is filed and proceedings are taken to inquire into the pauperism which are delayed by various orders of the Court until a very considerable period of time has elapsed. Then pending that inquiry the plaintiff by paying the amount of stamp-fees into Court admits he is no longer desirous to sue as a pauper, and gives up so much of the privity of his petition as asks to be allowed to sue but no more. Is there then anything in the Act which requires that in such a state of things the petition of plaintiff shall be rejected altogether and the plaintiff be compelled to commence de novo?

The plaint is not converted into a plaint from that time only but remains with its original date on the file of the Court. In their view the suit must be deemed to be instituted when the application was filed

Though Skinner v Orde was decided under the Code of 1859, the principle has been followed in cases arising under the later Codes, and it has been held that where the application is bona fide, the suit will be deemed to be instituted on the date of the application to sue in forma pauperis and not on the date when the Court-fees are paid 2 But if the application is mala fide and it is found that the applicant was even at the time of the application, possessed of means to pay the Court-fees the suit will be deemed to be

The application to sue as a pauper cannot be deemed to be a plaint till leave to sue is granted and therefore, the Court has no jurisdiction to order the return of the plaint under the provisions of O 7 R 10, for presentation to the proper Court¹ See also Note 6 to O 7 R 10 Until the leave is granted there is no suit in existence and therefore the Court cannot direct an attachment of properties before judgment² See also Note 5 to O 38 R 5

Where a plaint is filed with insufficient Court-fee and the plaintiff being unable to pay the additional Court fee applies to continue the suit in forma pauperis it has been held that the Court has to ascertain if the plaint discloses a cause of action and then to direct an inquiry into the pauperism of the applicant If he is found to be a pauper he should be allowed to continue the suit as a pauper as the procedure under Rr 2 and 8 is impossible under such circumstances⁴

Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is granted and thereby becomes converted into a suit the vakalat given by the applicant becomes a vakalat for the purpose of the suit unless it is distinctly confined to the pauper application alone⁵

2 Limitation when application is granted—See R 7 ante

3 Security for costs—See Note 10 to O 25 R 1 and Note 16 to R 1 above

4 Except that the plaintiff shall not be liable to pay any Court fee

The exemption does not extend to the liability to pay stamp duty or penalty in respect of a document which owing to defect in stamp is inadmissible in evidence¹

5 Insolvency of plaintiff

Where the plaintiff permitted to sue as a pauper is subsequently adjudged an insolvent the Official Receiver is entitled to continue the suit¹

6 Lis pendens

The doctrine of lis pendens will apply to suits instituted in *forma pauperis*¹

1 Scope of the Rule

This rule and the next are intended to secure to the Government its rights to Court-fees, the payment of which is temporarily suspended when the plaintiff is permitted to sue in forma pauperis.¹ This rule deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who succeeds in the suit and R 11 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who fails in the suit. No provision has been made in the Code for the case of a plaintiff succeeding in part and failing in part. In the absence of any such provision, presumably the Court is intended to deal with the case by combining the provisions of the two rules and by appropriating the Court-fees payable between the plaintiff and the defendant in proportion to the extent of success of each party.^{1a} The High Courts of Allahabad² Madras³ and Patna⁴ have held that it is not open to the Court to direct the defendant to pay Court-fees exceeding the amount which would be payable on that portion of the plaintiff's claim on which the plaintiff succeeds. The High Court of Calcutta⁵ has on the other hand held that this rule leaves the discretion entirely with the Court to direct which of the parties should pay the Court fees due to the Government and that the Court should not be fettered by any hard and fast rule but must only be guided by the equities of the case.

As has been seen already this rule is applicable only where the plaintiff succeeds in the suit. Where, in a pauper suit, the amount decreed to the plaintiff fell short of the amount payable by him as costs to the defendant he was held not to have succeeded within the meaning of this rule because so far as the plaintiff was concerned the decree was in the result not a success in view of O 21, R 19 of the Code.⁶

This rule is applicable also to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their Original Civil Jurisdiction.⁷

2 Amount of Court fees to be a first charge

The Court-fee payable to the Government under this rule is a first charge on the subject matter of the suit.¹ "The Crown has a right to receive certain fees at the institution of every suit, it temporarily forgoes its right in the case of pauper plaintiffs, and places means in their hands to proceed to judgment against their defendants. Without the forbearance of the Government to insist on its ordinary rule the suit in such a case, could not have been brought or the money realised. It is therefore, reasonable that the Crown, in consideration of its giving up its right to those fees, should have for their defrayal, the first claim on the proceeds of the pauper suit.²

The rule creates two distinct and separate rights exercisable at the option of the Crown, viz —

- (1) A right in rem against the property recovered in the suit, and
- (2) A right in personam against the party ordered by the decree to pay the Court-fee.

In the event of the Crown not succeeding in realising the amount by pursuing the personal remedy it has a right to recover the same from the subject-matter of the suit.³ The charge is enforceable in execution by attachment and sale of the properties covered by the charge and not by a separate suit.⁴ See R 13, infra.

The Court fee payable to the Government is to be calculated as on the date of the presentation of the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis. Where the Court-Fees Act was amended after the institution of the suit and before the decree, the calculation of Court-fees has to be made in accordance with the law at the time of the institution.⁵

3 Effect of the first charge

The effect of the first charge is that a sale in execution of the same prevails as against a subsequent sale. Thus where a property was sold in 1896 for the Court-fees due to the Government under a decree of 1893 and it was again sold in 1899 in execution of a money decree obtained by a third person in 1894 on a debt anterior to 1893 the former purchase was held to prevail over the latter.¹ Similarly the claim of the Government against any amounts due to the plaintiff under the decree will prevail against any cross-claim or claims under cross-decrees against the plaintiff in favour of the defendant, provided the defendant has not taken out execution for the balance under O 21, Rr 18 or 19. In the case cited below² A sued B in forma pauperis to recover a property of the value of Rs 60,000 and obtained a decree for a sum of Rs 1,500. He was ordered to pay a sum of Rs 1,200 to the Government as Court-fees. In an application by the Government to recover the amount of the Court-fees from the decree amount of Rs 1,500 due from B to A B contended that a sum of Rs 1,000 was due to him from A as costs of the suit and that a sum of Rs 800 was also due from him under another cross-decree against him making a total sum of Rs 1,800 and B claimed to be entitled to set-off against this total sum the above amount of Rs 1,500 due to A. It was held that under the circumstances the Government was entitled to recover the amount of Court-fee from the decretal amount of

4 Crown entitled to precedence in respect of Court fees

It is a principle recognised by the laws of all countries that claims of the State are entitled to precedence over other claims¹. The amount of Court-fees due to the Crown is therefore entitled to precedence over the claims of other creditors of a pauper decree-holder. This rule is only an enabling one indicating the manner in which the Crown may realise the debt. It does not preclude the Crown or its representatives from urging its prerogative rights of precedence in any other manner². So when a successful proper plaintiff attached and sold for costs due to her certain property other than the property in suit belonging to the judgment debtor and the sale proceeds were paid into Court and both the plaintiff and the Government solicitor applied for payment out of the said sum it was held that the Government solicitor was entitled to be paid out in preference to the plaintiff and that it was not obligatory on the Government to attach the fund in Court before getting payment³.

But though in respect of the Court fees the Government is entitled to precedence among ordinary creditors it cannot claim precedence over lien holders. It is only when claims of the Crown and claims of common persons come into competition that the Crown is preferred. It is a matter of common justice and common honesty that the Crown has no more right than a common person to seize A's property and apply it in or towards the discharge of a debt due from *B*⁴. Accordingly it was held that the Government could not attach and sell a defendant's property for Court fees so as to destroy the rights of a previous mortgagee of the defendant⁵.

5 Recovery of Court fees by Government from party ordered to pay the same

The party ordered by the Court under this rule to pay the amount of Court fee due to the Government is the person who is liable to pay the same to the Government. The Government can proceed against that person personally or against his properties as the case may be¹.

6 Mode of realisation of Court fees

An order under this rule for the recovery of the Court-fees due to the Government is equivalent to a decree in its favour¹ and may be executed by the Government at its option, either by enforcing the charge on the subject-matter of the suit, or by proceeding in execution against the person or

1 Legislative changes

- 1 The corresponding section in the old Code contained a penal clause to the effect that if it was found that the suit is vexatious or frivolous the pauper plaintiff was liable to a fine not exceeding Rs 100 or imprisonment for a term which may extend to a month or both. The said clause has been omitted in the present rule.
- 2 The word "withdrawn" has been newly added See Note 3, below

2 Scope of the Rule

The provisions of this rule are mandatory and the Court when it passes a decree in the suit must provide in that decree for payment by the plaintiff of the Court-fee due to the Government ¹ As to the remedy of the Government in case the Court omits to make an order as to Court-fee, see Rr 12 and 13 below and the notes thereto

3 Where the suit is withdrawn or dismissed

The old Code did not contain the words "when the suit is withdrawn" and there was a conflict of decisions as to whether the words "if the plaintiff fails in the suit" included also cases where the suit was withdrawn ¹ The inretraction of the words where the suit is withdrawn has now set the conflict at rest.

It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay² and Madras³ that when where a suit is dismissed on grounds other than those specified in Cls (a) and (b) of this rule the plaintiff must be deemed to have failed in the suit and that the Court is bound to make an order for the payment of the Court fees by him to the Government.

Where a plaint in forma pauperis is returned for presentation to the proper Court the plaintiff cannot be said to have failed in the suit and therefore no order for payment of Court fee can be made under this rule.⁴ Similarly where an application to sue as a pauper is rejected because the applicant is a minor and unrepresented and no enquiry is made as to pauperism and order under this rule for payment of the Court fees from the estate of the minor applicant is not legal.⁵

It is held as in S 35 *ante*¹ that a Court can under certain circumstances order a next friend or a guardian of a minor to pay the costs of a suit personally though he is not a party to the suit. Can this Court in a pauper suit order the next friend or the guardian to pay the Court fees due to the Government? It has been held that it can do so under the combined operation of S 35 and this Rule. Though the Court fee may not be costs but only revenue so far as the Government is concerned it is costs incurred by the party paying it and S 35 is wide enough to cover such a case.²

5 Costs of successful defendant

This rule makes a provision for the payment of Court fees due to the Government and does not deal with the power of the Court to order costs of a defendant who has succeeded in a suit in forma pauperis. But it does not follow that in the case of a pauper suit the Court cannot order the plaintiff to pay the costs of the successful defendant. Orders as to costs as between the parties to the suit are governed by S 35 as much in suits by paupers as in other suits.³

Questions arising under Rr 10 to 12 between the Government and any of the parties are now questions to be determined under S 47 and therefore this rule operates as a bar to the institution of an independent suit whether by the Crown or any other party with reference to such matters.¹

The Rule provides that an order refusing an application to sue in forma pauperis shall operate as a bar to a similar subsequent application. It does not, however, bar a subsequent suit provided the costs of the Government and of the opposite party are paid.¹ Nor does the refusal of the pauper application bar an application for a review of that order.² As to whether the Court can after the refusal of the application, allow the pauper applicant to pay the requisite Court-fee within a time to be fixed by it and validate the plaint, see Note 10 to S 149 and the case cited below.³

The provisions of this rule apply also to applications for leave to appeal as a pauper.⁴

1 Scope of the Rule

This rule is new and entitles the Government to apply to the Court at any time to make an order under R 10 or R 11¹ In the undermentioned case² it was held that the present rule being a rule of procedure had a retrospective effect and applied to cases of dismissal of suits before the new Code came into force

2 Appeal

An order passed on an application by the Government under this rule for payment of Court fee is an order under S 47 and is therefore appealable¹ See Note 7 to R 10 ante

1 Scope and object of the Rule

This rule is new. It sets at rest the conflicting rulings of the several High Courts under the old Code as to whether the Government is to be deemed a party to the proper application and suit (See Note 7 to R 10). Questions arising under Rr 10 to 12 between the Government and any of the parties are now questions to be determined under S 47 and therefore this rule operates as a bar to the institution of an independent suit whether by the Crown or any other party with reference to such matters¹

2 Bar to subsequent application

The rule specifically provides that an order "refusing" the pauper application will operate as a bar to a subsequent application of the like nature in respect of the same right to sue R 7, ante, empowers the Court under the circumstances mentioned therein, either to allow or refuse to allow an application to sue as a pauper. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether an order of rejection of an application under R 5 of this Order is an order of 'refusal' within the meaning of this rule. In Atul Chandra Sen v Peary Mohun,¹ it was observed by the High Court of Calcutta that there is no distinction between an order of rejection under R 5 and an order of refusal under R 7 and both kinds of orders alike bar a subsequent application under this rule.

The order in that case was however, one passed after evidence and, therefore presumably one passed under R 7.² The High Courts of Allahabad³ Bombay⁴ Lahore⁵ Madras⁶ and Rangoon⁷ and the Chief Court of Oudh^{7a} have on the other hand, held that the bar under this rule does not extend to an order of rejection passed under R 5. It is submitted that the latter view is correct. The Calcutta High Court has, however, in a recent case^{7b} dissented from the decision in Atul Chandra Sen v Peary Mohun mentioned above and has followed the view of the other High Courts.

An order returning the application for presentation to the proper Court does not amount to an order of refusal within the meaning of this rule.⁸

The bar under this rule being one which affects the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain a fresh application, the Court is bound to take notice of it although it is raised at a late stage in subsequent proceedings.⁹

3 Dismissal of an application for default

According to the decision in the undermentioned case¹ of the High Court of Calcutta a dismissal of an application for default of appearance operates as a bar to the entertainment of a fresh application under this rule. But according to the other High Courts² such a dismissal does not amount to an order of refusal within the meaning of this rule and a second application is not barred. The High Court of Calcutta also, has, in a recent case^{2a} followed the view of these High Courts dissenting from the earlier decision of its own Court.

In Ranchod Marar v Bezant,³ it was held by the High Court of Bombay that an order rejecting the application as the applicant did not wish to proceed with the same amounted to an order of refusal within the meaning of the corres-

In suits relating to mortgages, Courts should be guided by the provisions of O 34 and not by the English practice.² The High Court on its original side is also governed by these provisions.³

This order applies not only to mortgages of immovable property but also to mortgages of *chattels*⁴ and to charges.⁵ See R 15 below. The provisions of this order have no application to suits under S 12 of the Redemption of Mortgages Act. Punjab Act 2 of 1913.⁶

2 Transfer of Property Act S 85

This Rule corresponds to S 85 of the Transfer of Property Act with the following material alterations —

- (1) The words "all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption" have been substituted for the words "All persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage".
- (2) The words "provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest which occurred at the end of S 85" have been omitted.
- (3) An explanation has been added.

The omission of the proviso to S 85 in the present Rule shows that a person may be a necessary party to a mortgage suit though the plaintiff may not be aware of that person's interest in the mortgaged property.¹ Cases under S 85 of the Transfer of Property Act bearing on the question of notice are only of academic interest now.²

The other effects of the changes introduced by the Rule have been discussed in their proper places in the commentary on this Rule.

3 Scope and object of the Rule

The object of the present Rule as to joinder of parties in mortgage suits is to avoid multiplicity of suits.¹ The Rule applies only to suits relating to mortgages (i.e. suits for sale, foreclosure or redemption) and to suits to enforce charges but not to suits for ejectment.² The Rule does not prohibit the joining of any party but merely lays down that all persons interested in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption should be made parties.³

5 Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption

Under S 85 of the Transfer of Property Act the plaintiff in a suit relating to a mortgage was bound to implead all persons having an interest in the "Property comprised in the mortgage" This gave rise to a conflict of decisions According to one view the words Property comprised in the mortgage referred to the interest, as distinguished from the physical property which the mortgagor was competent to transfer by way of mortgage at the date of the transaction¹ In other words, no person according to this view, who had no interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption could be made a party The High Court of Allahabad on the other hand held that the word property meant the physical property mortgaged and that it was therefore necessary to implead all persons claiming interest in the property though they had no interest in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption² The present rule has adopted the former view and the Allahabad view is now no longer law

All the High Courts were however agreed, even in cases coming under S 85 of the Transfer of Property Act that a person claiming adversely to the mortgagor and the mortgagee i e a person claiming a paramount title was not a necessary or a proper party to a suit relating to a mortgage³ The same principle has been held to apply under the present rule also⁴ Thus a person impleaded as the legal representative of a deceased mortgagor cannot have a paramount title to the property which he sets up adversely to the mortgagor determined in the suit⁵ A person who in a redemption suit claims the right of redemption in opposition to the plaintiff cannot be said to be claiming a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and the mortgagee and may be a proper party to the suit.⁶ The High Court of Madras seems to draw a distinction between a suit for redemption and a suit for the enforcement of a mortgage and is inclined to hold that persons claiming the property adversely to the mortgagor and mortgagee can be joined as parties to a suit for redemption. But the judgments in these cases do not show why the general rule as to the exclusion of questions relating to paramount or adverse title from mortgage suits should not apply to suits for redemption. On the other hand, it has been held by the Patna High Court⁸ that even in suits for redemption persons asserting a paramount title to the mortgaged property should not be joined as parties. Where a person asserting a paramount title to the property has been erroneously made a party to a suit relating to a mortgage he should be discharged from the suit.⁹ But an objection on the ground of the joinder of such a person is not one affecting jurisdiction but is only an irregularity in the matter of the joinder of parties and can be cured under S. 99 of the Code.¹⁰ Where therefore a party allows the suit to go on and the Court adjudicates on his claim to paramount title he will be bound by the decision and cannot subsequently contend that the question was not within the purview of the suit.¹¹ Moreover the rule as to the exclusion of paramount title is not an inflexible one and in proper cases persons asserting a paramount title to the property can be conveniently made parties to a mortgage suit and their claims can be adjudicated upon in such suit.¹² Thus, where the person claiming paramount or adverse title is in possession of the mortgaged property and is likely to resist the claim of the plaintiff if the latter succeeds in the suit, it may be convenient to join him as a party so as to avoid a multiplicity of suits.¹³ Similarly where it is alleged that the person claiming paramount title is only a benamudar for the mortgagor, he can be joined as a party to the suit and the question can be decided therein.¹⁴ So also in the case of mortgage of joint family property by the manager of joint Hindu family the other members of the family, who are joined as defendants to a suit on the mortgage can question the validity of the mortgage.¹⁵

Where a person is dismissed from a suit on a mortgage on the ground of his claiming a paramount title to the property, he cannot subsequently sue for redemption.¹⁶

The question whether a person other than one claiming a paramount title, may be made a party to a suit relating to a mortgage and whether the questions raised by him can be gone into in such suit will depend upon the applicability of the provisions of Orders 1 and 2 thereto. As has been seen in Note 30 to O 1, R 10 ante, questions raised purely as between the plaintiffs or between the defendants inter se and in which the opposite side is not concerned, are not questions involved in the suit and need not be gone into in the suit. Thus in a suit on a mortgage in favour of a deceased person a person claiming the estate of the deceased mortgagee in opposition to the plaintiff is not a necessary party to the suit.¹⁷ Similarly where the plaintiff mortgagee dies and some of his legal representatives are brought on the record, a person who claims also to be another legal representative cannot be added as party on that ground only and allowed to raise questions purely between himself and the rival claimants inter se.¹⁸ It has also been held similarly that a question of the relative liability of each of several co-mortgagors cannot be gone into in a mortgage suit.¹⁹

6 Parties to a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption

As has been seen in Note 5 ante, all persons having an interest in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption should be made parties to any suit relating to the mortgage. The interest should be one subsisting at the time of the suit.¹ Thus the owner of a contingent interest like that of a Hindu

it is alleged that the person claiming paramount title is only a benamidar for the mortgagor, he can be joined as a party to the suit and the question can be decided therein.¹⁴ So also in the case of mortgage of joint family property by the manager of joint Hindu family the other members of the family who are joined as defendants to a suit on the mortgage can question the validity of the mortgage.¹⁵

Where a person is dismissed from a suit on a mortgage on the ground of his claiming a paramount title to the property he cannot subsequently sue for redemption.¹⁶

The question whether a person other than one claiming a paramount title may be made a party to a suit relating to a mortgage and whether the questions raised by him can be gone into in such suit will depend upon the applicability of the provisions of Orders 1 and 2 thereto. As has been seen in Note 30 to O 1, R 10 ante, questions raised purely as between the plaintiffs or between the defendants inter se and in which the opposite side is not concerned are not questions involved in the suit and need not be gone into in the suit. Thus in a suit on a mortgage in favour of a deceased person a person claiming the estate of the deceased mortgagee in opposition to the plaintiff is not a necessary party to the suit.¹⁷ Similarly where the plaintiff mortgagee dies and some of his legal representatives are brought on the record a person who claims also to be another legal representative cannot be added as party on that ground only and allowed to raise questions purely between himself and the rival claimants inter se.¹⁸ It has also been held similarly that a question of the relative liability of each of several co mortgagors cannot be gone into in a mortgage suit.¹⁹

6 Parties to a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption

As has been seen in Note 5 ante all persons having an interest in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption should be made parties to any suit relating to the mortgage. The interest should be one subsisting at the time of the suit.⁴ Thus the owner of a contingent interest like that of a Hindu

The amended S 91 does not mention an attaching creditor as one of the persons entitled to redeem a mortgage and he is therefore no longer a necessary party to a mortgage suit.

The following are not necessary parties to a suit relating to a mortgage —

- (a) A prior mortgagee. See the explanation.
- (b) A person merely in possession of the mortgaged property.¹²
- (c) A person whose name is merely entered in the village papers as having some title to the plots in question, but who is in no way connected with the mortgage.¹³

7 Trustees executors or administrators

The rule is made "subject to the other provisions of the Code." This would include O 31, R 1 under which the trustee, executor or administrator in whom the property is vested can effectively represent the persons beneficially interested. The latter need not therefore be joined as parties to a suit relating to the mortgage.¹ But the Court has a discretion to join the beneficiaries in a proper case,² as for example when, in the case of an executor, the estate has been fully administered,³ or in the case of a trustee or an executor, his interest is adverse to that of the beneficiaries.⁴ In the case of joint-trustees however all of them should be impleaded in any suit relating to the mortgage.⁵

8 Benamidar

It is now well settled that a benamidar can sue or be sued in his own name and that the rule applies to mortgage suits also. The real owner is not a necessary party to such a suit. The contrary view, held in the undermentioned cases,² is not good law. There is, however, no impropriety in adding the real owner as a party in proper cases.³

9 Sub mortgagee

Where a mortgagee creates a mortgage of his rights in favour of another he is said to create a sub-mortgage. The sub-mortgagee is entitled to bring to sale the interest of the sub mortgagor in the mortgage¹ and the original mortgagor is not a necessary party to such a suit². Where the mortgagor is also made a party to the suit, the sub mortgagee may sue for sale or foreclosure of the mortgaged property itself in cases and in the circumstances which would have entitled the sub mortgagor on the date of the sub-mortgage to claim that relief, for the purpose of working out his rights against the sub-mortgagor³. The mortgagor is not a necessary party to a suit for redemption by the sub-mortgagor against his sub-mortgagee,⁴ though there is no impropriety in making him a party thereto⁵. In a suit for redemption by the mortgagor against his mortgagee, the sub mortgagee as being interested in the mortgage security (is a necessary party)⁶. But where the mortgagor, not having notice of the sub-mortgage, fails to implead him in such suit and pays off the mortgage amount to the mortgagee, the sub-mortgagee cannot, after that redemption, bring the right mortgaged to him to sale⁷. The reason is that he has only a terminable interest in the mortgage-right of his sub mortgagor and when that right has been legally terminated his security so far is gone.

10 Prior mortgagees—Explanation

Under S. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act it was held in some cases that a prior mortgagee was a necessary party to a suit to enforce or redeem a puisne mortgage¹. These cases have been superseded by the explanation

Where a decree for sale is passed on foot of a puisne mortgage, without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit the rights of the prior mortgagee are in no way affected and the sale under the decree can only be subject to the prior mortgage.⁵ Even if the prior mortgagee is made a party to the puisne mortgage's suit he is not bound to assert his prior right, if no relief is claimed against him and the priority of his right is not in any way impugned and the decree in the suit cannot affect his rights.⁶ But where he is impleaded and his prior right impugned or sought to be postponed in any way, he is bound to assert his right under the prior mortgage. Otherwise his right will be barred by constructive res judicata.⁷ When a prior mortgagee who has also purchased the equity of redemption and is in possession of the mortgaged property is made a defendant to a suit upon the puisne mortgage the decree may direct the puisne mortgagee to redeem the prior mortgage before bringing the property to sale.⁸

A holds a first and a third mortgage on a property B the holder of the second, i e, the intermediate mortgage impleads A as a defendant to the suit on the ground that he as a third mortgagee A is not bound to set up his prior mortgage inasmuch as the prior mortgage is not impugned.⁹ But he is not precluded from setting up the prior mortgage and if he so acts it up it should be adjudicated upon by the Court^{9a} Where A's claim to the priority rests not on a prior mortgage in his favour but on the fact of his being sub-rogated to the rights of a prior mortgagee by payment, he must assert the right to such priority on pain of being precluded by res judicata from putting it forward in a subsequent suit¹⁰ The reason is that in such a case he fills only one role, i.e., that of puisne mortgagee and must put forward all the defences open to him Where a person holds two mortgages on the same property, he can, by force of the explanation to the rule, sue on the later mortgage subject to his rights under the earlier mortgage¹¹ though according to the High Court of Allahabad he must expressly reserve his rights under the prior mortgage^{11a} The High Court of Bombay has, however, held that he cannot sue on the subsequent mortgage alone unless, perhaps, he reserves his rights on the first mortgage^{11b} But according to the general trend of decisions he cannot sue on his earlier mortgage only and afterwards sue to enforce the second mortgage¹² But a contrary view has also been taken in the undermentioned cases¹³ which proceed upon the ground that inasmuch as the two mortgages constitute different causes of action, there is nothing to prevent their being sued on separately without regard to the question whether the mortgage sued on it is an earlier or a later one

It was held by the High Court of Patna in the undermentioned cases¹⁴ that a mortgagee can bring the property to sale subject to a prior mortgage in his own favour, at any rate, when he was not able to sue on the first mortgage But the consensus of opinion seems to be that though the mortgagee may be allowed to sue separately on the mortgages and obtain decrees, he cannot be allowed to bring the property to sale twice or under one of his mortgages subject to the other,¹⁵ the reason being that it would not be equitable to the mortgagor to allow the mortgagee to do so, as a fair price cannot be obtained for the property at such a sale. The conflict has now practically been set at rest, in cases of mortgages coming into existence after the 1st April 1930, by the enactment of the new S 67-A of the Transfer of Property Act by which a mortgagee holding two or more mortgages shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary be bound to sue on all the mortgages. See also Note 40 to S 11 ante

11 Mahomedan co heirs

Where a Mahomedan mortgagor or mortgagee dies leaving a number of heirs the ordinary rule is that all the heirs should be made parties to a suit relating to the mortgage.¹ But the failure to join some of the heirs is not fatal to the suit and the decree passed will bind all the heirs.² It was so held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Khairajmal v Daim.³ The reason is, as has been already seen in Note 63-B to S 11 and Note 5 to S 52, ante, that the representatives actually brought on the record must, in the absence of fraud or collusion be deemed to be litigating in the common interest of themselves and of all the other heirs within the meaning of Expl VI of S 11 of the Code. Where however pending the suit objection is raised as to the non joinder of some of the heirs but the plaintiff refuses to make them parties the decree can bind only the right title and interest of the persons actually on the record.⁴ In view of the Privy Council decision referred to above the views expressed in the undermentioned cases⁵ that a decree against only some of the legal representatives of a deceased Mahomedan mortgagor is not binding on the other representatives or that there is some difference in principle between Mahomedan co-heirs and the members of a joint Hindu family in this respect cannot be accepted as correct especially as those cases do not advert to the Privy Council decision.

12 Joint Hindu family

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether, in a suit by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family to enforce or redeem a mortgage, the other members of the family are necessary parties in the sense that their interests will not be bound if they are not individually joined as parties. On the one hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Madras¹ and Patna² and in several cases of the other High Courts³ that in such a case the manager effectively represents the other members of the family and that the latter cannot impugn the proceedings as not binding on them merely on the ground of their not having been individually made parties to the suit. But in many other decisions,⁴ it has been held that the other co-parceners are necessary parties to the suit and that their interests cannot in any way be affected by the result of the suit. In this connection the following decisions of the Privy Council should be referred to.⁵ In *Kishan Prasad v. Har Narain*⁶ it was held that the manager of a joint Hindu family business effectively represents the family in all litigation by or against the family in connection with the joint family business. In *Sheo Shankar v. Juddoo Kunwar*⁷ the Privy Council observed as follows —

There seems to be no doubt upon the Indian decisions (from which their Lordships see no reason to dissent) that there are occasions, including foreclosure suits when the managers of joint Hindu families so effectively represent all other members of the family that the family as a whole is bound.

In *Ganpat Lal v. Bindleasin Prasad*⁸ a minor co-parcener sued for a declaration that his right to redeem a mortgage was unaffected by a sale under a decree passed against the manager without impleading him (the minor) as a party. Their Lordships rejected that claim holding that, after the purchase under his decree the mortgagee was in the position of a purchaser and that unless the sale and the decree were attacked in a properly constituted suit his possession could not be disturbed. In *Langan Gouda v. Basan Gauda*⁹ the Privy Council held that S. 11 Expl. VI was applicable to a joint Hindu family. In view of the foregoing decisions of the Privy Council the Madras and Patna view must be accepted as correct. See also Note 61 to S. 11 ante. Even granting that the son is a necessary party to a suit against the father, where he is impleaded as a legal representative of his father he cannot object to the decree in the executing Court on the ground of the plaintiff's failure to implead him.¹⁰ Nor does the plaintiff mortgagee lose his right to sue the son separately by his failure to join him in the suit against the father.¹¹

On the question whether in a suit by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family the manager should be expressly and specifically stated as swung

1. or as being sued in his representative capacity as manager, there is a conflict of decisions some cases holding that such express mention is not necessary,¹⁰ and others holding that it is.¹¹ The better view, it is submitted, is that the question whether a manager sues or is sued in a representative character is a question of fact in each case and his specific description as manager is not essential]

Although it may not be legally necessary to implead the other coparceners in a suit by or against a manager, yet, they would be proper parties to such a suit¹² Further the right of the other coparceners to object, not on the ground of their non-joinder but on the ground of the debt being not binding on them, or as being tainted with illegality or immorality, is not affected by proceedings to which they have not been parties¹³ But in a suit on a mortgage of joint family property where the manager is not made a party all the others are necessary parties¹⁴ Similarly, where the father is impleaded but he does not, or cannot, act in a representative character, the other members should be joined if their interests are sought to be affected¹⁵

To a suit to enforce the mortgage of the share of one co parcnor alone, the other co parcnors are not necessary parties.¹⁶ Similarly, where the mortgage is not a joint family transaction but one entered into by a member of the family in his individual capacity, the others are not necessary parties.¹⁷

Where the parties are not governed by Hindu Law, and the son, under the Customary Law is entitled only to a reversionary interest for the protection of which he has the right to interfere to prevent unnecessary alienations of the property the son's interest is not sufficient to entitle him to be made a party to a suit on the mortgage.¹⁹

13 Assignee of mortgage

In a suit for redemption of a mortgage against the assignee thereof, the original mortgagee is not a necessary party¹. But in a suit to enforce the mortgage brought by the assignee of the mortgage, the original mortgagee is a necessary party where the mortgagor denies receipt of consideration².

14 Receiver in insolvency

Where the mortgagor becomes insolvent after the date of the mortgage, the mortgagee bringing a suit on his mortgage is bound to implead the Official Receiver

Although the general rule is that a person claiming a paramount title is not a necessary party to a suit on the mortgage, yet, in some cases, it may be convenient to join the landlord of the mortgagor as a party thereto¹ (See Note 5, supra) Where the landlord is in possession of the mortgaged property not by virtue of a supreme title but by virtue of a title improperly and collusively obtained from the tenant under a decree for ejectment, he is a necessary party to the suit on the mortgage²

no relief could be given at all even as regards the parties actually on the record ⁴ If the party on the record effectually represents others not joined the decree will bind the interests of the latter also ⁵ The Court has also ample powers under O 1, R 10 to add, in proper cases, any parties it considers necessary for the disposal of the suit ⁶ In this connection reference may also be made to S 99 of the Code which lays down that a misjoinder (which includes non joinder) is not, in itself, a ground for reversing or varying a decree ⁷

But, although, the non joinder of persons who ought to have been joined as parties under this Rule is not fatal to the suit, the result of this cannot, in any way, affect the rights of such persons ⁸ Simple, as this proposition is its application to the complicated facts arising in mortgage suits has been the subject of a great diversity of judicial opinion In order to appreciate the various views properly, it is necessary to remember the following important principles —

- (1) Where an owner C mortgages his property to A by way of a simple mortgage, the mortgagee gets nothing more than a right to obtain from the Court an order that the property be sold for the recovery of the debt The mortgagor retains, in himself,

(a) a right to redeem the mortgage, and

- (b) a right to the physical possession and enjoyment of the mortgaged property⁹
- (2) Where the mortgage is a usufructuary one A will get a right to be in possession of the property until his debt is discharged, and C will retain only the right to redeem
- (3) Where C the mortgagor, sells his interest in the property to D, then, if the mortgage is a simple one D gets C's rights, viz, the right to redeem and the right to possession of the mortgaged property, if the mortgage is a usufructuary one he will get only the right to redeem the mortgage¹⁰
- (4) Where C after creating a mortgage in favour of A, creates a further mortgage in favour of B then, if the mortgage is a simple one, B will get
- a right to redeem the prior mortgage and
 - a right to obtain from the Court an order that the property be sold subject to the prior mortgage, for the recovery of his debt
- C* will retain the right to redeem both the mortgages plus the right to possession
- If B's mortgage is a usufructuary one, he will be entitled to a right to redeem the prior mortgage and a right to the possession of the property and C will be entitled only to a right to redeem both the mortgages
- (5) Where C makes several mortgages successively, in favour of different persons the later mortgagee is entitled to redeem the earlier one but the earlier ones cannot redeem the later ones, according to the maxim 'Redeem up and foreclose down'¹¹

We now proceed to consider the various classes of cases illustrating the application of the above principles —

- (1) C executes a simple mortgage in favour of A and then sells his interests in the mortgaged property to D. A files a suit on his mortgage, against C without impleading D, and, in execution of the decree obtained therein, purchases the property himself. Being obstructed by D in the possession proceedings, A sues D for possession. Is the suit maintainable? No¹². The reason is that D not having been made a party in A's suit on the mortgage, is not affected in any way by the decree and execution proceedings in such suit, and his right to possession cannot be disturbed. On the same principle, if D is dispossessed by A in execution, he can, in a suit by him against A, recover back possession unconditionally.¹³ There is no difference in principle in this respect even if D is a purchaser of C's interest in execution of a money decree against him, instead of in a private transfer.¹⁴ The remedy of A in such cases would be to file a fresh suit on his mortgage against D.¹⁵ He cannot, however, bring a fresh suit where his claim on the original mortgage is barred by limitation.¹⁶

It was, however, held in the undermentioned cases¹⁷ that the result of not impleading D or other person entitled to be in possession would be to make the decree so obtained ineffectual only against the right of redemption vested in such persons so that A would be entitled to possession against them subject to their right of redemption. It is submitted that this view is not correct. D has not only got a right of redemption but a right to the possession of the property as well. A decree to which he was not a party cannot affect him even in respect of the latter right.

(ii) The principles above stated in Class (i) will equally apply to cases where D, instead of being a purchaser of C's interest, is a usufructuary mortgagee in possession.¹⁸

(iii) C executes simple mortgages first in favour of A and then in favour of B. B sues on his mortgage without impleading A and, in execution of the decree obtained therein, purchases the property in Court auction and enters into possession. Thereafter, A sues on his mortgage without impleading B and purchases the same property in execution of his decree. It will be seen that, at the time of the suit by A the right to redeem and the right to possession of the property being already vested in B cannot be affected by A's suit to which he was not a party. It follows that A cannot maintain a suit for possession against *B*¹⁹ or a suit for possession subject to a redemption by *B*²⁰. He can, however, bring a fresh suit for sale on his mortgage against B provided of course that, on the date of such suit the claim on the mortgage is not barred by limitation.²¹

- (11) C executed simple mortgages first in favour of A and then in favour of B. A obtains a decree upon his mortgage without impleading B and in execution thereof purchases the property himself and obtains possession. B thereafter files a suit on his mortgage purchases the same property in execution of his decree and then sues A for possession. Does the suit lie? No.²² The reason is that at the time of B's suit on the mortgage the right to redeem and the right to possession having both already vested in A the latter cannot be affected by anything done in B's suit. B has, however, two remedies open to him, viz., (a) to redeem²³ and (b) to sue A for sale on the subsequent mortgage subject to the prior mortgage.²⁴ If B adopts the former remedy and redeems A the latter, in his turn, as owner of the equity of redemption can redeem B.²⁵ Both these rights can, however, be adjusted on equitable grounds in the same suit.²⁶ If B adopts the latter remedy, A can, is impleaded in B's suit A's remedy is to avail of Rules 12 and 13 of this Order or to redeem B. If not the only other remedy of A is to sue in equity claim that B should redeem the prior mortgage rights vested in him before disturbing his possession.²⁷ In other words A can set up his prior mortgage as a shield against the claim of B.²⁸ This right of A is a weapon of defence and not of attack,²⁹ and can be set up notwithstanding the claim on the mortgage itself is barred by limitation.³⁰

(i) C makes a mortgage in favour of A. Thereafter in execution of a money decree against C the mortgaged property is attached and sold and is purchased by D. Pending the attachment A purchases by private sale the property from C in satisfaction of the mortgage and enters into possession. In a suit by D against A for recovery of possession can A set up his mortgage as a shield as a defence to the suit? No.³¹ The reason is that the private purchase of A pending attachment is void against all claims of D arising under the attachment and does not convey the equity of redemption to A. The prior mortgage can be used as a shield only for the purpose of protecting a possession to which the person setting it up has become lawfully entitled and since in the case above referred to A had no valid title to such possession as against D he cannot use his prior mortgage as a shield in D's suit to recover possession.

(ii) C executes simple mortgages first in favour of A and then in favour of B. A sues C on his mortgage without impleading B. B also institutes a parallel suit on his own mortgage without impleading A. A purchases, pending B's suit, the mortgaged property in execution of his decree and thereafter B purchases the same property in execution of his decree. If the doctrine of lis pendens applies to the case then A's purchase cannot take effect as against B's and therefore B will be entitled to possession as against A. A's remedy will then be to file a fresh suit for sale against B.³² Further on the analogy of the principle stated in Class (v) above, A not being entitled to possession cannot hold up his prior mortgage as a shield against B's suit for possession. tioned cases however, while holding that the doctrine of lis pendens applies to such cases, have nevertheless come to the conclusion that A can get a decree for possession subject to redemption by B.³³ The High Court of Allahabad has in a recent Full Bench case³⁴ held that the doctrine of lis pendens applies to such cases but has in a somewhat contrary manner come to conclusions which can only follow on the basis that the doctrine does not apply. Thus it has formulated the following conclusions —

If A sues B as plaintiff for possession, then

- (1) if he was the earlier purchaser (i e purchaser pending B's suit) in point of time he can redeem B and recover possession even though his (A's) mortgage is barred by time,
- (2) if he is the later purchaser (i e, if B's purchase is pending A's suit) then his suit even for redemption cannot be decreed

If B sues A as plaintiff for possession then

- (1) if B is the earlier purchaser in point of time he must redeem A and A cannot compel B to submit to redemption by him
- (2) if B is the later purchaser in point of time he must first redeem A but A will have the right to redeem B next and regain possession

The High Courts of Madras³⁵ and Calcutta³⁶ have held that the doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to legal proceedings to enforce mortgages and that therefore a sale in pursuance of a mortgage decree the mortgage having been executed before the institution of the suit is not affected by the doctrine of lis pendens. According to this view the first purchaser will be entitled to possession as against the later purchaser a result which is practically the same as that of the Full Bench case of the Allahabad High Court referred to above.

In the principles discussed in the several classes of cases discussed above, there is no distinction between the case of a mortgagee purchaser and a stranger purchaser as can be seen from an examination of the cases above referred to.³⁷ When the puisne mortgagee who has not been impleaded in a suit on the prior mortgage seeks to redeem a prior mortgage it was held before the Transfer of Property Act was passed that he should pay the amount due under the prior mortgage without any reference to the decree that was passed in the prior mortgage.³⁸ But S 89 of the said Act provided that when once a final decree was passed on a mortgage the mortgage security and the right to redeem were both extinguished, with the result that thereafter the rights of the parties fell to be a decree.³⁹ Even subsequent to the Transfer of Pro party Act the earlier view is adopted in many cases⁴⁰ In O 34 R 5 which has taken the place of S 89 of that Act the words as to the mortgage security being extinguished have been omitted The result now is the same as was held by the decisions prior to the Transfer of Property Act namely, that the puisne mortgagee seeking to redeem the prior mortgagee should pay the amount due under the prior mortgage and not merely the amount due under the decree thereon⁴¹ He is not however bound to pay for any improvements made by the purchaser⁴² Where a puisne mortgagee is impleaded in a suit to enforce a prior mortgage and a decree for sale or foreclosure is passed on the mortgage the effect is to extinguish his security if he does not exercise his right of redemption or his security is not expressly saved⁴³ It was held in the undermentioned cases⁴⁴ that the puisne mortgagee is not entitled in such a case to insist that the mortgagor should redeem his mortgage also his cause of action being altogether different from that of the prior mortgagee Similarly it was held if the puisne mortgagee pays off the prior mortgage he cannot apply for an order absolute for the amounts of both the mortgages⁴⁵ But the said case is of doubtful authority now since express provision is made in Rr 2 and 4 for the adjudication of the rights of subsequent mortgagees who are joined as parties to a suit on the prior mortgage See also Forms Nos 9 10 and 11 of App D These legislative changes only give effect to an old practice as can be seen from the case mentioned below⁴⁶ See also the undermentioned cases⁴⁷

20 A person cannot be both a plaintiff and a defendant

Suppose A and B are the first mortgagees and I and C are the puisne mortgagees of a property. In a suit by A and B for foreclosure of their mortgage, C alone can be joined as defendant as a puisne mortgagee because A cannot be both plaintiff and defendant in the same suit¹. The same person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant in a suit even in different capacities².

21 Joinder of parties

A misjoinder of plaintiffs in a mortgage suit, some of whom are not entitled to any relief, is a mere defect of form and is not fatal to the suit¹. This Rule does not prohibit the joinder of any person² whom it is proper to add under the provisions of O 1 Rr 1 and 3. Where, after the commencement of the trial of a suit, an application is made to the Court for adding persons alleged to be interested in the subject matter of the suit, the matter is in the discretion of the Court, it may, in a proper case decline under O 1, R 10 to add the parties sought to be impleaded³. As to the effect of joining new parties after the period of limitation, see Limitation Act S 22, and the undermentioned cases⁴.

22 Revision

It has been held by the High Court of Patna that S 115 does not apply to the case of a mere refusal to add a person as a plaintiff in a mortgage suit but that, if the result amounts to a denial of a fair trial, the High Court can interfere under S 107 of the Government of India Act¹. An order discharging necessary parties from the suit is open to revision².

1 Legislative changes

The Rule has been extensively amended by 'the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, (XXI of 1929) The old Rule ran as follows —

'2 In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—

- ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage and for the costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or
- declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree and directing—
- that if the defendant pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the defendant free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property, but

- (d) that if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court the defendant shall be debarred from all right to redeem the property

The following important changes may be noted —

- (1) The present Rule makes it clear that the decree under it is a preliminary decree
- (2) Under the old Rule it was not clear when accounts were directed to be taken whether they were to be taken up to the date of declaring in Court the amount due or up to the date fixed for payment. It is now provided that the accounts are to be taken up to the date of the preliminary decree
- (3) The provision as to other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security is new
- (4) The new Rule makes it clear as to when the period fixed for payment commences to run
- (5) The provision in (c) (i) relating to subsequent costs and subsequent interest is new
- (6) The same Sub Rule makes it clear that the re-transfer is to be at the mortgagee's costs
- (7) Under the same Sub Rule the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree on default by the mortgagor
- (8) The provision as to the Court's power to extend time which was contained in the proviso to Sub R (2) in the old R 3 has been enacted as Sub R (2) of this Rule
- (9) Sub R (3) makes express provision for the form of decree in cases where subsequent mortgagees are made parties

2 Analogous law — T P Act S 86

This Rule corresponds to S 86 of the Transfer of Property Act, with the following differences —

- (1) Under R 2 payment has to be made in all cases into the Court while under S 86 payment could be made to the plaintiff or into the Court
- (2) The words "if so required" have been added to Sub R (1) (c) (i) as it was found that, in the moffusal Courts it was not the practice for the mortgagee to execute a re-conveyance of the property to the mortgagor

3 Scope and object of the Rule

The scheme and object of this order is "that a general account should be taken once for all, and an aggregate amount be stated in the decree for principal interest and costs due on a fixed day and that after the expiration of that day, if the property be not redeemed, the matter shall pass from the domain of contract to that of judgment and the rights of the mortgagee should thenceforth depend not on the contents of the bond but on the directions in the decree"¹

The object of the Rule is to prevent mortgagees from realising their securities otherwise than in the mode prescribed by the Rule²

4 Persons entitled to the right of foreclosure

Under S 67 of the Transfer of Property Act, as it existed before it was amended by Act XX of 1929, the remedy by way of foreclosure was available only in the case of

- (1) a mortgagee by conditional sale,
- (2) an English mortgage, and
- (3) an equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds in Bombay¹

The newly amended S 67 now provides that no mortgagee "other than a mortgagee by conditional sale or a mortgagee under an anomalous mortgage by the terms of which he is entitled to foreclose," can institute a suit for foreclosure². It follows that neither a mortgagee under an English mortgage, nor an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds in Bombay can sue for foreclosure. Then remedy is only to sue for sale. By S 15 of the Amending Act XXI of 1929, however the remedy of the equitable mortgagee in Bombay to proceed by way of foreclosure was kept open till 1st April 1932.

The characteristic of a foreclosure decree is that it completely extinguishes the mortgagor's right to redeem and thereafter makes the mortgagee owner of the property. A mortgagee who has obtained a preliminary decree for foreclosure is entitled to apply for setting aside an execution sale under O 21, R 90 on the ground of material irregularity³.

5 Form of preliminary decree

See also appendix D, Forms 3, 3-A, 9 and 10

In a preliminary decree for foreclosure, the Court cannot, except with the consent of parties, direct payment of the mortgage money by instalments¹. But where a preliminary decree allowing payment by instalments is passed by consent of parties, it does not necessarily fall outside the scope of R 2, the provisions of Rr 2 and 3 may still apply to such a decree². A preliminary decree for foreclosure which does not conform to the form prescribed by this Rule is irregular, but after it is made absolute, the defendant cannot object to delivery of possession under the decree to the decree holder³.

6 'Ordering that an account be taken'

The amount (whether the accounts are directed to be taken or not) is to be calculated up to the date of the preliminary decree. The object of the Rule is that a general account should be taken of all amounts due between the parties once for all and that the aggregate amount should be declared as due to the plaintiff on payment of which the property is to be redeemed¹. The accounts have to be taken before the final decree, they cannot be directed to be taken in execution of the final decree². In the taking of such accounts, not only sums due by the mortgagor but also those due by the mortgagee should be taken into consideration³. If the decree is silent as to the person selected to take the accounts, the parties may themselves select a person to do so and his award will be binding on them⁴. The accounting is however to be restricted to the mortgage transaction in question in the suit and should not be extended to other transactions between the parties⁵. For other cases on this part of the subject see the undermentioned cases⁶.

7 Principal

The onus of proving the amount due to him is initially on the mortgagee. Hence if the mortgage deed is not properly stamped and the mortgagee refuses to pay the stamp duty and penalty with the result that the mortgage deed is inadmissible in evidence the mortgagee cannot recover anything, beyond what the mortgagor admits to be due¹.

The statement in the mortgage deed is prima facie proof of the amount due². But the mortgagor can plead a total or partial discharge of the debt or that the recital is to consideration in the bond is wholly or partially untrue³. But in such a case the burden will be upon him to substantiate his allegations. It is not for the mortgagee to prove that the consideration stated in the bond was actually paid by him⁴. But recitals in deeds are not evidence against third parties⁵.

Where only part of the alleged consideration is proved to have been paid, the mortgage is valid to the extent of the part so paid⁶. Similarly in the case of a mortgage of property belonging to a Hindu joint family, where it is proved that only a part of the consideration was supported by legal necessity, the mortgage is valid and binding to that extent⁷.

8 Interest

By the Act XVI of 1929, a new Rule (Rule 11) has been enacted which deals specially with the power of the Court to order payment of interest in mortgage suits. See the notes under that Rule for full information on the subject. According to Section 58 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act mortgage money includes interest on the principal secured by the mortgage. This principle is recognised by the present Rule which inter alia makes the payment of the interest, provided in the mortgage deed, a condition of redemption. In the absence of anything to the contrary in the mortgage deed,¹ interest as well as the

9 Interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment

Before the amendment of the Rule by Act XXI of 1929 there was no provision either in R 2 or R 3 for the payment of interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment. Hence there was lack of uniformity in the decisions on the question¹. Express provision has now been made for the inclusion in the preliminary decree for foreclosure of a direction for the payment of "subsequent interest up to the date of actual payment". For fuller information on the subject see Notes under R 11 below.

10 Rule of damdupat—See Note 16 to S 34

11 Costs of the suit

The general rule in all suits relating to mortgages is that the mortgagee is entitled to his costs. But it is within the power of the Court, in view of the mortgagee's conduct and the peculiar circumstances of any case, to refuse to award him any costs¹. Ordinary costs awarded against a mortgagor are part of the mortgage money and are recoverable from out of the mortgaged property². But the Court can in the exercise of its discretion under S 35, make such costs recoverable from the mortgagor personally³. Where a defendant in a mortgage suit claiming title paramount to that of the mortgagor is struck off from the array of parties and is awarded costs the mortgagor who is in no way responsible for it or the mortgaged property should not be made liable for such costs^{4a}.

A puisne mortgagee who is made a party to a suit on the mortgage is also entitled to his costs against the mortgagor⁴. Similarly a co-mortgagee is also entitled to his costs even though he refused to join the plaintiff in a suit on a

12 Other costs charges and expenses

The Rule as amended by Act XXI of 1929 makes express provision for payment to the mortgagee of all expenses properly incurred by him in respect of the mortgage security, together with interest thereon.^{1a} Even prior to Act XXI of 1929 the mortgagee was entitled in a suit on the mortgage to claim as part of the mortgage money, expenses properly incurred by him for the preservation of the mortgaged property, the protection of his title to the property etc.¹ (See Transfer of Property Act, Ss 72 and 63 A) R 10 below also provides for the payment of such expenses incurred subsequent to the preliminary decree up to date of payment

13 Account against mortgagee in possession

Under S 77 of the Transfer of Property Act a mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property is not liable to account for the rents and profits of the property where under the terms of the mortgage the mortgagee is to take rents and profits in lieu of interest or in lieu of interest and defined portions of the principal. In other cases a mortgagee in possession is liable to account for the rents and profits of the property. Under S 76 (g) of the Transfer of Property Act he must keep clear full and accurate accounts of all sums received and spent by him as mortgagee¹ and is bound to deduct the rents and profits realised by him from the amount claimed by him against the mortgagor.² Further he is liable to pay a reasonable occupation rent if he is personally in possession of the land.³ He must also in the absence of a contract to the contrary, pay the Government revenue and all charges of a public nature and all rents accruing due in respect of the property, and if owing to his default, the mortgagor has to pay any of these items of expenditure he is entitled to a set off in respect thereof.⁴ [See Transfer of Property Act, S 76 (c)]

15 Subsequent mortgagees

The form of the preliminary decree given in the present Rule should be adapted to the circumstances of each case. Where puisne mortgagees are impleaded as parties in a suit on a prior mortgage a form similar to the one in use in the Chancery Division in the High Court in England may be found useful¹ (See also Appendix D forms 9 to 11). The chief point to be noted in such cases is to give effect to the principle redeem up, and foreclose down. The first right of redemption belongs to the next puisne mortgagee. If he makes default, he is foreclosed and the right to redeem devolves on the next puisne mortgagee and in the event of his default the right belongs to the next mortgagee and the process goes on until the mortgagor is reached. If the mortgagor also fails to redeem he will be foreclosed².

A subsequent mortgagee who has been added as a party to a suit for foreclosure by a prior mortgagee and who pays off the decree amount can, on his being transposed as plaintiff apply for a final decree³.

16 Pays into Court

Under S 86 of the Transfer of Property Act the defendant could pay the mortgage money under the preliminary decree to the mortgagee plaintiff direct or into the Court¹. But the present Rule requires the payment to be made only into the Court in all cases². As to when and how far a payment made out of Court can be recognized by the Court dealing with an application to pass a final decree, see Note 14 to R 5 infra.

17 On a day within six months

The Rule only fixes the outer limit for the period to be fixed for the payment of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree. The Court has a discretion to fix any smaller period it thinks fit¹. Where accounts are directed to be taken, the six months period should be calculated not from the date of the preliminary decree, but from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the accounts taken under its decree². [See Sub R (1) Cl (c) and Sub Cl (i)]. As to the question whether, when the preliminary decree is appealed against, the period fixed for payment runs from the date of the first Court's decree or from the date of the appellate decree (See also Note 5 to R 3 and Note 9 to S 148).

18 Extension of time

Sub R (2) of this Rule which corresponds to the proviso to the old Sub R (2) of R 3 empowers the Court on good cause being shown to extend the time fixed for payment of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree¹ But the mortgagor is not entitled to an extension of time *as of right*² The Rule itself provides that extension of time may be granted on good cause shown³ It is not a good ground for extending the time that the mortgagor was under a misconception that payment within the period fixed was unnecessary⁴ As to what constitutes good cause see the undermentioned cases^{4a} Time may be extended even after the expiry of the period originally fixed⁵ provided a final decree has not been passed⁶ As the right to redeem continues until the final decree is actually passed⁷ the mortgagor may pay in the money at any time before the final decree is passed though there may not be an express order extending the period⁸ This is made clear now by the substitution of the words 'before a final decree has been passed' at the beginning of R 3 in place of the words "on or before the day fixed" which occurred in the old Rule. Even where a preliminary decree is passed by consent of parties, the Court can exercise its power of extending the period fixed for payment if there is nothing in the decree excluding such power.⁹

An express application for extension of time is not necessary.¹¹ Nor need the application where one is made be in writing.¹¹ But the Court cannot postpone the passing of a final decree on the application of a third party.¹²

19 Plaintiff to apply for final decree

The Rule [Sub R (1) (c) Sub Cl (ii)] makes it clear that plaintiff has to apply for a final decree for foreclosure if the defendant fails to pay the mortgage money within the time fixed by the Court. In one case it was contended that a final decree passed on the application of the transferee from the mortgagee was not binding on the mortgagor. It was held that as the decree was passed in the presence of the mortgagor he could not subsequently object to it.¹

20 Mortgage of chattels and intangible property

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that a mortgagee of chattels is entitled to sue for foreclosure.¹ The High Court of Bombay, the Judicial Commissioners Courts of Nagpur² and Oudh³ on the other hand have held that he is not so entitled. A mortgagee of a turn of worship is entitled according to the Calcutta High Court to sue for foreclosure of that right⁴ the turn of worship being regarded as intangible property.

1 Transfer of Property Act S 87

This Rule corresponds to S 87 of the Transfer of Property Act with the following differences —

- (1) The present Rule provides for the passing of a decree when the defendant pays up the mortgage money within the time allowed. But, S 87 merely provided that in such a case the defendant should if necessary be put in possession of the mortgaged property.
- (2) Under the present Rule if the defendant does not pay the mortgage money within the time allowed a final decree is passed. But under S 87 the procedure was to pass an order absolute for foreclosure.

2 Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929

The present Rule has been amended by Act XXI of 1929. The chief points of distinction between the old Rule and the new Rule are —

- (1) The words before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed have been substituted for the words on or before the day fixed.
- (2) Under the amended Rule the defendant mortgagee has to apply to the Court for a decree in his favour if he pays the mortgage money within the time allowed. The old Rule did not require this.
- (3) The new Rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under it is a final decree.
- (4) The proviso to Sub R (2) of the old Rule regarding the Court's power to extend the time fixed for payment of the mortgage money has been transferred to R (2) above.
- (5) Sub R (3) makes it clear that the passing of a final decree for foreclosure discharges not only the mortgage debt but all liability of the defendant in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit thereon.

3 Where before a final decree has been passed debarring defendant from all right to redeem

The substitution of the words 'before a final decree has been passed' etc for the words on or before the day fixed now makes it clear that though a mortgagee has not paid the mortgage money under the preliminary decree for foreclosure within the time allowed by the Court he does not lose his right to redeem but can exercise the right till a final decree for foreclosure is actually passed¹. In view of this the under mentioned decisions² prior to the Transfer of Property

(Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929 which disclose a conflict of judicial opinion are only of academic interest now. Where a mortgagee after the date fixed for payment but before a final decree for foreclosure is passed enters into possession of the mortgaged property he does so in his capacity as mortgagee and not as owner³. But if he remains in possession and the mortgagor keeps quiet for a long time the mortgagor will be held to have acquiesced in the mortgagee holding the property as his own and may thus be deprived of his right on the ground of estoppel⁴.

5 Effect of appeal on time fixed for payment

O 41 R 5 expressly provides that an appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from, except so far as the appellate Court may order to that effect. Hence the mere pendency of an appeal from the preliminary decree does not extend the time fixed, and is no bar to the passing of a final decree¹ unless the appellate Court expressly or by necessary implication extends the period for payment². Nor is it a ground for enlarging the time fixed by the preliminary decree for payment³.

As to the effect of a decree passed in, or dismissal of, the appeal on the time fixed by the preliminary decree, see S 148, Note 9, and the undermentioned cases⁴.

6 Where payment in accordance with Sub R (1) has not been made

A mortgagee is not bound to accept a smaller sum than that due as part satisfaction of his decree but is entitled to insist on a final decree for foreclosure being passed in his favour where the whole of the amount found due to him is not paid into the Court¹. But this principle only applies where there is no dispute as to the sum due². Thus, where the mortgagor deposits in Court the sum found

7 Final decree for foreclosure

The Rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under this Rule is a final decree. The procedure under the Transfer of Property Act was to obtain an order absolute for foreclosure or sale.⁵

An application for a final decree for foreclosure should be made by the plaintiff⁶ and he should make it to the Court of first instance even though the preliminary decree was modified in appeal.⁷ But a defendant who is present and allows a final decree to be passed on the application of a transferee from the plaintiff will be estopped from questioning the validity of the decree afterwards.⁸

The legal representatives of a party who dies after a preliminary decree can and should be brought on record under the provisions of O 22 in the proceedings to obtain the final decree inasmuch as the suit must be deemed to be pending till a final decree is passed.⁹ But a person, who was not a party to the preliminary decree, cannot be added as a party to the proceedings to obtain a final decree.¹⁰

No notice is necessary to be given under this Rule to the defendant before a final decree is passed,⁷ though, in practice, it is generally given on grounds of justice and equity.⁸ Notice is, however, necessary where the defendant happens to be a minor.⁹ But the failure to give notice is, if anything, only an irregularity and, unless the merits of the case are affected, will not invalidate the proceedings.¹⁰

215 But where mortgaged property is transferred after preliminary decree the final decree is binding on the transferee even though he was not a party—He is affected by his pendens and the decree can be executed against him]

An ex parte final decree can be set aside under O 9, R 13 if 'sufficient cause' within the meaning of that Rule is established¹¹. The dismissal for default of an application for a final decree does not preclude a fresh application for the same purpose¹².

The procedure for obtaining a final decree applies to preliminary decrees passed in compromise between the parties¹³ unless the decree by its terms provides for execution on default without any fresh decree being passed¹⁴. A confit or decree for foreclosure is not contemplated by the Rule¹⁵.

Where a party is entitled to pre-emption on foreclosure the right arises not on the expiry of the period fixed for payment but on the passing of the final decree for foreclosure¹⁶ as until then the ownership of the mortgaged property vests in the mortgagor¹⁷.

An omission to draw up a final decree is only an irregularity so that where a Court erroneously passed an order absolute instead of a final decree it was held that the order could be enforced by execution¹⁸. See also the undermentioned cases¹.

8 Partial foreclosure

The nature of the proceedings for foreclosure is such that a mortgage must be foreclosed as a whole and not at all. Thus where a suit for foreclosure is decreed only with respect to some of the properties but dismissed with regard to others and an appeal is filed from that portion of the decree which dismisses the suit, the mortgagor cannot first obtain a final decree in respect of the portion of the decree favourable to him and then on succeeding in the appeal as to the rest another final decree in respect thereof¹.

9 Discharge of debt etc. on foreclosure

The present Rule makes it clear that on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure not only the mortgage debt but all the defendant's liabilities in respect of the mortgage as well as for the costs of the suit become discharged¹. The mortgagor's right to redeem revives if notwithstanding the foreclosure the mortgagee pursues his personal remedy against the mortgagor. Where a person holding several mortgages on the same property forecloses under the first mortgage, it will be inequitable to allow him to sue the mortgagor personally for the debt secured by the second mortgage.³

See the undermentioned case⁴

10 Delivery of title deeds

A mortgagor can institute a separate suit to recover compensation for loss of title deeds the Court may also grant in the mortgage decree itself an alternative relief for damages for such loss. But if no such alternative relief for damages is provided for in the preliminary and final decrees the Court cannot grant it in execution.¹

11 Limitation for application for final decree—See Note 12 R 5 infra

12 Application for execution of final decree

An application for the execution of a final decree is governed by Art 182 of the Limitation Act.¹

A final decree in a mortgage suit may be adjusted out of Court like any other decree and O 21 R 2 applies thereto. Where a mortgage decree is time barred it cannot be enforced, the mortgage itself having merged in the decree.³ S 48 of the Code applies to a final decree under O 34 though the preliminary decree on which it was based had been passed under the Transfer of Property Act.⁴ Where in a foreclosure decree against the defendants costs are awarded to the defendants O 21 R 19 is no bar to their executing the decree for costs.⁵ Where a foreclosure decree contains no direction for delivery of possession the mortgagee cannot obtain possession by applying in execution. The proper course is to apply for an order for possession.⁶

13 Appeal

It is clear under O 34 that a final decree is a decree and appealable as such. Even under the Transfer of Property Act an order absolute was held to be appealable as a decree.¹

14 Court fee

Ad valorem Court fee is payable on an appeal against a final decree in a mortgage suit.¹

R. 4. [New ; Act IV of 1882 S 88] (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a preliminary decree³ to the effect mentioned in clauses (a) (b) and (c) (i) of sub rule (1) of Rule (2), and further directing⁴ that in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what has been found or declared under or by the preliminary decree due to the plaintiff together with such amount as may have been adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs¹² charges, expenses and interest,¹¹ and the balance if any be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court from time to time, at any time before a final decree for sale is passed, extend the time⁸ fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

(3) In a suit for foreclosure in the case of an anomalous mortgage, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court may, at the instance of any party to the suit or of any other person interested in the mortgage-security or the right of redemption, pass a like decree⁹ (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum fixed by the Court to meet the expenses of the sale and to secure the performance of the terms

(4) Where, in a suit for sale or a suit for foreclosure in which sale is ordered, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from or subrogated to the rights of any such mortgagees, are joined as parties, the preliminary decree referred to in sub-rule (1) shall provide for the adjudication⁶ of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9, Form No 10 or Form No 11, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

The provision as to the payment of subsequent costs and interest to the mortgagee out of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property is new. The present Rule is not retrospective in effect so as to affect decrees already passed under the Transfer of Property Act at the time of coming into force of the new Code¹

2 Amendments subsequent to 1908

The present Rule has been amended extensively by the Transfer of Property (Amendment Supplementary) Act, XXI of 1923. The material changes introduced by the amendment are as follows—

- (1) The new Rule makes it clear that the decree under it is a primary decree.
- (2) If the mortgagor makes default in payment the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale.
- (3) The Rule makes it clear that the mortgagees should be paid out of the sale proceeds not only subsequent costs and interest but also subsequent charges and expenses properly incurred in respect of the mortgage security.
- (4) Sub R (2) enables the Court to extend the time fixed for payment. There was no such provision in the old Rule.
- (5) Sub R (3) corresponding to Sub R (2) of the old Rule is now expressly limited to anomalous mortgages while Sub R (2) of the old Rule applied to all mortgages other than mortgages by conditional sale

- (b) Sub R (4) makes express provision for the adjudication of the rights of subsequent mortgages who are joined as parties to a suit by a prior mortgage

3 Who may obtain a decree for sale

The right to sue for sale or foreclosure is conferred by S 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. A decree for sale cannot be obtained by a usufructuary mortgage as such a mortgage by conditional sale as such. Such a decree can be obtained only by a simple mortgage in English mortgage, an equitable mortgage and in anomalous mortgage. See Note 4 to R 2 and the under-mentioned cases.¹ As to the rights of sub mortgages see Note 9 to R 1

The High Court of Madras has held that a mortgagee of chattels is entitled to obtain a decree for sale in enforcement of his mortgage quite as much as a mortgagee of immovable property.² See also Note 1 to Rule 1 and Note 20 to Rule 2 out

4 Decree for money in suit for sale

In a suit on a mortgage it is open to a mortgagee to relinquish his security and to content himself with a simple money decree.¹ A money decree for money which creates a charge on immovable property for the decretal amount² or which authorises the decree holder to enforce the decree by selling certain property³ is not a preliminary decree on a mortgage under this Rule

5 Form of decree

The forms in Appendix D for decrees in suits relating to mortgages have been recently changed by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929. For the form of preliminary decree in suit for sale, see Appendix D 1 in Nos 5 and 5 A

In framing decrees in mortgage suits the provisions contained in O 34 should not be overlooked.¹ A preliminary decree in a mortgage suit must fix a period within which the mortgagor should pay the mortgage money and the decree should direct a sale of the property only if the mortgagor fails to pay the money within the period fixed.

sold in execution of the decree—
Sale confirmed—Held that right to redemption was barred]

It will be noted that the form of a preliminary decree for sale under this Rule does not contain any provision regarding the mortgagor's personal liability. Any decree which contains such a provision is in contravention of the Rules which contemplate the determination of the question only when the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property are not sufficient to pay off the mortgage debt.³ Accounts between the mortgagor and the mortgagee should be taken before passing the final decree. A direction in the decree for taking accounts in execution is against law.⁴ A decree directing sale of the mortgaged property in default of the mortgage money being paid within a fixed time⁵ or a decree for the debt which provides that the mortgaged property shall be liable for the debt⁶ is in substantial compliance with the present Rule. Where a decree purporting to be a decree on a mortgage is ambiguous it should be construed so as to accord with the law.⁷ See the following cases as regards the construction of mortgage decrees.⁸

6 Contents of decree in suit for sale by first mortgagee

For the form of a preliminary decree in a suit for sale impleading the mortgagor and a paisne mortgagee see Appendix D, Form 9. For the form of a decree in a suit by paisne mortgagee for redemption of a prior mortgage and for foreclosure or sale on the paisne mortgage, see Form 10 in Appendix D. In a suit on a prior mortgage in which paisne mortgagees are also impleaded as parties, each of them is entitled to an order that an account be taken of the amount due to him and to a declaration of his right to participate in the surplus sale proceeds remaining after paying off the prior mortgagees in the order of his priority.¹ But the paisne mortgagee's right is dependent on a sale being held under the prior mortgage. Hence where the prior mortgage is paid off before the sale under it is held the paisne mortgagee cannot ask for a sale of the property.² Where the paisne mortgage includes some properties in addition to those mortgaged to the prior mortgagee the paisne mortgagee cannot ask that if the sale proceeds of the properties subject to the prior mortgage are not sufficient to pay off both the prior and the paisne mortgages the additional properties subject to the paisne mortgage should also be sold. His right is only to have his mortgage debt satisfied out of the sale proceeds of the properties subject to the prior mortgage.³ In a suit by a prior mortgagee impleading both the mortgagor and the puisne mortgagee the mortgager cannot be called upon to pay off both the mortgages on pain of his property being sold. The puisne mortgagee's right to have his mortgage debt satisfied out of the surplus sale proceeds is not affected by such sale proceeds being withdrawn from the Court by a person having notice of the puisne mortgagee's title.⁵

7 Court's power to adjust equities

Where a sale of the mortgaged properties is impossible as where the mortgaged properties have been sold for arrears of revenue or of rent the decree must be suitably modified. The Court has inherent power, in such cases to give appropriate directions for the disposal of the fund which represents the property.¹ See also Note 19 to R 1

8 Power to extend time in suit for sale—Sub R (2)—See also Note 15 to R 2

The provision in Sub R (2) enabling the Court to extend the time fixed for payment of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree is new. There was no such provision before the amendment of the present Rule by Act XXI of 1929.¹ Hence, it was held that the Court had no power to extend the period fixed for payment of the mortgage money under a preliminary decree for sale.² It was, however, open to the mortgagor to prevent a sale at any time before it was actually held, by payment under O 21, R 69.³ Even after the sale it was open to him to have the sale set aside at any time before it was confirmed, by applying under O 21, R 89.³ But in some cases it was held that the provisions of the Code as to execution of decrees were not applicable to mortgage decrees.⁴ This view is no longer tenable especially since the transfer to the Civil Procedure Code, of the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act relating to suits on mortgages. O 21, R 83 expressly provides that that Rule does not apply to decrees on mortgage.⁵

In a suit for sale by a puisne mortgagee he was given a decree conditional on his redeeming a prior mortgage within two months from the decree. He failed to redeem the prior mortgage within the period fixed but did so about four months after the decree. It was held that as the defendant had not taken any steps to redeem, the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of the payment though made after the prescribed time and to a decree absolute for sale.⁶

9 Decree for sale in a foreclosure suit—Sub R (3)

Sub R (3) has been taken from S 25 of the English Conveyancing Act, 1881.¹ The provision occurred even in S 88 of the Transfer of Property Act and was repeated in O 34 Sub R (2) [now Sub-R (3)]

1 (1885) 11 Mad 83 (90) (41 and 45 Vict, C 41 S 25)

The Transfer of Property Act (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, has made a slight change in the language of the Sub Rule and it is this. The old Rule applied to mortgages other than mortgages by conditional sale. The new Rule applies only to anomalous mortgages. The doubt that was felt under the old Sub Rule as regards its applicability to anomalous mortgages² can thus no longer exist. In such cases, the Court in order to protect the interests of all parties concerned can in the exercise of its discretion under this Sub Rule pass a decree for sale instead of one for foreclosure, although the suit may be for foreclosure.¹ But the Court will not pass a decree for sale instead of for foreclosure under this Sub-Rule where it does not appear that the property was undervalued.⁴

Where a plaintiff mortgagee sues for foreclosure on the allegation that the mortgage is one by conditional sale, and it is found that the mortgage is not one by conditional sale the proper course is not to dismiss the suit but to grant relief under Sub R (3).⁵

10 Order in which properties should be sold

Prima facie the decree-holder is entitled to have the mortgaged properties sold in any order he likes.^{1a} There are however, two important exceptions to this general rule—

- (1) the doctrine of marshalling securities as laid down in the Transfer of Property Act, and
- (2) The Court's power under O 34 R 4 to adjust the equities between the parties

Doctrine of marshalling—S 56 of the Transfer of Property Act as it stood before its amendment applied only as between the seller and his buyer.¹ The Section has now been recast by Act XX of 1929 and it is now provided that the buyer can claim the right of marshalling against not only the seller but also against the mortgagee but not so as to prejudice his rights. Similarly the old S 81 of the Transfer of Property Act provided for marshalling where there were two properties only. The scope of the Section has now been widened by Act XX of 1929 by providing that the Section should apply to cases where there are more than two properties and to all subsequent mortgages.

Court's power to adjust equities—Even if the doctrine of marshalling above referred to is not strictly applicable, the Court has, under this Rule, the power to direct the order in which the various mortgaged properties should be sold, for the purpose of protecting the equities that may exist in favour of any of the parties.²

Costs awarded to a mortgagee in a suit for sale on a mortgage are part of the mortgage money¹ and are primarily recoverable from the mortgaged property and not from the mortgagor personally² unless the decree makes the mortgagor personally liable for the costs³.

Ordinarily in a mortgage suit a pursue mortgagee is not personally made liable for the costs⁴. But if he makes himself responsible for any unnecessary contest in the suit he may be made personally liable for the costs⁵. The utmost that he can be made liable for is the extra costs caused by his unnecessary contest.

13 Succession certificate

It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay¹ Calcutta² and Madras³ that S 4 of the Succession Certificate Act (now S 214 of the Succession Act 1925) does not apply to suits for sale on mortgages of immovable property, where no personal decree against the mortgagor is asked for. But a contrary view is held by the Allahabad High Court⁴.

14 Award

Rules 4 and 5 of O 34 do not apply to a decree passed on the award of an arbitrator and hence a final decree is not necessary in such a case before the decree can be executed¹.

The Transfer of Property Act (Amendment) Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, has made a slight change in the language of the Sub Rule and it is this. The old Rule applied to mortgages other than mortgages by conditional sale. The new Rule applies only to anomalous mortgages. The doubt that was felt under the old Sub-Rule as regards its applicability to anomalous mortgages² can thus no longer exist. In such cases, the Court in order to protect the interests of all parties concerned can in the exercise of its discretion under this Sub Rule pass a decree for sale instead of one for foreclosure, although the suit may be for foreclosure³. But the Court will not pass a decree for sale instead of one for foreclosure under this Sub Rule where it does not appear that the property was *undervalued*⁴.

Where a plaintiff mortgagee sues for foreclosure on the allegation that the mortgage is one by conditional sale, and it is found that the mortgage is not one by conditional sale, the proper course is not to dismiss the suit but to grant relief under Sub R (3)⁵.

10 Order in which properties should be sold

Prima facie the decree holder is entitled to have the mortgaged properties sold in any order he likes^{1a}. There are however two important exceptions to this general rule—

- (1) the doctrine of marshalling securities is laid down in the Transfer of Property Act, and
- (2) The Court's power under O 34, R 4 to adjust the equities between the parties.

Doctrine of marshalling—S 36 of the Transfer of Property Act as it stood before its amendment applied only as between the seller and his *buyer*¹. The Section has now been recast by Act XX of 1929 and it is now provided that the buyer can claim the right of marshalling against not only the seller but also against the mortgagee, but not so as to prejudice his rights. Similarly the old S 81 of the Transfer of Property Act provided for marshalling where there were two properties only. The scope of the Section has now been widened by Act XX of 1929 by providing that the Section should apply to cases where there are more than two properties and to all subsequent mortgages.

Court's power to adjust equities—Even if the doctrine of marshalling above referred to, is not strictly applicable, the Court has under this Rule the power to direct the order in which the various mortgaged properties should be sold, for the purpose of protecting the equities that may exist in favour of any of the parties².

A and B mortgage certain items of property to C. B then mortgages to D his own items of the mortgaged property. In a suit by C D cannot claim that the items belonging to A alone should be sold first the reason is that the mortgage is not the same in both the mortgages⁴. If however the mortgagee has agreed that the properties should be sold in a particular order the agreement should be given effect to⁵.

15 Consent decree

It is open to the parties to a mortgage suit to enter into a compromise and the Court can, in such a case, pass a decree in terms of the compromise. Such a decree need not conform to the provisions of O 34¹. For instance, instead of a lump sum being directed to be paid on a fixed day, a compromise decree may provide that the mortgage money should be paid in certain instalments and that in default the mortgaged property should be brought to sale. In such a case, it is not necessary to have a final decree passed under R 5 before bringing the property to sale². For it is open to the mortgagor to waive the benefit of the provision which requires that a final decree should be passed before the property can be sold and where by his agreement he has waived the benefit, a final decree which is intended only for his benefit is not necessary³. But the decree-holder is not precluded from applying for a final decree in such a case⁴. So also where the parties have agreed that the decree should be drawn up under R 4, a final decree under R 5 is necessary⁵. O 34 R 14 does not apply to a compromise decree⁶.

A compromise decree on a mortgage may fix a longer period than the six months allowed under the Rule, for payment by the mortgagor⁷. The Court has no power to extend the period fixed for payment by a consent decree⁸. Where a compromise mortgage decree authorises its enforcement against properties other than the mortgaged property, execution of the decree by the arrest of the mortgagor is permissible⁹.

16 Appeal

Under O 43, R 1 (c) an appeal lies from an order refusing to extend time for payment under this Rule. But no such appeal lies after the final decree has been passed¹. In an appeal from a preliminary decree, ad valorem Court fees is payable on the amount found due and not the amount claimed by the plaintiff². cannot be questioned in an appeal from the final decree³. Under the former Code it was held that an application for taking accounts on a mortgage directed by a decree thereon was one in execution and that an order on such application was appealable under S. 244 (now S. 41)⁴. 1 Transfer of Property Act S 89

This Rule corresponds to S 89 of the Transfer of Property Act. The chief points of distinction between the two provisions are the following—

- (1) Under S 89 an order absolute for sale was passed while under the present Rule a final decree is passed
- (2) Under S 89, payment of the mortgage money could be made either to the plaintiff or into the Court. Under the present Rule, payment has to be made only into the Court

(3) The words at the end of S 89, "and thereupon, the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished" have been omitted in the present Rule

(4) The provision for the passing of a decree in case of payment by the mortgagor within the proper time is new

2 Amendments after 1908

The chief changes introduced in the Rule by the Amendment Act, XXI of 1929, are as follows —

(1) The present Rule makes it quite clear that the decree under it is a final decree

(2) On payment of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree, the present Rule requires the mortgagor to apply for a final decree

(3) The provision in Sub R (1) as to the defendant paying the mortgage money at any time before the confirmation of the sale is new

(4) Sub R (2) is new

3 Scope of the Rule

The present Rule applies only where a preliminary decree has been passed under R 4¹

4 Final decree when can be passed

Order 34 contemplates the passing of a preliminary decree and a final decree in all mortgage suits. The final decree for sale is passed when the payment directed by the preliminary decree has not been made within the proper time. A final decree under R 5 is necessary only when the decree originally passed is a preliminary decree under R 4. Hence where only a money decree has been passed, a final decree under the Rule is not necessary although the decree may authorise the decree holder to realise the decree amount by sale of the judgment debtor's property.¹ Similarly where at the time of the coming into force of the present Code of Civil Procedure a decree had already been passed under Transfer of Property Act S 58 it has been held that a final decree under the present Rule is not necessary.² But where property is charged with the payment of the decretal amount it was held in the undermentioned case that the proper mode of realising the decree amount is to obtain a decree absolute for sale and that it was not necessary to attach the property.³

Where the plaintiff under a preliminary decree on a mortgage is directed to pay off a prior mortgage before bringing the mortgaged property to sale he is entitled to apply for a final decree for sale even though he has made the payment only after the time fixed by the decree.⁴

Where the purchaser of a portion of the equity of redemption is made one of the defendants to a suit on a mortgage and after the preliminary decree is passed, obtains an assignment of the mortgagee's rights he is entitled to apply for a final decree although only for a proportionately reduced portion of the mortgage amount.⁵ Although a final decree is necessary to be passed before execution, yet a mortgagor who allows execution to take place, without raising any objection, will be estopped from contending that the want of a final decree is fatal to the proceedings⁶ Similarly, it was held under the Transfer of Property Act that no objection as to the want of a formal order absolute for sale could be raised where execution had once proceeded without objection⁷

5 Consent decrees and decrees on award

We have already seen in Note 4 that this Rule applies only where a preliminary decree has been passed under R 4. A consent decree providing for payment by instalments is not a preliminary decree under R 4 and hence, a final decree under the present Rule is not necessary in such a case¹ Similarly, a decree on an award is not a preliminary decree under R 4 and no final decree is necessary to be passed² But a decree-holder is not precluded from applying for a final decree where a preliminary decree by consent has been passed³ See Note 15 to R 4 for further notes

Where a mortgage itself is invalid, as being opposed to a certain statute, it cannot be validated by a consent decree on the mortgage. The mortgagor can resist in application for final decree on the ground that the mortgage is not binding on him⁴

6 Only one final decree to be passed

This Rule contemplates the passing of only one final decree¹ Where the preliminary decree is appealed from, the final decree should be based on the appellate decree² From this it was concluded by the Allahabad High Court in the undermentioned case that a final decree cannot be passed pending an appeal from the preliminary decree and a final decree so passed is invalid and inexecutable³ But this view has not been accepted by the High Courts of Patna,⁴ Lahore⁵ and Calcutta⁶ and has been overruled by the Allahabad High Court itself subsequently⁷ Where a final decree is passed and subsequently the preliminary decree is modified on appeal, the Court of first instance may either prepare a new final decree or amend the preliminary decree already passed.⁸

Under S 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, successive applications for an order absolute were maintainable such applications being proceedings in execution.⁹

7 Form of final decree for sale

For the form of a final decree for sale see Appendix D, Form 6. Nothing in R. 4 or in this Rule requires the specification of the mortgaged property in the decree.¹ Where the mortgage money is payable under the bond in a lump sum the Court is not justified in allowing it to be paid in instalments.²

Where a co-mortgagee was made a party-defendant to a suit for sale on the mortgage and the decree directed a payment to him of a part of the decretal amount, it was held that the form of the decree was correct.³ See also the under-mentioned cases.⁴

8 Court cannot go behind preliminary decree

When preparing a final decree under this Rule the Court has no power to go behind the preliminary decree.¹ Similarly the amount fixed in the preliminary decree cannot be varied except for some reason which may have happened subsequent to the preliminary decree.²

9 Court to which application for final decree is to be made

Though the preliminary decree may be modified by the appellate Court the application for final decree should be made only to the Court of first instance.¹ Under S 89 of the Transfer of Property Act it was held that the application for an order absolute under S 89 could be made to the Court charged with the execution of decrees, the proceeding being one in execution.²

it has been held that an application for sale of the mortgaged property may be treated as an application for a decree absolute². An application for a final decree in a mortgage suit need not, however, be in writing³. Nor need the plaintiff, in his application, describe the properties with respect to which he asks for final decree for sale and therefore if any item is omitted in the application, it cannot be contended that the final decree should not be passed in respect thereof⁴. A benami-dar-transferee of a preliminary decree may apply for a final decree⁵.

11 Notice to judgment debtor if necessary before passing final decree

As has been seen in the Note 7 to R 3, ante, this Rule also does not require any notice to be issued to the judgment debtor before the passing of a final decree though as a matter of practice, such notice should generally be given, on the principle that a party should be heard before any order is passed against him¹. Where a final decree has been passed ex parte against a mortgagor to whom no notice has been given of the application for final decree, the Court has inherent jurisdiction to set aside the ex parte decree in furtherance of justice and equity². For cases under S 89, Transfer of Property Act, see the undermentioned cases³.

See also Note 7 to R 3, ante

12 Limitation for application for final decree

An application for a final decree under O 34 is not an application for execution¹. The article of the Limitation Act applicable to such an application is Art 181 and time begins to run when the right to apply for a final decree accrues^{1a}. On this point however there was a conflict of opinion under the Transfer of Property Act. The reason for this was that, under that Act, the procedure was to get an order absolute and not a final decree. Three views were taken of the question —

- (1) An application for an order absolute was an application for execution² and was governed by Art 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 (now Art 182 of the Limitation Act of 1908)³
- (2) The proceedings for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act were proceedings *in suit*⁴ and that Art 178 (now Art 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908) was applicable to them⁵
- (3) Art 178 did not apply to applications for order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act as they were not applications under the Civil Procedure Code, within the meaning of that article⁶ and therefore there was no period of limitation applicable to such an application⁷

All these cases are only of academic interest now in view of the fact that it is made quite clear that an application under this Rule is for a final decree and not one for execution.

Where the Court in effect directs the stay of proceedings for a final decree limitation runs from the date of the removal of the bill^a. Where a minor plaintiff's next friend dies after preliminary decree and no new next friend is appointed the suit must be deemed to be in abeyance and the limitation for an application under this Rule will start from the date of the plaintiff's attaining majority^b. S 6 of the Limitation Act will not however apply to such a case since the application under this Rule is not one for execution.

Where the preliminary decree directs the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage as a condition of his enforcing his own mortgage the time requisite for ascertaining the amount due to the prior mortgagee may be deducted when calculating limitation for an application for final decree⁸. 5, time is fixed for payment to the prior mortgagee the plaintiff is not entitled to claim that limitation does not begin to run for his application for final decree until he has paid off the prior mortgage however long he may take to do so, he is only entitled to a deduction of six months from the date of the preliminary decree⁹

Where, on an application for final decree, an extension of time is granted to the mortgagor, and a fresh application is made by the mortgagee subsequently, it is to be deemed a continuation of the previous application¹⁰

Where an appeal is preferred against a preliminary decree, limitation for an application for a final decree runs only from the date of the appellate decree and not from the expiry of the period fixed by the lower Court for payment,¹¹ though the appellate decree is passed three years after the expiry of the period fixed by the lower Court for payment¹² But the dismissal of an appeal for non-prosecution does not give rise to a fresh starting point for limitation for an application for final decree¹³ See Note 9 to S 148

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a plaintiff, who obtained a decree under the Transfer of Property Act, is bound, on the coming into force of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, to apply for a final decree before proceeding to execute his decree. The High Courts of Madras and Patna have held that he is not bound to do so and that the Code will not affect his rights to execute the decree which had vested in him under the old law¹⁴ The High Court of Bombay has, on the other hand, taken a contrary view¹⁵ It is however clear that where the right to apply for an order absolute is barred by limitation even before the Code of 1908 came into force no fresh right to apply for a final decree is conferred by the Code¹⁶

There is no limitation for the mortgagor's application for deposit of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree¹⁷ Where an application for a final decree is dismissed a subsequent application is not for a revival of the previous application¹⁸

13 Mortgagor's rights before confirmation of sale

held and confirmed¹. Thus it was held that the mortgagor could apply to stop a sale under O 21, R 69,² or have the sale set aside under O 21, R 59.³ The amendment of 1929 gives express legislative sanction to the said view, namely, that the mortgagor's right to redeem continues till the confirmation of the sale.⁴

In this connection it may be noted that, under S 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, the defendant's right to redeem and the security become both extinguished on the passing of the order absolute.⁵ The words 'as to the extinguishment' have been omitted in the present Rule with the effect that a final decree does not now extinguish the mortgage security or the right to redeem.⁶

Where a period has been fixed for the payment of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree it is not open to the mortgagor to pay the money before the date fixed with costs and interest calculated up to the date of payment only and avoid further liability for costs and interest.⁷

5, Court, this Rule provides that it should be paid *into the Court*¹. But suppose the money is paid out of Court to the mortgagee. Then, if such payment is made after the final decree or after the order absolute (under the Transfer of Property Act is passed, O 21, R 2 will clearly apply and a payment can be certified to the executing Court, in the absence of such certification within the limitation period the executing Court will not take cognisance of it². Even if the payment is made after the preliminary decree and before the order absolute or the final decree is passed, the Court executing the final decree cannot, by virtue of the provisions of O 21, R 2, recognise such a payment unless certified³. On the question whether the Court dealing with an application for a final decree, can recognise such a payment, it has been held by the High Courts of Madras⁴ and Lahore⁵ that O 34, R 5 prescribes only one method of payment, namely, into Court and that payment out of Court cannot be recognised. On the other hand it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad,⁶ Calcutta,⁷ and Rangoon⁸ and by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,⁹ that such a payment could be certified to the Court (though it is not the executing Court) under the provisions of O 21, R 2, that therefore a certified payment can be recognised, or a payment can be certified by the Court dealing with the application to pass a final decree but that a payment not so certified within the period of limitation prescribed therefor, cannot be recognised. The High Court of Patna,¹⁰ the Chief Court of Oudh^{10a} and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur^{10b} have held that such a payment can be recognised under O 23 R 3 as an adjustment of a pending suit, though in a later case¹¹ the Nagpur Court has disagreed with this view on the ground that O 23 R 3 cannot apply to a satisfaction of a decree already passed. The High Court of Lahore has also held that O 23 R 3 is inapplicable to such a payment^{11a}.

Even in cases arising under the Transfer of Property Act, there was a conflict of opinion, but of a somewhat different nature. It was held by the Allahabad High Court and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh, that a proceeding under S 89 of that Act for obtaining an order absolute was a proceeding in execution, and, therefore the Court dealing with an application for an order absolute, being an executing Court could not recognise a payment after the preliminary decree unless it had been certified within time¹² The High Court of Calcutta, on the other hand, held that a proceeding for an order absolute is not one in execution, and that the Court dealing with such application can recognise such payments especially as § 89 expressly provided that payment may be to the plaintiff or into the Court¹³

Where the decree is not one under R 1, as in the case of a compromise decree R 3 does not apply and the Court can recognise payments made out of Court¹⁴ & also the undermentioned cases¹⁵

15 Return of documents relating to property

Where the preliminary decree does not provide for the payment of damages by the plaintiff to the defendant if the plaintiff fails to deliver all the documents relating to the mortgaged property as directed by the decree the Court cannot grant such relief by way of execution The mortgagor may sue separately for damages¹

16 Dismissal of mortgagee's application for final decree

O 34, R 1 requires only that the plaintiff should apply for a final decree His said application is not any ground for dismissing his application If it is dismissed on this ground it should be set aside and a final decree passed¹ The Court can also entertain a fresh application for final decree in such a case² An application for final decree cannot be dismissed for failure to give list of properties in respect of which the final decree was prayed for or for a wrong calculation of interest

Any enlargement which takes place in the interest of the mortgagor subsequent to the final decree ensures for the benefit of the auction purchaser.³ On the other hand, he is liable to pay the Government revenue accruing due on the property after the purchase.⁴

A mortgagee decree holder purchasing the mortgaged property in execution of his decree is not bound to give credit to the mortgagor for the market value of the property but only for the actual price for which he purchased it.

A mortgagee who himself purchases the mortgaged property in execution of his decree for sale becomes the owner of the property and cannot maintain, as against subsequent purchasers the position that the mortgage still remained an encumbrance.^{5a}

20 Execution of final decree for sale

Proceedings for sale under a final decree or under an order absolute are proceedings in execution.¹ Consequently the Court executing the final decree cannot go behind the decree though by consent of parties, accounts not allowed by the decree can be taken in execution.² A mere preliminary decree under R 4 is incapable of execution it is only the final decree that can be executed.⁴ But where in a case under the Transfer of Property Act a decree was executed without an order absolute having been obtained and the judgment debtor did not raise any objection to such course at the proper time, it was held that he was estopped from raising the contention subsequently that the decree was not executable.⁵ A decree for sale providing in terms that the rights of prior mortgagees should not be prejudiced is not incapable of execution.⁶

No attach rent is necessary before sale under a mortgage decree⁷ and, consequently, O 21 R 58 does not apply to claims preferred against the execution of acts subrogated to plaintiff's rights

5. mortgage decrees.⁸ Under S 20 of the Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876) the restrictions imposed by S 60 of the Code are applicable to mortgage decrees also.⁹

The transferee of the mortgagor's interests after the final decree is not a necessary party to the execution proceedings.¹⁰

A Court can sell under a mortgage decree only the property comprised in the mortgage.¹¹ and the mortgagee cannot, in execution of his mortgage decree, seek any remedy against the other properties of the mortgagor.¹²

Proceedings for execution of a final decree for sale can be stayed under O 11 R 6 of the Code.¹³

O 21 R 83 of the Code does not, under the express terms thereof, apply to mortgage decrees.¹⁴

21 Transfer of final decree

Prior to the addition of Cl (e) to Sub S 1 of S 17 of the Registration Act by Act XXI of 1929 a transfer of a final decree for sale was held not to require registration¹ but now the law is otherwise.

22 Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property

After a final decree for sale has been passed in a mortgage suit, the Court has no power to grant an injunction restraining the mortgagor from receiving the income of the mortgaged property. It can only bring the property to sale.¹

23 Construction of mortgage decree—See the undermentioned cases¹

24 Appeal

An appeal lies from a final decree for sale as from any other decree. Such decree is therefore not open to revision under S 115.¹

An order rejecting an application for a final decree amounts to a dismissal of the suit and as such is appealable as a decree.²

But an order allowing an application under this Rule is not appealable^{1a}. The reason is that the order stands in the place of the judgment and it is only the decree that is drawn up in pursuance thereof that is appealable.

A decision as to the order in which the mortgaged properties should be sold may amount to a decree if it affects the rights of co-defendants *inter se*³.

See S 97, Notes 1 and 2 also, on the question as to whether when, and how far a preliminary decree can be attacked in an appeal from a final decree.

25 Court fee

An appeal from a final decree for sale should be stamped with an ad valorem Court fee and not as an appeal from an order¹. Similarly, the Court fee on an appeal against an order rejecting an application for a final decree is ad valorem on the amount claimed².

See also Note 7 to S 97 ante.

26 Costs not recoverable from mortgagor personally

In the absence of anything to the contrary in the decree itself, the costs awarded against a mortgagor in a mortgage suit form part of the mortgage money and cannot be recovered personally from the mortgagor¹. But see the undermentioned cases².

27 Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act

A decree for sale upon a mortgage under S 10 (b) of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act is not a decree nisi and no final decree is necessary before it can be enforced¹. But the award of a consolidator under S 44 of the Act was held to be not exempt from the requirements of S 89 of the Transfer of Property Act².

28 Limitation for application for execution of final decree

Article 182 of the Limitation Act applies to an application for the execution of a final decree for sale passed under this Rule¹ and time runs under that article from the *date of the final decree*². But when there has been an appeal time runs

29 Nature of proceedings for final decree

There was a conflict of decisions, before the coming in force of the present Code of Civil Procedure, as to whether proceedings for order absolute under S 89 of the Transfer of Property Act were proceedings in execution of the decree under S 88 or proceedings in the suit itself some cases taking the former view¹ and others taking the latter view.² This conflict is now settled under the new Code which makes it clear that a decree under R 1 is incapable of execution³ and that the proceedings under R 5 are proceedings in the suit itself for a supplemental decree and not proceedings in execution.⁴ Hence the provisions of O 22 apply to proceedings for final decree.⁵ Similarly, the doctrine of lis pendens applies to such proceedings.⁶ But O 1 R 10 refers to a stage not concluded by a decree and hence does not apply to proceedings for final decree so as to enable the addition of persons who were not parties to the preliminary decree, as parties to the proceedings for final decree.⁷

30 Joint decree holders

One of several joint decree-holders cannot certify satisfaction of the decree beyond his own interest in the decree so as to bind the other decree-holders.¹

Under the Transfer of Property Act, where a joint decree under S 88 of the Act was passed in favour of several persons some of them could apply for an order absolute in favour of all.²

3 Personal decree for balance against mortgagor

This Rule provides that the mortgagee may, by way of application, obtain a decree personally against the mortgagor, for the balance still remaining due to him after the mortgaged property is sold¹. The object of the Rule is to enable such a decree to be passed in the mortgage suit itself and to avoid multiplicity of proceedings^{1a}. In fact, a separate suit for enforcing the personal liability would be barred under the provisions of O 2, R 2².

A personal decree under this Rule, will, however, be granted only after the mortgagee has exhausted his remedies against the security, in other words, it will be granted only after the sale has been carried out and the deficiency ascertained, it is a relief which will not be granted to the mortgagee until that stage is reached³. The mere fact, therefore, that the plaint does not contain a prayer for such relief⁴ or that the original decree does not reserve a liberty to the plaintiff to apply for a personal decree⁵ will not preclude the mortgagee from applying under this Rule when the deficiency is ascertained. Where a compromise in a mortgage suit provided for payment of the mortgage money in certain instalments and, on default, for execution by sale of the mortgaged properties "in the usual way," but did not reserve any right to the plaintiff to apply for a personal judgment, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that there was nothing to suggest that the plaintiff agreed to forego the benefit of the personal covenant, and that the powers of the Court to give that relief do not depend on O 34, R 6 of the Code nor are they derived from the clause in the decree reserving leave to the plaintiff to apply for a personal judgment⁶.

It follows from what has been said above that the Rule contemplates a separate decree being passed for the balance, & Court will be acting irregularly, therefore, in providing, in the decree for sale itself, that the mortgagee may proceed personally against the mortgagor for the balance.⁷ On the other hand the preliminary decree should not direct that properties not mortgaged should not be proceeded against—the question must be left for decision at the proper time.⁸ But where, at the time of the original decree a decision has been given as to the personal liability of the defendant, the question cannot be raised again on general principles of res judicata.⁹ A decree for sale, providing for execution thereof personally against the mortgagor in case of deficiency, though contrary to the provisions of R 6 is not void on that ground. No fresh supplementary decree under R 6 can be passed¹⁰ or is necessary in such a case,¹¹ before enforcing the personal liability though execution cannot be issued until the mortgage property has been sold and the proceeds found insufficient to satisfy the mortgage¹²

Similarly the mortgagee is not entitled to proceed against the non-hypothecated properties under the original decree for sale without a personal decree under this Rule¹³. But where execution is allowed against the non mortgaged properties of the mortgagor, without such a personal decree having been obtained and the mortgagor fails to object to such procedure, he will be estopped subsequently from objecting to the execution on the ground of the want of a personal decree¹⁴

A personal decree under R 6 can only be based on a decree for sale under which the mortgaged property has been sold. Thus where a person holds two mortgages over the same property and obtains two decrees upon them but sells the mortgaged property under one of them he cannot apply for a decree under R 6 if the balance of the sale proceeds after satisfying the decree under which the sale is held is not sufficient to satisfy the other mortgage¹⁵. Similarly where a puisne mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage is joined as a party to a suit on a prior mortgage and the property is sold in execution of the decree on the prior mortgage but the balance of sale proceeds after satisfying the prior mortgage is not sufficient to satisfy the puisne mortgage, the puisne mortgagee cannot obtain a decree under R 6 for his amount¹⁶. See also Note 10, Infra

The present Rule makes it clear that the plaintiff must apply for a decree under this Rule and that the Court cannot pass the decrees suo motu. The law was the same even before the amendment of the Rule in this respect by Act XXI of 1929¹⁷. But the application need not be in writing nor need it be signed¹⁷

A decree under R 6 can be made only against the defendants in the original suit¹⁸

A personal decree under this Rule can be executed either against the person of the mortgagor or by attachment and sale of his other properties¹⁹. A judgment debtor cannot be deemed as abandoned by presenting an application under O 34 R 6 decree under this Rule should not, therefore, direct the realisation of the amount from any specific property²⁰

Although a decree merely declares the amount due to be a charge on the mortgaged property it should be construed as a mortgage decree for sale to which R 6 is applicable²¹

Although a mortgage is invalid a personal decree may be passed in the same suit against the mortgagor on the basis of the personal covenant in the mortgage deed²² A personal decree obtained without informing the Court of a previous refusal by it to grant such a decree, cannot be set aside as fraudulent²³

4 Personal liability of purchaser from mortgagor

The word defendant in R 6 means the defendant mortgagor and a personal decree cannot be passed under the Rule against a purchaser of the equity of redemption¹ This is so even if the purchaser has contracted with the mortgagor to pay off the mortgage and has acted with himself a portion of the consideration for the purpose The reason is that there is no privity of contract between himself and the mortgagor

5 Personal liability is a question of construction of the instrument

A personal liability to pay the mortgage amount is, in each case a question of the construction of the mortgage deed¹ But every simple mortgage² and every English mortgage³ involves prima facie, a personal obligation to pay Similarly, prima facie there is no personal obligation to pay in a usufructuary mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale⁴ (See S 58 of the Transfer of Property Act) Where the time for payment fixed under the decree nisi was enlarged on condition

6 Personal decree against person not the mortgagor

The word defendant in the Rule means as has been seen in Note 4 above the mortgagor defendant¹ Where a mortgage bond was executed by the Court of Wards on behalf of a ward a decree may be passed against the ward under this Rule for the balance of mortgage money due after the sale of the mortgaged property and appropriation of the sale proceeds " A personal decree against the managing member of a Hindu joint family binds the junior members of the family though they were not parties to the suit³

7 Personal decree against the heirs of the mortgagor

Where mortgaged property is found to be insufficient to satisfy a mortgage decree obtained against the heirs of a mortgagor a decree may be passed against them under this Rule to the extent of the assets of the deceased in their hands¹ Where a decree under this Rule exempts the person and property of the sons of the mortgagor who is the manager of a joint Hindu family but a decree is passed against them to the extent of the assets of the mortgagor in their hands the assets received by the sons by survivorship on the death of the father are liable under the decree² But when the son's share is exempted from the mortgage decree against the father it is also exempt from a decree under the present Rule³

8 Personal remedy under compromise decree

The fact that the original decree was a compromise decree is no bar to a personal decree being passed under this Rule¹ According to the High Courts of Bombay² and Calcutta³ a compromise decree in a mortgage suit may be executed against the mortgagor personally without any decree being passed under R 6

although it does not expressly provide for personal relief. But the Patna High Court has held that a decree under this Rule is necessary in such a case⁴. Where the compromise decree itself expressly provides for personal relief a fresh decree under this Rule is not necessary⁵.

9 Right of mortgagee to attach other properties of mortgagor before date fixed for payment of mortgage money

After the preliminary decree in a mortgage suit and before the date fixed for the payment of the mortgage money if there is a reasonable probability of the mortgaged property not being sufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt the Court can order the attachment of the other properties of the mortgagor if it is satisfied as to the existence of the conditions laid down in O 38 R 5. The fact that under O 34 R 6 no personal decree can be obtained until the mortgaged properties are sold does not affect the plaintiff's rights under O 38 R 5¹.

10 Where net proceeds of any such sale are found insufficient

The opening words of the Rule make it clear that a decree under the Rule can only be passed after the mortgaged property has been sold and it is found that the sale proceeds are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt¹. But if a personal decree is actually passed before the sale and the mortgagor does not object, he is estopped from questioning the validity of such personal decree later on². If the mortgaged property though no fault of the mortgagee has been destroyed by fire or otherwise ceased to exist or to be available for sale the plaintiff is not bound to go through the farce of bringing the property to sale before applying for a decree under the Rule³. Thus where the mortgagee is unable to sell a portion of 6, the mortgaged properties by reason of their being situated in a Native State which will not execute the decree of a British Indian Court and the sale proceeds of the remaining portion of the properties are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage, the decree-holder is entitled to a personal decree against the judgment-debtor ⁴. Similarly, where a mortgage of joint family property by the father of a Hindu joint family is found to be not for legal necessity, it has been held by the Madras High Court that a conditional decree may be passed against the father personally and the sons share in the joint family property for the recovery of the balance that may remain due to the mortgagee after the sale of the father's share of the mortgaged property (without the son's shares being put to sale) ⁵. Where a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage is set aside on the ground that the mortgagor has no saleable interest in the mortgaged property, a personal decree may be passed against the mortgagor, because the mortgagee, having been compelled to refund the entire purchase money, the net sale proceeds are nil and therefore insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt ⁶.

A personal decree should not be passed against the mortgagor till the entire mortgaged property ordered to be sold has been sold and the proceeds are found insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt ⁷. But it is open to the mortgagee in the plaint to give up his claim against any portion of the mortgaged property and obtain a decree for sale in respect of the rest. If in such a case, the sale proceeds of the portion ordered to be sold are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt, the plaintiff may obtain a personal decree against the mortgagor ⁸.

The sale of the mortgaged property need not be necessarily a judicial sale. The Rule covers also a private sale.⁹ Where the mortgagee himself purchases the mortgaged property in execution of his mortgage decree with the leave of the Court, the leave to bid puts him in the same position as any other purchaser and he is bound to give credit only for the amount bid by him and may apply for a personal decree for the balance of the mortgage money remaining due after deducting such amount.¹⁰

Where a portion of the mortgaged property was acquired by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the mortgagee's remedy was to bring to sale the rest of the property and then, if there is a balance due, to apply for a personal decree.¹¹ But the Calcutta High Court has held that where the mortgaged property is compulsorily acquired by the Government the mortgage lien is transferred to the compensation money standing to the credit of the mortgagor in the collectorate and the mortgagee is entitled, in execution of a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property, to take out such money without obtaining a further decree under the present Rule.¹²

See also Note 3 supra.

11 Amount due

The amount due is the amount for the recovery of which a decree for sale has been previously passed.¹ Costs awarded to the mortgagee form an integral part of the amount due.² A puisne mortgagee paying off a prior encumbrance is entitled to a personal decree for the deficit due to him having paid off the prior mortgage.³

12 Legally recoverable

A personal decree cannot be passed in every suit for sale upon a mortgage, but only where the defendant by his contract or otherwise is under a personal

13 Legally recoverable otherwise than out of the property sold

These words mean by way of illustration that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realising otherwise than out of the property sold or a balance the recovery of which is not barred by limitation¹

14 Prior and puisne mortgagees

A puisne mortgagee is not a defendant against whom a personal decree may be passed there being no privity of contract between him and the plaintiff¹

15 Costs against puisne mortgagees

A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a personal decree for costs against a puisne mortgagee¹ As seen in Note 6 above the word defendant in this Rule means only the mortgagor defendant and not necessarily those claiming title under him

16 Insolvency of mortgagor

Where pending a suit by a mortgagee on his mortgage, the mortgagor is declared insolvent the plaintiff can still proceed against the mortgaged property¹ If the mortgaged property is not sufficient to pay the debt and the mortgagor is personally liable under the mortgage the mortgagee may prove for the balance in the insolvency proceedings along with the other creditors of the mortgagor if the personal liability was not time barred at the date of the institution of the suit on the mortgage² But can the mortgagee obtain a personal decree under this Rule in such a case? No according to the Allahabad High Court³ Yes according to the Lahore High Court⁴ and the Oudh Chief Court⁵ of the Limitation Act is confined to suits to recover the mortgage money from the mortgaged property and does not apply to the personal remedy under a mortgage¹. The personal remedy is governed by the six years period of limitation in the case of registered instruments² and by the three years period in the case of unregistered instruments³ and time runs from the date on which the mortgage amount becomes due⁴. If the right to a personal decree is not barred at the date of the institution of the suit the plaintiff is entitled to such a decree in the case of a deficiency though the application for the personal decree is made at a time when a suit for the personal remedy would be barred⁵. If a decree is barred under this Rule it is barred in its entirety and a personal decree cannot be passed for costs alone where the right is barred as regards principal and interest⁶. But though the mortgagee's personal remedy may be barred as regards the principal he is entitled to a personal decree for interest accrued within six years from the suit for sale because so long as the mortgage debt is not time barred the personal liability for the payment of interest continues. An acknowledgment by one co-mortgagor alone is not sufficient to keep alive a mortgage debt as against all the co-mortgagors⁸.

The plaintiff's application for a personal decree has to be made under Art 181 of the Limitation Act within three years from the date on which the right to apply for a personal decree accrues⁹. S 6 of the Limitation Act does not

Where a mortgage decree provides for the sale of the mortgaged property and for realisation of any deficiency from the other properties of the mortgagor, the 12 years period under S 48 of the Code for enforcing the personal liability runs from the date of the decree and not from the date of the sale of the mortgaged property.¹¹ A contrary view was taken in the following cases.¹²

The limitation for the execution of a personal decree runs from the date of the drawing up of a formal decree and not from the making of an order for personal decree.¹³

18 Succession certificate

A personal decree cannot be passed in favour of the heirs of a mortgagee in the absence of a succession certificate produced by them.¹ But a person who has succeeded to the estate of a deceased mortgagee by the right of survivorship need not produce a succession certificate before he can obtain a personal decree against the mortgagor.²

19 Notice

Where a decree holder applies for a personal decree against the judgment-debtor under this Rule the proper procedure for the Court is to issue notice to the judgment debtor calling upon him to show cause why the application should not be granted and to hear his objection if any.¹ But in the absence of fraud, a suit does not lie to set aside an ex parte personal decree under the Rule, on the ground of failure to serve notice on the judgment debtor.² An order directing execution to issue against the judgment debtor personally without a supplemental decree under this Rule should not be passed without notice to the judgment-debtor.³

20 Execution of personal decree

An executing Court cannot entertain any question as to the validity of a personal decree which has become final.¹ (See Notes to S 38, ante) A mortgage-decree until it reaches the stage shown by Transfer of Property Act, S 90 (O 34,

21 Appeal

An order refusing an application for a personal decree under the Rule is a decree and appealable as such¹ Plaintiff's Court fee is payable on an appeal from such an order as well as on an appeal from a decree under the Rule. An application for a personal decree is not a plaint and an order returning it for presentation to the proper Court is therefore not appealable under O 43 R 1³. Where the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs 5000 an appeal from a personal decree in the suit lies under S 21 of the Bengal N W P (now Agri) and Assam Civil Courts Act (U P Act XII of 1887) to the District Judge and not to the High Court though the personal decree be for a sum exceeding Rs 5000⁴.

See Notes to S 96

22 Nature of proceedings under R 6

Proceedings for a personal decree under this Rule are not proceedings in execution but proceedings in suit and the provisions of O 9 are therefore applicable thereto¹

23 Miscellaneous

(1) An application for a personal decree should be made to the Court which passed the decree for sale and not to the Court to which it was sent for execution¹

(2) A decree directing realisation from the other properties of the mortgagor if the mortgaged properties which are to be proceeded against first are not sufficient is not a money decree for purposes of registration²

(3) A simple mortgagee whose rights under the personal covenant have not been barred is a creditor of the mortgagor within S 53 of the Transfer of Property Act and can sue to set aside an alienation of the other properties³

(4) Order 20, R 11 empowering the Court to allow payment by instalments applies to an application for a personal decree under this Rule⁴

1 Legislative changes

This Rule corresponds to S 93 of the Transfer of Property Act

2 Amendments after 1908

The Rule has been amended by Act XXI of 1929. The general changes thus introduced are on the same lines as in the case of Rr 2 and 4 see Notes under Rr 2 and 4. Further in case of default by the mortgagor in payment of the mortgage money within the prescribed time the old Rule provided for foreclosure except where the mortgage was simple or usufructuary and for sale except where the mortgage was one by conditional sale. The present Rule has been amended to suit the changes in S 67 of the Transfer of Property Act as amended by Act XX of 1929 see Notes under R 2 ante

3 Scope of the Rule

As this Rule corresponds to Rr 2 and 4 ante in most particulars the Notes under Rr 2 and 4 may be consulted under this Rule also. The decree under this Rule is preliminary and incapable of execution without a final decree being passed¹

Every preliminary decree in a mortgage suit must be followed by a final decree

The proceedings after a preliminary decree are proceedings in suit to which the provisions of O 22 will apply.² O 34 contemplates only one preliminary decree being passed. Hence it is unnecessary to first pass a decree for accounts and then again another preliminary decree for redemption. Such a decree for accounts if passed will only have the effect of an interlocutory order for accounts.³ Where it is found that the money due to the mortgagee has already been paid, a final decree may be at once passed without any preliminary decree.⁴ (See R 9, infra which expressly provides for this). A decree for possession on condition of the plaintiff's paying a certain sum within a certain time is not a preliminary decree within this Rule.⁵

The Rule applies only to a suit for redemption against a mortgagee and not by one co-mortgagor against another who has redeemed the entire mortgage, for redemption of plaintiff's share of the mortgaged property.⁶ A compromise decree in a redemption suit, which is itself capable of execution does not require a final decree.⁷ No application for a final decree can be made under this Rule and R 8 where a decree had been passed under S 92 of the Transfer of Property Act.⁸

Ordinarily a suit for an account on a mortgage cannot be asked for, unless the mortgagor asks for redemption also.⁹ The burden, in suits for redemption, is on the mortgagor of proving the existence of a mortgage¹⁰ and the mere fact that the defendant denies the mortgage is no ground for decreeing possession without any payment by the mortgagor.¹¹ A conditional decree for redemption on payment of the amount due may be passed even though the Court finds that the mortgage has not been satisfied out of the mortgaged property as alleged in the plaint.¹²

A mortgagor cannot redeem by application but only can do so by way of suit.¹³

4 Mode of taking accounts Sub Rule 1 Cl (a)

We have seen under R 2 ante that the object of the Legislature is that complete accounts of all amounts due by either party to the other in respect of the mortgage transaction should be taken in a mortgage suit, so as to avoid unnecessary litigation. A mortgagee in possession is bound to account for the rents and profits of the property (see Transfer of Property Act S 76), and the mortgagor is entitled to deduct from the mortgage money all sums thus owed by the mortgagee.¹ Where the mortgagee has been in possession of the mortgaged pro-party, the burden is on him to prove that the mortgage has not been satisfied out of the usufruct of the property.² In a suit to redeem a puisne mortgagee who has redeemed a prior mortgage, the mortgagor is liable to pay the amounts of both the mortgages.³

Where a prior mortgagee sues on his mortgage without imploding the puisne mortgagee and purchases the property in execution of his decree the puisne mortgagee subsequently suing for redemption is bound to pay not the sum for which the property was sold but the amount due on the mortgage up to the date on which the prior mortgagee obtained possession after the purchase.⁴ A Court can in estimate accounts with a view to seeing whether the mortgagee has been satisfied out of the usufruct even though in doing so it has to deal with questions relating to properties lying outside its jurisdiction.⁵ In a suit for the redemption of two distinct mortgages the accounts should be taken separately in respect of each mortgage.⁶ A mortgagee who refused a valid tender of the mortgage money does not thereby cease to be a mortgagee and the subsequent accounts between him and the mortgagor should be included in the suit for redemption. In a suit for redemption of a mortgage to which the sub mortgagee also is joined as a party the decree should direct accounts to be taken of the mortgage as well as of the sub mortgage and should provide that out of the mortgage money, the sub mortgagee shall be paid the amount due to him and the balance if any should be paid to the mortgagee.⁷

In suits for redemption the accounts should be taken up to the date of actual redemption or sale as the case may be.⁸

5 Interest

In a suit for redemption, the mortgagee's right to interest is not limited to that accruing during the six years preceding the suit¹. Where a mortgagee who is entitled to possession obtains a decree for possession, he is not entitled to any interest between the date of the decree and the date of the delivery of possession².

6 Costs

In a suit for redemption, the mortgagee defendant is entitled to all costs unless he has refused a valid tender of the mortgage money or has otherwise been guilty of misconduct¹. Such costs are part of the mortgage money and in the absence of any express provision in the decree to the contrary are not personally recoverable from the mortgagor². Where the plaintiff mortgagor has been awarded costs in such a suit he is entitled to set off the amount of his costs against the mortgage money payable by him³.

7 Subsequent costs charges and expenses

The amendments introduced by the Transfer of Property Act (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929 have made clear that the mortgagee is entitled to charges and expenses properly incurred by him in respect of the mortgage security even subsequent to the preliminary decree. Although the Rules were not so explicit before the above amendment as they are now on this point the law was recognised to be the same even under the old Rules¹.

8 Subsequent interest as provided in R 11

R 7 Sub R (1) Cl (c) (i) provides for the payment by the mortgagor of interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment under the preliminary decree up to the date of the actual realisation of the mortgage money. This point was not conceded under the old Rules¹.

9 Pays into Court on a day within six months

A decree under this Rule should state a period within which the mortgage money should be paid¹. This period may be less than six months². In computing the period so fixed the date of the decree should be excluded³.

If the decree for redemption fixes no period for payment it must be taken as an ordinary decree to which Art 182 of the Limitation Act would apply^{3a}.

But where in a suit for sale by a puisne mortgagee, the preliminary decree directed the plaintiff to pay off the prior mortgage before bringing the mortgaged property to sale, but fixed no period within which the prior mortgage was to be paid off, it was held that, in this respect the decree was a decree for redemption and the period allowable for payment of the prior mortgage amount could not exceed six months.⁴ The Rule requires the payment to be made into the Court. As to whether a payment made out of Court can be recognised by the Court, see Note 14 to Rule and O 23, R 3.

10 Shall deliver up to the plaintiff the documents¹

On payment of the mortgage money, the mortgagor is entitled to the return of the mortgage bond¹ and other documents relating to the title to the land. But where the mortgagee defendant has lost the title deeds, the executing Court cannot, in the absence of any express provision in the decree to that effect compel him to give security for the value of the property.²

11 Shall re-transfer the property to the plaintiff

The mortgagor has a right of redemption to re-transfer the property to the mortgagor free from the mortgage and from all encumbrances created by him. Thus if he has sold the property to another the lease is not binding on the mortgagor who can therefore eject the lessee as a trespasser.¹ The property must be re-transferred along with the accruals if any, to the property. Thus, where the mortgagee taking advantage of his position as such, has taken a mortgage of the holding of a tenant the mortgagor is entitled on redemption to the possession of the holding provided he pays the amount due on its mortgage.² The Rule requires that a mortgagee with possession should on redemption, put back the mortgagor in possession.³

12 Procedure on default of payment

The Rule provides that on default by the mortgagor in the payment of the mortgage money within the time allowed by the Court, the mortgagee is entitled to apply for a final decree for sale or foreclosure.¹ The present Rule provides for a decree for sale in the case of any mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale or an anomalous mortgage which provides only for foreclosure. It provides for a decree for foreclosure in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or an anomalous mortgage which provides only for foreclosure. Under the Rule as it was before Act XVI of 1929 a decree for sale was provided for in the case of any mortgage other than one by conditional sale. And a decree for foreclosure was provided for in the case of any mortgage other than a simple or usufructuary one. These changes are in conformity with the changes in S 67 of the Transfer of Property Act made by Act XX of 1929. See Notes under R 3

13 Extension of time fixed for payment

The amendments in this Rule and in R 8 made by Act XXI of 1929 make it clear that the Court can extend the time fixed for payment from time to time and that till a decree for foreclosure is actually passed or till the sale is confirmed, the mortgagor can redeem the property. The undermentioned cases¹ decided under the old rules have only an academic interest now. Time for payment may be extended though the period originally fixed may have expired². The use of the expression 'extend the time' in the new Rule instead of the expression "postpone the day" which occurred in the proviso to old R 8 makes this clear³. Extension of time may be granted irrespective of the nature of the mortgage in question⁴. Even though a decree for redemption may have been passed by the appellate Court an application for extension of time should be made to the Court of first instance and not to the appellate Court⁵. Where, in a partition suit, the alienation of a certain property belonging to the joint family was found to be binding only to a limited extent and a decree was passed for possession thereof on condition of a certain amount being paid to the alienee within a fixed date, it was held that this was in effect a decree for redemption and that the Court could extend the time fixed for payment⁶. Time fixed by a compromise decree cannot be extended by the Court⁷. S 148 of the Code does not apply to the extension of time fixed by a decree for redemption⁸. final decree for redemption runs from the date of payment although the Court may have extended the period for payment originally fixed⁹. Where a preliminary decree is simply confirmed in appeal, the period fixed runs only from the decree of the Court of first instance unless the appellate Court extends the period¹⁰. See Note 9 to S 148.

14 Form of decree

For the form of a preliminary decree under this Rule see Appendix D, Forms 7, 7 A 7 B and 7 C. The decree ought not to contain unnecessary declarations¹. It should not direct that the defendant should not be evicted till he has cut the crops sown by him².

15 Second suit for redemption See Note 40 to S 11

16 Who can redeem See S 91 of the Transfer of Property Act

If a party whose title is to some extent imperfect at the date of the institution of the suit seeks to redeem and is able to prove a perfect title at the hearing of the case he should have a decree for redemption. Thus if a purchaser in execution sale of the equity of redemption sues for redemption before he has obtained a certificate of sale but obtains such certificate before the hearing, he should have a decree for redemption¹. In a suit by a purchaser of the equity of redemption for redemption the mortgagee cannot question the adequacy of the consideration for the sale².

17 Trespass by mortgagor before redemption

Where a redemption decree was made but the mortgagor, without having made any payment, unlawfully trespasses upon the property and dispossesses the mortgagee in possession the latter can sue to recover back possession¹.

18 Court fee

See S 7 Cl (ix) of the Court fees Act. No Court fee is payable on surplus profits decreed in favour of a mortgagor in a redemption suit¹.

19 Jurisdiction

In suits for redemption, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is the amount of the principal money secured by the mortgage and not the value of the property mortgaged¹.

1 (1934) 1934 Pat 97 (99). Directions by Court with regard to the mode in which account is to be taken is not preliminary decree and the order is not appealable as such.

R. 8. [Neu, Act IV of 1882 S 93] (1) Where before a final decree debarring the plaintiff from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed or before the confirmation of a sale held in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this Rule, the plaintiff makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of Rule 7, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the plaintiff the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree, and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

(2) Where the mortgaged property or a part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this Rule the Court shall not pass an order under sub-rule (1) of this Rule unless the plaintiff in addition to the amount mentioned in sub-rule (1) deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by the purchaser

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for re-payment of the amount of the purchase-money paid into Court by him, together with a sum equal to five per cent thereof

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub-rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf,—

(a) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or of such an anomalous mortgage as is hereinbefore referred to in R 7, pass a final decree declaring that the plaintiff and all persons claiming under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and, also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the mortgaged property ; or

(b) in the case of any other mortgage, not being a usufructuary mortgage, pass a final decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and the balance, if any, be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same

1 Legislative changes

The Rule came into force by S 93 of the Transfer of Property Act

2 Amendments after 1908

The Rule was amended by the Transfer of Property Act (Amendment) Supplementary Act XXI of 1929 on the same lines as R 3 and 5 ante. The provision as to extension of time has been transferred to R 7. vide Notes under R 3 and 7 ante. Under the old Rule a decree for sale could not be passed only in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale. Under the present Rule no decree for sale can be passed even in the case of usufructuary mortgages.

3 Scope of the Rule

The decree under R 7 is only a preliminary decree and a final decree under the present Rule is necessary to terminate a suit for redemption¹. As has been seen already in Note 4 to R 7 in a redemption suit there should be a complete settlement of all accounts between the parties in relation to the mortgage². (See also R 9 and 10 infra which show that accounts should be taken right up to the date of actual payment of mortgage money and re transfer of possession.)

4 Decree for redemption

On payment of the mortgage money before a final decree for sale or foreclosure is passed the mortgagor is entitled to a final decree for redemption. A mortgagor can however exercise the right of redemption in the case of a decree for sale at any time before the sale is confirmed though the final decree for sale may have been passed in the meanwhile. If the redemption is after the final decree for sale the mortgagor will get an order for the delivery of the title deeds etc. as indicated in Sub R (1). If the mortgagor seeks to redeem the property after the sale and before it is confirmed he must deposit for payment to the auction purchaser 5 per cent of the purchase money in addition to the mortgage money. Under Sub R (1) all rights acquired by the mortgagee under the mortgage must on redemption be re transferred to the mortgagor¹. The mortgagor in possession need not vacate possession till he has received the full mortgage money².

A mortgagor is not disentitled to a decree for redemption simply because he has attached under his decree for costs against the mortgagee the mortgage money.

3, a portion of it³

The mortgagee is not entitled to notice of payment into the Court of the mortgage money under the preliminary decree⁴. Nor is the mortgagor required to make an application to the Court before paying in the money⁵. The refusal of the Treasury Officer to accept the mortgage money though paid within the proper time does not amount to default by the judgment debtor⁶. Where the mortgagor has paid into the Court the sum ascertained by the first Court pending an appeal by the mortgagee as to the amount due, the mortgagor is entitled to credit for the amount paid though it lapsed to the Government through the failure of the mortgagee to take the money out of Court⁷. Payment to an unauthorised person does not discharge a mortgage⁸.

5 Redemption after due date

The present Rule makes it clear that though a mortgagor was failed to redeem the mortgaged property within the time allowed by the Court he is entitled to do so at any time before a final decree for foreclosure is passed or a sale of the mortgaged property under a final decree for sale is confirmed. See Note 8 infra.

6 Final decree for foreclosure or sale—Sub Rule (3)

The provision as to the passing of a final decree for foreclosure under the circumstances indicated in the Rule is imperative¹. A final decree for foreclosure or sale can only be passed on application by the mortgagee. A final decree for foreclosure cannot be passed in the case of a *simple mortgage*². The absence of any provision in the preliminary decree for the passing of a final decree for sale or foreclosure is no bar to the passing of such a decree³. An application for final decree should be made to the Court of first instance though the preliminary decree was modified in appeal⁴. In the undermentioned case it was held that the mortgagor himself was entitled to apply for a final decree for sale, if he was not able to pay the mortgage money⁵.

7 Power to enlarge time

The provision as to the enlargement of time contained in the proviso to the old R 8 has now been transferred to the present R 7 by Act XVI of 1929. A payment of the amount due within the time fixed entitles the mortgagor to a final decree for redemption¹. But the time can be extended by the Court for making such payment under this Rule. The principles discussed in Note 13 of R 2 and in Note 9 to S 148 apply in general to an extension of time under this Rule. Thus the time can be extended even though the time originally fixed has expired². But no extension can be granted unless good cause is shown therefor³.

Nor is the mortgagor entitled to an extension as a matter of right.⁴

The power to extend time applies to all kinds of mortgages. Ordinarily a mortgagor who seeks to pay the money after the time fixed, must apply for extension.⁵ The application need not however, be in any prescribed form and even an application to pay the money may itself be treated as an application for extension. But the application must be made to the Court of *first instance*⁶ even though the decree may have been confirmed on appeal.⁷

It was held in the undermentioned cases⁸ that the power to enlarge time under this Rule applies to what are strictly suits for redemption. But where in a partition suit, it was found that in alienation of joint family property was partially binding on the plaintiff and a decree was passed for possession against the donee conditional on the payment of a certain sum of money to him within a certain time, it was held by the High Court of Madras that the decree was in effect one for redemption, and that the time fixed by it could be extended under this Rule.¹¹

Even if the time is not extended, the mortgagor, as has been made clear by this Rule, can redeem the property at any time before a final decree for foreclosure is passed, or a sale of the property is confirmed by the Court. And this was the practice followed even before the amendment under Act XXI of 1929 was made.¹² As to the decrees passed before the Transfer of Property Act see the undermentioned case.¹³

It has been held by the Chief Court of Oudh that even in the case of a compromise decree for redemption, the Court, is entitled under this Rule to extend the time in proper cases.¹⁴

8 Limitation

Article 181 of the Limitation Act applies to an application by the mortgagor for a final decree under this Rule and time runs from the expiry of the period fixed for payment by the mortgagor.¹ But a mortgagor being entitled to pay the mortgage money at any time before the final decree for foreclosure is passed or before the sale of the mortgaged property is confirmed by the Court there is no period of limitation applicable to a payment by him of the mortgage money. It has even been held that there is no period of limitation applicable to an application by the mortgagor for a final decree for redemption it being the duty of the Court to pass such a decree¹. But under the amendments of the Rule made by Act XXI of 1929 even a mortgagor has to apply for a final decree for redemption. Hence the view taken in the above decision requires reconsideration. Where there has been an appeal against the preliminary decree the period of limitation for an application for final decree commences not from the expiry of the time fixed for payment but from the date of the appellate decree². An application for extension of time by a decree holder is a step in aid of execution within the meaning of Limitation Act Art 182 in respect of a subsequent application for sale by him³.

9 Appeal

An order refusing to extend time is appealable under O 13 R 1 (d)¹. But no appeal lies against an order granting an extension of time². It is doubtful whether an order merely refusing to pass a final decree but leaving it open to the mortgagor to apply again for such a decree is appealable as a decree³.

R. 8 A. [New] Where the net proceeds of any sale held under the last preceding Rule are found insufficient to pay the amount due to the defendant, the Court, on application by him, may, if the balance is legally recoverable from the plaintiff otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance.

Scope of the Rule Note No 1

1 Scope of the Rule

This Rule is new and was inserted by the Transfer of Property (Amendment Supplementary) Act XXI of 1929. The Rule provides for a personal decree being passed in a suit for redemption against the mortgagor where the proceeds of a sale held on the default of the mortgagor to pay the mortgage money in time under a decree for redemption are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt. The Rule corresponds to R 6 ante which provides for a personal decree being passed in a suit for sale by the mortgagee.

The words the last preceding Rule refer to R 8 as amended by Act XXI of 1929 under which no decree for sale could be passed in the case of a usufructuary mortgage as was possible under the old Rule. Where therefore a decree for sale was passed in respect of a usufructuary mortgage under the old Rule and a sale is held in pursuance thereof it was held that such a sale could not be said to have been held under the last preceding Rule within the meaning of this Rule and that consequently no personal decree for the balance remaining due could be passed under this Rule¹.

1 Scope of the Rule

This Rule is new and gives effect to the practice followed in cases arising under the Transfer of Property Act¹ and in cases arising even previous thereto²

If the Court finds that the mortgage has been discharged, a decree for redemption can be passed at once without the formality of a preliminary and final decree³. A mortgagee who continues in possession of the mortgaged property after the mortgage has been satisfied is liable for all the receipts from the property with interest from the time when the debt was fully paid off⁴. Extra Court-fee in addition to the Court-fee paid on the principal sum due need not be paid on the surplus profits that may be decreed to a mortgagor in a redemption suit⁵. A claim by a mortgagor for recovery of over-payment received by the mortgagee is a relief included in a suit for redemption to which Art 148 of the Limitation Act applies⁶

2 Deduction of costs payable to mortgagor

The mortgagor is entitled to set off the costs awarded to him against the mortgage money¹ in preference to the claim of the defendant mortgagee's attorney for his costs of the suit²

3 Claim for overpayments—Suit for if lies

The intention of the legislature being that a suit for redemption should include the entire accounts between the parties in relation to the mortgage, a separate suit for overpayments is barred under S 11 and O 2, R 2¹ (See Note 40

4 Such costs of suit as have been properly incurred

The mortgagor's liability in a mortgage suit cannot be enhanced by a final decree beyond the point indicated in the preliminary decree except in so far as is provided for by the present Rule¹. It has been held by the Allahabad High Court that the Rule refers only to costs incurred between the preliminary decree and the final decree and not to the costs incurred subsequent to the final decree in execution proceedings². The Chief Court of Oudh on the other hand has expressed a different view and held that the Rule applies to all costs incurred in connection with the suit up to the time of actual payment whether before or after the final decree³. It is submitted that the Oudh view accords more with the language of the Rule than the Allahabad view.

5 Costs of appeal

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether the costs of an unsuccessful appeal by the mortgagor from the preliminary decree in a mortgage suit can be added to the mortgage money or should be recovered from the mortgagor personally. In some cases, it has been held that such costs can be added to the mortgage money,¹ while in other cases that the Rule refers primarily to costs incurred in the Court which prepares the final decree and that therefore the costs of appeal cannot be added to the mortgage money but should be recovered personally from the mortgagor². According to the unmentioned cases³ however the question is one of construction of the appellate decree dismissing the appeal.

6 Other costs charges and expenses

This expression has been newly inserted by Act XXI of 1929 and gives effect to the practice followed before the Act, of adding such costs charges and expenses, incurred after the preliminary decree, to the mortgage money¹.

10. 7 Power of executing Court to add costs

Costs which should have been but have not been excluded in a final decree cannot be claimed in execution¹

8 Costs awarded by decree made of realisation

Prima facie the costs awarded in a mortgage suit against the mortgagor, should be added to the mortgage money and the mortgagor is not personally liable for them except when a decree can be passed against him under R 6 *ante*¹. But under S 3, of the Code the Court has the power to make the mortgagor personally liable for the costs even in the first instance in which case the mortgagor would be personally liable for the costs.

R. 11. [Nen] In any decree passed in a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption, where interest is legally recoverable the Court may order payment of interest to the mortgagee as follows, namely —

(a) interest up to the date on or before which payment of the amount found or declared due is under the preliminary decree to be made by the mortgagor or other person redeeming the mortgage—

(i) on the principal amount found or declared due on the mortgage—at the rate payable on the principal, or where no such rate is fixed at such rate as the Court deems reasonable,

Interest in mortgage suits

1 Amendments after 1908

The present Rule is new. It was substituted for the old R 11 which was repealed by Act XXI of 1929 and re-enacted as S 94 of the Transfer of Property Act. Prior to Act, XXI of 1929 there was no special statutory provision regarding interest in mortgage suits corresponding to the present Rule.

2 Interest in mortgage suits

This Rule which was inserted in the Code by Act XXI of 1929 gives effect to the previous case-law bearing on the subject. This case-law may be summarised as follows—

Interest prior to the suit—Interest could not be claimed in every case as a matter of course. No interest was recoverable unless there was an express or implied agreement to pay interest¹ or unless it was recoverable under mercantile usage or under some statutory provision, such as the Interest Act 1839 (See Notes under S 34). Where there was an agreement to pay interest, the Court should decree it at the agreed rate, however high it might be,² unless it was penal,³ or the rate of interest was excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair see (Usurious Loans Act, 1918), in either of which cases, the Court might decree what it considered a reasonable rate of interest.³ A stipulation for the payment of compound interest was held to be not necessarily penal.⁴ Nor did the mere fact that the rate of interest was excessive give rise to a presumption of undue influence where it was not proved that the lender was in a position to dominate the will of the debtor.⁵ The interest decreed was a charge on the mortgaged property.⁶

Where the mortgagee was in possession of the mortgaged property, the income from the property should be applied in discharge of the interest payable to him.⁷ But a mortgagee who was entitled to possession in lieu of interest could not claim any interest for the period for which he failed to obtain possession on account of his own laches.⁸

The present Rule and S 72 of the Transfer of Property Act make it clear that interest is payable on the costs and charges and expenses properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security.⁹

Post diem interest or interest after the date fixed in the mortgage deed for the payment of the mortgage money—There was a conflict of decisions as to the power of the Court to decree interest after the due date for payment under the mortgage deed. In some cases it was held that, in the absence of any specific

1. Interest Act of 1839 though there might be no agreement to pay such interest ¹⁴ Such interest awarded either as damages, ¹⁵ or under the Interest Act, ¹⁶ was held not to constitute a charge on the mortgaged property though a contrary view also was held in the undermentioned cases ¹⁷ It was also held that post diem interest claimed as damages for breach of contract could be recovered only for the period prescribed by the Limitation Act for a suit for compensation for such breach, ¹⁸ and that a claim for such damages would fail unless the mortgage suit was brought within the period of limitation for a suit for damages for breach of the contract ¹⁹ But the Privy Council observed in the undermentioned case that the claim was a recurring one and so long as the principal itself was not barred post diem interest could be recovered for the six years (or three years, as the case may be), preceding the suit on the mortgage ²⁰

Interest from institution of suit to the date fixed under the preliminary decree for the payment of the mortgage money—The same rules which guided the Court with reference to interest accruing prior to the suit applied also till the date fixed under the decree for the payment of the mortgage money Hence, where there was a stipulated rate of interest, the Court was held bound to decree interest at that rate till the date fixed for payment of the decretal amount, however high it might be, unless it was penal or was excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair ²¹ Where the period originally fixed for payment was extended by the Future interest after the date fixed for payment is to be paid on the aggregate of the principal interest and costs awarded by the decree²⁶ The present Rule makes it clear that such future interest forms part of the mortgage money and is not a simple money claim²⁷ The proper stage for decreeing future interest is at the time of passing the final decree²⁸ Subsequent interest not mentioned in the final decree must be taken as refused²⁹ But an agreement between the parties for the payment of future interest may be given effect to though the final decree does not provide for it³⁰ When future interest is decreed it must be paid till the confirmation of the sale³¹

R. 12. [New; Act IV of 1882, S 96] Where any property the sale of which is directed under this Order is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, direct that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

1 Transfer of Property Act S 96

The present Rule corresponds to the old S 96 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882 which was repealed in 1908 Under the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act XX of 1929 a new S 96 has been inserted in the Transfer of Property Act which deals with a different subject

1a Scope of the Rule

This Rule confers upon the Court the power of directing a sale free from the prior mortgage subject to two conditions namely, that the property must be one of which the sale is directed under this Order and there must be consent of the prior mortgagee When these conditions are satisfied, the Court has full power in its discretion to direct the sale free from the prior mortgage¹ The Rule does not require the consent of the plaintiff or of anybody else besides that of the prior mortgagee² The right to apply under this Rule is not confined to the plaintiff decree holder The Court can exercise the power under this Rule on the application of anybody or even of its own motion³

2 Sale of property subject to prior mortgage

The explanation to O 34 R 1 makes it clear that the prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit for a sale on puisne mortgage Hence a puisne mortgagee can bring the mortgaged property to sale under his own decree subject to a prior mortgage⁴ The contrary view, taken in the undermentioned cases

2, decided under the Transfer of Property Act, is obsolete ²

As to whether a person having two mortgages on the same property can sue on his puisne mortgage, reserving his rights under the first mortgage see Note 40 to S 11. He cannot, however, in any case, sell the property twice under his two mortgages ³. But if the prior mortgage is a usufructuary one and the mortgagee is therefore unable to bring the property to sale under that mortgage, there is nothing to prevent his bringing the property to sale under his later simple mortgage subject to the prior usufructuary mortgage ⁴.

3 Sale free from prior mortgage.

The Rule clearly implies that without the prior mortgagee's consent property cannot be sold free of his mortgage in execution of a decree for sale on a subsequent mortgage ¹. In the absence of such consent the sale under a decree on a puisne mortgage can only be subject to the prior mortgage though there may be no express reservation of the prior mortgagee's rights ^{1a}. Although the prior mortgagee may be joined as a party to the suit on the puisne mortgage, it is not incumbent on him to assert and prove his priority where his mortgage or his priority is not impugned (See Note 40 to S 11). The priority therefore cannot be lost merely because the prior mortgagee does not establish it in such a case ². See also the undermentioned case ³.

4 Where prior mortgage is a usufructuary one

(a) Sale free of prior mortgage—A usufructuary mortgagee as such, cannot sue for sale on his mortgage. There is therefore a conflict of opinion as to whether a prior usufructuary mortgagee with whose consent the property is sold under this Rule in execution of a decree on a puisne mortgage is entitled to share in the sale proceeds. The High Court of Madras has held that he can, on the ground that this Rule applies to all mortgages whether simple or usufructuary or whether the mortgages are in favour of the same person or different persons ¹. The High Court of Allahabad, on the other hand has held that he cannot do so ². It has, however, held that, where a puisne mortgagee redeems a prior usufructuary mortgagee he can bring the mortgaged property to sale for the amounts due under both the mortgages ³.

(b) Sale subject to prior mortgage—As to sale of mortgaged property subject to a prior usufructuary mortgage see Note 2 supra.

5 Sale by the Court subject to a charge

A statement in a certificate of sale that the sale is subject to a charge is not conclusive against the purchaser when it is sought to enforce the charge by a suit ¹.

A person who sells property subject to an encumbrance which has been recognized by the Court cannot claim a re-sale on the ground that the encumbrance has been found to be void² Mortgages noted in the proclamation of sale as claimed upon the property sold should not necessarily be entered in the certificate of sale or be computed as part of the purchase-money, unless the existence of the mortgage has been either admitted by the parties or established by a decree or declared under O. 21, R 62³ When a sale is subject to encumbrances, the vendor is no longer liable for their satisfaction nor is he entitled to any benefit that the vendee might obtain therefrom⁴

R. 13. [New; Act IV of 1882, S 97] (1) Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows :—

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgage on account of the prior mortgage, and of costs, properly incurred in connection therewith;

thirdly, in payment of all interest due on account of the mortgage in consequence whereof the sale was directed, and of the costs of the suit in which the decree directing the sale was made;

fourthly, in payment of the principal money due on account of that mortgage; and lastly, the residue (if any) shall be paid to the person proving himself to be interested in the property sold, or if there are more such persons than one, then to such persons according to their respective interests therein or upon their joint receipt.

(2) Nothing in this Rule or in R. 12 shall be deemed to affect the powers conferred by S. 57 of the Transfer of Property Act. 1882.

3. 2 Application of proceeds

Compare S 73, ante R 13 in terms applies only when the sale is ordered under R 12, et seq., when the sale is free of the prior mortgage. But the principle of the Rule applies to other cases also. Hence, even in sales subject to a prior mortgage, the proceeds should first be applied towards the interest and costs of the mortgage under which the sale is held and then only towards the principal.¹ This Rule is intended to regulate the position as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. It does not apply to a case of suretyship.^{1a}

Where a sale is held in enforcement of a prior mortgage, a puisne mortgagee receiving an amount from out of the surplus sale proceeds by virtue of his security is bound to apply them only in satisfaction of his mortgage debt though the mortgagor may have paid the money towards other debts.²

3 Whatever is due to the prior mortgagee "

Each of the prior encumbrancers is entitled to interest at the contract rate up to the date of the confirmation of the sale, that being the earliest date when the money really becomes available for distribution.¹

4 ' Person proving himself to be interested in the property sold '

This expression includes a subsequent encumbrancer,¹ but not if the existence or validity of the subsequent encumbrance is challenged by the mortgagor.² A subsequent mortgagee who has obtained a decree on his mortgage but has allowed it to become time barred is not a person interested in the property sold.³ It was held in the case cited below⁴ that the holder of two successive mortgages on the same property, who failed to include the second mortgage in his suit on the first mortgage, could claim the surplus sale proceeds under this Rule as a puisne encumbrancer. That position, will, it is conceived, be different in cases governed by S 67 A of the Transfer of Property Act which has been newly introduced by Act XX of 1929. A mere unsecured creditor is not a person "interested in the property sold." But after the subsequent encumbrances are satisfied, he can proceed against the balance, if any, payable to the mortgagor.⁵

4 R. 14. [New; Act IV of 1882, S. 99¹] (1) Where a mortgagee⁵ has obtained a decree¹⁵ for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage,⁶ he shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit¹¹ for sale in enforcement of the mortgage, and he may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in Order II, R. 2.¹³

I Transfer of Property Act S 99

This Rule corresponds to S 99 of the Transfer of Property Act with this difference viz.—that while S 99 applied even to cases in which the mortgagee had obtained a money decree on a claim unconnected with the mortgage, R 14 is expressly confined to cases where a money decree has been obtained on a claim arising under the mortgage See Note 11 below

2 Scope and object of the Rule

As has been seen in Note 19 to R 5, ante a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage passes the interests of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee, while a sale in execution of a money decree conveys only the interest of the mortgagor, namely the equity of redemption. The object of the present Rule is to prevent the mortgagee from bringing to sale the bare equity of redemption in execution of a money decree which he may obtain in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage. Thus where a mortgagee obtained a simple money decree for the interest that has accrued due on the mortgage or obtains a money decree for the mortgage debt under S 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, he cannot attach and sell the mortgaged properties in execution of the said decree though he can proceed against the person or other properties of the mortgagor. If he wants to proceed against the mortgaged properties he is bound to bring a suit for sale again, and such a suit will not be barred by the provisions of O 2 R 2

The reason of the Rule is the avoidance of several evils which are likely to result if a mortgagee is allowed to bring the mortgaged properties to sale in

14, execution of a money decree which he has obtained on a claim arising under the mortgage¹ Such a sale would deprive the mortgagor summarily of the right of redemption without giving him any of the facilities which an ordinary suit for sale ensures Being subject to the unascertained claim of the mortgagee, the property would not fetch a fair value at the sale and the mortgagee would be enabled to purchase it at an unduly low price If a stranger purchased it at the sale without notice of the mortgage he would be subjected to great hardship unless the mortgagee could be held to be estopped from asserting his rights under the mortgage against such a purchaser²

The Rule is retrospective in effect being a rule of procedure and applies to decrees passed even prior to its coming into force³

The Rule does not apply to the Punjab, the Transfer of Property Act not having been extended thereto⁴ See Sub R 2 See also the undermentioned cases⁵

Under S 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, it was held that it applied to Civil Courts and Revenue Courts⁶ It was also held that the Section applied to mortgages created before the Transfer of Property Act,⁷ but not to judicial sales held and perfected before the date of the Act⁸

The Rule prevents only a sale of the mortgaged property under a money decree in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage It does not prevent the attachment of the mortgaged property under such a decree See Note 8, infra

See also the undermentioned case⁹

3 Applicability of the Rule to enforcement of a charge

By force of R 15 infra, this Rule applies to charges as well as to mortgages¹ It applies however only to a charge which exists prior to the decree for money and not one which is created for the first time by the decree as in the latter case the decree cannot be said to be obtained in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage (See Note 6 infra) In such a case, therefore, the charge can be enforced in execution without any fresh suit for sale being filed ²

Thus where in a suit for maintenance by a Hindu widow the maintenance decreed is made a charge on certain property the widow can enforce the charge by applying for sale of the property in execution and cannot be compelled to file a suit for sale ³

4 Applicability of the Rule to the enforcement of security bonds

Under S 145 of the Code the liability of a surety for a judgment debtor can be enforced summarily in execution proceedings in so far as the surety has made himself personally liable. But, suppose besides making himself personally liable he mortgages some property as security, can the property be sold in execution without a suit for sale? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,¹ Bombay² Madras³ and Patna⁴ that this Rule does not apply to such a case as there is no decree for money against the surety within the meaning of the Rule. But the High Court of Calcutta⁵ has held that the Rule applies and is an absolute bar to the sale of the mortgaged property without a regular suit for sale.

Where the security bond is given to the Court and not to any named person, there is no mortgage, the Court not being a juridical person and the proper procedure to enforce the security is by a summary order for the sale of the property covered by the bond, unless the surety pays the amount of security within a

5 Mortgagee meaning of, under this Rule

Mortgagee includes the holder of a charge See Note 3, supra

6 Decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage

S 99 of the Transfer of Property Act applied though the claim on which the money decree was obtained was totally unconnected with the mortgage. The present Rule applies only to cases in which a money decree is obtained on a claim *arising under the mortgage*¹ (For further information on this aspect of the subject see Note 11, infra)

It follows from the language of the Rule that the mortgage should be one existing prior to the decree and not one created by the decree itself (See Note 3, supra)² The Rule also pre-supposes that the mortgage is valid and enforceable at the time of the passing of the money decree. If the mortgage is invalid or has become unenforceable through the efflux of time or any other reason, the Rule does not apply and is no bar to the sale of the property under the money decree³

7 Effect of sale in contravention of the Rule

A sale in contravention of the Rule can be prevented by objection being taken at any time before the sale takes place¹ But if it does actually take place, it is not void but is only voidable at the instance of the mortgagor or of any other person having an interest in the equity of redemption² The contrary view held in the undermentioned cases³ cannot be considered to be good law. The proper remedy to set aside a sale held in contravention of the Rule is by an application under S 47 of the Code and not by a separate suit⁴. The application should be made before the confirmation of the sale. After the sale has been confirmed it cannot be set aside unless owing to fraud or other reasons the mortgagor was kept in ignorance of the sale proceedings prior to the sale⁵. Where the sale is held after due notice to the judgment debtor he cannot subsequently question its validity⁶.

Once the sale is confirmed the purchaser gets a good title to the property and is not liable to be redeemed subsequently by the mortgagor.⁷ The fact that the mortgagee himself has purchased the property with the leave of the Court makes no difference.⁸ In the undermentioned cases, however, it was held that if the mortgagee himself is the purchaser the mortgagor's right of redemption is not affected.⁹ It is submitted that the latter view is not correct for two reasons —

- (1) S 60 of the Transfer of Property Act recognises the possibility of the extinguishment of the equity of redemption by its becoming vested in the mortgagee and
- (2) a decree holder who buys with the leave of the Court is in the same position as any other purchaser

(See cases cited in Footnote 8 supra and also O 21, R 72)

S 47 and O 21 R 93 do not apply to persons who are not parties to the sale proceedings and therefore such persons can object to the sale by a separate suit even subsequent to its confirmation.¹⁰ to the encumbrances covering the property at the time inasmuch as only the mortgagor's interest passes at such a sale¹¹ (Compare the under mentioned cases¹² decided prior to the Transfer of Property Act in which it was held that the mortgagee's interest also passed at such a sale)

But a mortgagee decree holder who while bringing the mortgaged property to sale under a money decree fails to disclose his mortgage is estopped from asserting his rights under the mortgage against an innocent auction purchaser¹³

An application for sale made in contravention of R 14 is not one in accordance with the law within the meaning of Art 182 of the Limitation Act¹⁴

8 Position of purchaser at such sale—See Note 7 supra

9 Attachment of the property is not prohibited

The Rule prohibits only the sale of the mortgaged property under a money decree for the mortgage debt. The Rule does not preclude the mere attachment of the property in execution of such a decree¹

10 Transferee of money decree from mortgagee if bound by the restrictions against the mortgagee

Under S 49 of the Code a transferee of a decree in respect of a claim arising under the mortgage holds it subject to the equities which the judgment debtor might have enforced against the decree holder. Hence the transferee of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee is bound by the restrictions imposed by this Rule against the mortgagee¹

The transferee of a money decree not in respect of the mortgage obtained by the mortgagee against his mortgagor is not barred, under this Rule from selling the judgment debtor's equity of redemption² See Note 11, infra

11 Otherwise than by instituting a suit

As has been seen in Note 2 ante the effect of this Rule is that where a mortgagee has obtained a simple money decree on his mortgage he cannot bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of such decree but must file a separate suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage and such a suit would not be barred despite the provisions of O 2 R 2¹. A decree in a suit on the mortgage bond which does not provide for the sale of the mortgaged property is only a simple money decree though it may declare the existence of a lien on the property covered by the bond² On the other hand, a decree on a mortgage bond which, though not drawn up in the form prescribed for a decree for sale, yet provides for the sale of the property in case of default by the mortgagor is not a simple money decree and R 14 is no bar to the sale of the mortgaged property in execution thereof³

The Rule applies also to usufructuary mortgages When the mortgagee has obtained a money decree for the mortgage amount in such a case, he cannot bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree He must bring a suit for sale for that purpose He can bring such a suit though, if he had not obtained a money decree for the mortgage amount, he could not have done so on account of the mortgage being a usufructuary one⁴

Where a mortgagee has given up all his rights under the mortgage, the Rule is no bar to the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree for the mortgage debt⁵ (See Note 6, supra, foot note 3)

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the Rule does not apply to a suit for contribution brought by a co mortgagor who has redeemed the entire mortgage and claims a charge on the shares of the other co sharers for the proportionate amounts due by them The reason given is that such a suit is not mere suit for money but a development of the suit on the mortgage⁶

Under O 33 R 13 and S 47 the charge which the Government has on the subject matter of the suit for the Court fee payable in cases where the plaintiff has been allowed to sue as a pauper is enforceable by proceedings in execution and not by separate suit⁷

12 Sale of mortgaged property for claim unconnected with the mortgage

S 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, prohibited a sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee although the decree was upon a claim unconnected with the mortgage¹ The present Rule applies only if the decree for money is in satisfaction of a claim arising under the ernment Such interest can pass only to a purchaser of sale under a decree under S 67 of the Transfer of Property Act

The following are cases showing what are and what are not "claims arising under the mortgage" :—

- (1) Where a usufructuary mortgagee grants a lease of the property to the mortgagor, a claim for rent accruing under the lease is not a claim arising under the mortgage,⁵ unless the lease formed part of the mortgage transaction⁶
- (2) Where a mortgagee holds two distinct mortgages on two different properties of the same mortgagor, he can bring to sale one of the properties in execution of a money decree which he has obtained on the mortgage of the other property⁷
- (3) A claim for costs awarded to a usufructuary mortgagee in a suit for possession against the mortgagor is not a claim arising under the mortgage but one arising by virtue of the decree made by the Court in the suit for possession⁸
- (4) Subsequent to a usufructuary mortgage of the right to receive certain offerings at a temple, the parties agreed between themselves that the mortgagor should pay to the mortgagee a certain sum of money annually in lieu of the offerings a decree was then obtained by the mortgagee, on the basis of this agreement, for the arrears of the annual payments, and it was held that the annual payments formed an essential part of the mortgage money and that hence the decree came within the mischief of R 14⁹
- (5) A mortgagee who has obtained a mortgage decree, as well as a money decree on an independent claim, can sell the property for the consolidated sum and realise, from the sale proceeds, the amount of a decree he has for the mortgage debt¹⁰

13 Order 2, Rule 2

This Rule expressly provides that O 2 R 2 shall not be a bar to a second suit for sale on a mortgage when the mortgagee has merely obtained a money decree on his mortgage, under which he cannot bring the mortgaged property to sale by virtue of this Rule¹. There was a conflict of decisions on this question prior to the Transfer of Property Act. See the undermentioned cases².

Even after the execution of the decree for money has become time barred the mortgagee can sue for sale under this Rule³.

If however the prior decree was a decree providing for sale of the mortgaged property though not strictly drawn up in the form prescribed for a decree for sale, this Rule does not apply and a second suit for sale is barred by *res judicata*⁴. (See Note 11, supra foot notes 2 and 3). Similarly if the mortgagee sues for sale but is content to take only a simple money decree he cannot subsequently sue again for sale. Such a suit will also be barred by res judicata. The exemption in this Rule is only from O 2, R 2 and not from S 11⁵.

Further, this Rule relieves the mortgagee only from the restrictions imposed by O 2 R 2 on the splitting of remedies. The restriction as to splitting of claims is not affected by it⁶. Thus a suit for interest alone brought at a time when the principal has become due is a bar to a subsequent suit for the principal⁷.

14 Consent decree

This Rule does not apply to cases in which a decree for money is passed against the mortgagor by consent. The reason is that the benefit under the Rule is intended only for the mortgagee and so he can waive it by consenting to a money decree being passed for the mortgage amount¹.

15 Decree

An order directing a surety for a judgment debtor to pay the amount secured is not a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this Rule, and hence the Rule does not preclude the sale of the property covered by the

The Rule has been substituted for old R 15 by the Transfer of Property Act (Amendment Supplementary) Act XXI of 1929 The main changes effected in the Rule are

(1) The words "which apply to a simple mortgage" have been substituted for the words "as to the sale or redemption of the mortgaged property"

(2) The words "mortgage by deposit of title deeds within the meaning of S 58" are new

2 Scope of the Rule

By force of this Rule O 34 R 6 applies also to suits to enforce charges¹ The Rule makes the provisions of the Code apply only so far as may be Hence, where a charge is declared by a decree, which in its terms is final, no fresh final decree is necessary.²

3 Charge

A charge is defined in S 100 of the Transfer of Property Act as follows —

“Where immoveable property of one person is by act of parties or operation of law made security for the payment of money to another, and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property

The distinction between a simple mortgage and a charge is often a question of great nicety, but there is a well-marked distinction between the two, viz., that a mortgage does and a charge does not, involve a transfer of an interest in immoveable property.¹ The Transfer of Property Act, S 100, now makes it clear that a charge is not enforceable against a bona fide transferee of the property for value without notice, while a mortgage is so enforceable.² A document purporting to create a charge in future in the event of non payment of the debt does not create any charge within S 100 of the Transfer of Property Act.³ That section also says that all the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act applicable to simple mortgages apply also to charges. As to limitation for suits to enforce charges, see the undermentioned cases.⁴

4 Creation of charge by operation of law

According to S 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, a charge may be created by operation of law or by act of parties. Thus, under S 55 of that Act the vendor of immoveable property has a charge on it for the unpaid purchase money.¹ A puisne mortgagee who is impleaded as a party to a suit by a prior mortgagee to enforce his mortgage is entitled to a charge on the surplus sale proceeds of the property remaining after satisfaction of the prior mortgage.² Under S 95 of that Act one of several co mortgageors who redeems the whole mortgage is entitled to a charge on the shares of the other co mortgageors for their respective portions of the mortgage debt.³ (Under the Section as amended by Act XX of 1929 the redeeming co mortgageor is subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee.) It has been held by the Madras High Court⁴ that where one of several co-sharers of property pays the entire Government revenue due on the land, in order to prevent its sale for arrears of revenue he is entitled to a charge on the shares of the others, for their

5 Creation of charge by act of parties

No formal words are necessary to create a charge, if the intention to do so is clear from the document read as a whole.¹ Thus where a Hindu executed a document agreeing to pay to his sister and after her death to her daughter Rs 10 per mensem from the produce of an estate, held that a charge was created on the profits of the estate for the payment of the amount.² A charge may be created for religious purposes and in such cases the property descends to the heirs or other representatives of the donor subject to the charge for the purposes mentioned.³ Similarly a testator may make a charge on his properties for the payment of his debts.⁴

6 Charge under Rent Act

A charge for the payment of rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act¹ or the Madras Estates Land Act² is not such a charge as is covered by S 100 of the Transfer of Property Act.

7 Priority between rent decree and mortgage decree

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that a purchaser in execution of a rent decree has priority over the purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree.¹ But according to the High Court of Madras a sale for arrears of rent unlike a sale for arrears of revenue is not free of prior encumbrances.² Even where property is sold for arrears of Government revenue if the property is purchased by the mortgagor himself the mortgagee is entitled to have the property sold for the satisfaction of his mortgage debt. This is on the principle that a mortgagor cannot set up against a mortgagee an encumbrance created by himself.³

8 Invalid mortgage if creates a charge

An instrument which is intended to create a mortgage but which is invalid and fails to take effect as it does not fulfil the requirements of the law does not create a charge.¹

9 Right of maintenance

A right to maintenance is not a charge on the property out of which the maintenance is payable. But the right may be made a charge by act of parties or by a decree of Court.¹ As to the procedure for recovering maintenance charged on property by a decree of Court see Notes under R 14 supra.

10 Claim for dower

A claim for dower by a Muhammedan widow is not a charge on the estate in the hands of the heirs of the deceased husband but only ranks with ordinary debts¹ But her decree for dower is entitled to priority over a decree against the heir for the latter's personal debt²

11 Mortgage by deposit of title deeds

See Transfer of Property Act Ss 58 and 96 S 96 makes the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act as to simple mortgages applicable to mortgages by deposit of title deeds Similarly the present Rule makes the provisions of O 34 which are applicable to simple mortgages applicable also to mortgages by deposit of title deeds

12 Charges enforceable by sale

As the remedy of a simple mortgagee is only to sue for sale of the mortgaged property so the charge holder's remedy is also to sue for sale But if the sale proceeds of the property charged are not sufficient to satisfy the charge and if the balance is legally recoverable from the debtor's other properties or from him personally then a personal decree may be obtained under R 6 supra See Note 2 foot note 1 supra

13 Charge on the surplus sale proceeds of sale for arrears of revenue or rent

Under S 73 of the Transfer of Property Act where the mortgaged property is sold for arrears of revenue or rent the mortgage charge is transferred to the surplus sale proceeds and the mortgagee is entitled to have his mortgage debt satisfied out of such proceeds in preference to other creditors of the mortgagor¹ But if the sale was due to the mortgagee's own default he is not entitled to sue for his mortgage money²

R. 2. [S. 472.] Where the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court or placed in the custody of the Court, the plaintiff may be required to so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit.

[1877—S. 472.]

Synopsis.

"May be required to so pay or place it"	Note No 1	Payment to one of the contestants on security	Note No 2
---	--------------	---	--------------

1 'May be required to so pay or place it'

Where the subject-matter of the dispute is a chose in action its disposition as the Court may direct is a sufficient compliance with the Rule¹. The Court has a discretion to make such orders as regards the subject-matter in dispute and the party is bound to obey the order before he can ask for any relief in the suit. This is a further condition that will be imposed upon the party to test his bona fides or disinterestedness. If he is not ready to pay or deliver the property to one of the defendants but disputes his title, the suit is not an interpleader suit². But if the plaintiff complies with the order of the Court he is fully discharged from liability. Thus where the plaintiff pays the amount in dispute into Court for payment to the right person, but the Court pays it to the wrong person the plaintiff cannot be made responsible for the mistake of the Court but is fully discharged from liability³.

2 Payment to one of the contestants on security

The money paid into Court cannot be handed over to one of the parties pending the suit even on security after the original plaintiff is discharged and one of the rival defendants to the interpleader suit is made a plaintiff. It must be kept under the control of the Court available for payment at any time to the successful party¹.

R. 3. [S. 476.] Where any of the defendants in an interpleader suit is actually suing the plaintiff in respect of the subject-matter of such suit, the Court in which the suit against the plaintiff is pending shall, on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted, stay the proceedings as against him; and his costs in the suit so stayed may be provided for in such suit; but if, and in so far as, they are not provided for in that suit, they may be added to his costs incurred in the interpleader suit.

Procedure at first hearing

R. 4. [S. 473] (1) At the first hearing the Court may—

(a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed, award him his costs and dismiss him from the suit; or

(b) if it thinks that justice or convenience so require, retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit

(2) Where the Court finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it to do so, it may adjudicate the title to the thing claimed

(3) Where the admissions of the parties do not enable the Court so to adjudicate, it may direct—

(a) that an issue or issues between the parties be framed and tried, and

(b) that any claimant be made a plaintiff in lieu of or in addition to the original plaintiff, and shall proceed to try the suit in the ordinary manner

The question whether a party to an interpleader issue shall be treated as plaintiff or defendant must be decided by the real merits of the case and not by the mere form of the issue itself¹. exception. The reason for the Rule seems to be that an agent cannot ordinarily dispute the title of his principal. The illustrations to the Rule explain the Rule so far as the agent is concerned. In Illustration (a) C claims adversely to A but not through A whereas in Illustration (b) C claims through A as to the definition of agent and principal see S 182 of the Indian Contract Act.

2 Interpleader suits by Railway Company

A Railway Company by accepting goods for carriage does not become the agent of the consignor. It merely enters into an independent contract with the consignor. It can therefore file an interpleader suit against the consignor and another party claiming adversely to the consignor.¹

3 Interpleader suits by tenants

The prohibition that a tenant cannot file an interpleader proceeding against his landlord is based on the principle that he cannot dispute the title of his landlord during the subsistence of the tenancy.^{1a} A tenant cannot therefore bring a suit against his landlord for the purpose of compelling him to interplead with any person other than a person making claim through such landlord.¹ Thus where a tenant passed two Kal dists in favour of two persons in respect of the same land and then being threatened by suits by both of them instituted a suit praying that the Court may be pleased to declare which defendant has what right in which of the disputed land and in what right the plaintiff holds which of the said lands under whom it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the suit was not maintainable.²

Where A leases certain lands to B and on A's death two persons claim rent from B namely A's heir on the one hand and a person who alleges that A was only a benumidar for X whose heir he is it has been held that the latter must be regarded as claiming through A and that therefore B can file an interpleader suit compelling the two claimants to interplead with each other.³

Where a mortgagee does not deny an assignment by him of his rights under the bond to X but only contends that it is a voidable one the mortgagee may treat the assignee as entitled to the money and is not bound to bring an interpleader suit compelling the mortgagee and X to interplead with each other.⁴

R. 6. [S 475] Where the suit is properly instituted the Court may provide for the costs of the original plaintiff by giving him a charge on the thing claimed or in some other effectual way.

SPECIAL CASE.

R. 1. [S. 527.] (1) Parties claiming to be interested in the decision of any question of fact or law may enter into an agreement in writing stating such question in the form of a case for the opinion of the Court, and providing that, upon the finding of the Court with respect to such question,— with a formulation of the question to be decided by the Court and must be signed by the parties and their counsel if any¹ Where the agreement is duly entered into and filed in the Court having jurisdiction, the proceeding will be registered as a suit and heard and disposed of as such See Rr 2 to 5

Rule 5 enacts that the Court hearing a special case must be satisfied on three points —

1 That the parties have a bona fide interest in the question stated — The right to state a case for the opinion of the Court is not, therefore intended to enable parties to refer to the Court any hypothetical questions or matters of mere academic interest involving no substantial interest to the parties²

2 That the agreement was duly executed by the parties — The Court will not, therefore, interfere in a case where the parties have not provided in the agreement for an undertaking for payment of money, delivery of property, or the doing or the refraining from doing of any particular act in the event of a finding by the Court as required by R 1³

3 That the case is fit to be decided — A case is not fit to be decided unless the successful party will be able either to execute the decree or to base a suit upon the decree passed in it^{3a} Where there are special tribunals to try the question between the parties is for example a question relating to the adequate provision by a municipal corporation for the supply of water and for the protection against fire as regards an estate owned by a Port Trust, a special case cannot be stated for the opinion of the Court Nor will a mere declaration of the rights involved in such a case be a fit point for a special case⁴ So also a question which the Court is not competent to decide in an ordinary suit cannot be stated as a special case⁵

For instances of questions that can be stated as a special case, see the undermentioned cases⁶

As to the re opening of a decided special case see S 90 Note 2 and the undermentioned cases⁷

The provisions of this Order govern the procedure in regard to any dispute between two or more Government Wards referred to a Court for decision See the Bombay Court of Wards Act (1 of 1905) These provisions do not apply to proceedings under the Agia Tenancy Act (III of 1926) See Sch II, List I of the Act

1 Legislative changes —

- 1 The words 'the Courts of Small Causes in Calcutta Madras and Bombay which occurred in Cl () of the old S 538 have been omitted as their appropriate place will be in Rules under the Presidency Towns Small Cause Courts Act, 1832 (Report of the Select Committee)
- 2 The words 'the Court of the Judge of Karachi which occurred in Cl (d) of the old section have been omitted and the words 'The Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind' have been newly added as Cl (e) to the present Rule
- 3 Cl (e) and the last three paragraphs of the old section have been omitted and the present Cl (d) newly added

2 Scope and applicability of the Rule

The provisions of this Order are merely rules of procedure to be applied after the plaint is admitted. They do not alter in any way the nature of the suit or the jurisdiction of Courts.¹ Consequently, suits can only be filed in the Courts which have jurisdiction to try them.^{1a} If they do not happen to be Courts to which the provisions of this Order have been applied under Cl (d) of this Rule, the suit will have to be tried in the ordinary manner.²

Section 192, Cl (a) of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, excludes the applicability of this Order to suits appeals and other proceedings under that Act

3 Courts of Small Causes

By virtue of O 51 infra this Order will not apply to Presidency Small Cause Courts save as otherwise provided by the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act XV of 1882. Under S 9 of the latter Act the High Court may, from time to time, prescribe the procedure to be followed by the Small Cause Court and may, therefore, extend the Rules of this Order also to such Courts. As regards the Provincial Small Cause Courts, S 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act IX of 1887 read with O 50 of this Code, makes it clear that this Order will apply to such Courts if the conditions mentioned in this Rule are satisfied. In other words, if a Provincial Small Cause Court is a Court coming within Cl (d) of this Rule, it can follow the procedure provided by this Order but not otherwise.

Where a Small Cause Court has exclusive jurisdiction in a suit, the fact that the Court has no power under this Order to try it summarily will not enable the suit being filed in some other Court which has such power. The only proper course is to file the suit in the ordinary way in that Small Cause Court.¹

A Subordinate Judge who is presiding over an ordinary Sub Court but who is exercising Small Cause powers cannot at that time be taken to be exercising his original jurisdiction and cannot, therefore, try suits summarily on the ground of his being a Subordinate Judge.²

5 Clause (e)—Lahore High Court

Clause (e) added to this Rule by the Lahore High Court is not ultra vires notwithstanding that it is not one of the Courts mentioned in Cl (a) of this Rule¹

R. 2. [S 532] (1) All suits upon bills of exchange hundies or promissory notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed hereunder, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed, but the summons shall be in Form No 4 in Appendix B or in such other form as may be from time to time prescribed

Institution of summary suits upon bills of exchange etc

(2) In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms, respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from a Judge as hereinafter provided so to appear and defend, and, in default of his obtaining such leave or of his appearance and defence in pursuance thereof, the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted, and the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree

(a) for the principal sum due on the instrument and for interest calculated in accordance with the provisions of section 79 or section 80, as the case may be, of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1931, up to the date of the institution of the suit, or for the sum mentioned in the summons, whichever is less and for interest up-to-date of the decree at the same rate or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit, and

(b) for such subsequent interest, if any, as the Court may order under section 34 of this Code, and

(c) for such sum for costs as may be prescribed

Provided that, if the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum for costs, the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way

(3) A decree passed under this Rule may be executed forthwith

1 Legislative changes

- 1 The words 'In any Court to which this section applies' and the words 'High Court' which occurred in the first paragraph of S 532 of the old Code have been omitted
- 2 The words 'The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to have been admitted' have been newly added in substitution of the explanation annexed to the old section and the words 'by a Rule of the High Court' which occurred in the old section have been omitted
- 3 The provision for immediate execution of decrees at the end of the second paragraph of S 532 has been incorporated in sub rule (3) with the word 'executed' substituted for the word 'enforced'
- 4 The third paragraph of the old section has been omitted

2 Summary Suits and Ordinary Suits

The Rule is only an enabling provision. A plaintiff wishing to enforce a bill of exchange a hundi or a promissory note may at his option bring a summary suit under this Order or a suit under the ordinary procedure. A summary suit, however, can only be brought in the Courts mentioned in R 1 and within one year from the date when the debt becomes due¹. But the corresponding advantage to the plaintiff choosing this procedure is that the defendant is not entitled as of right to be heard in defence. He must apply for leave within 10 days of the service of summons upon him² and if he does not apply for such leave or if the leave is refused the plaintiff is entitled to a decree.

Suits under the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908) are not governed by this Order. See S 192 A of the Act.

3 Form of summons in summary suit

See Form No 4 of Appendix B infra. Where the High Court of Madras framed Rules under S 9 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act XV of 1882 prescribing the form of summons in summary suits under that Act, it was held that the fixing of 3 days thereon as the time within which the defendant should apply for leave to defend was unreasonable and *ultra vires*¹.

The summons under this Rule should be served in the same manner as is provided for the service of ordinary summons under O 3².

4 Limitation for summary suits

Art 5 of the Limitation Act 1877 prescribed a period of 6 months for suits on negotiable instruments instituted under Chapter 39 of the Old Code (corresponding to O 37). There was no specific provision for other summary suits such as those specified in S 128 of this Code. When this latter section was newly introduced in the present Code in 1908 Art 5 was also amended by the Limitation Act of 1908 by providing a period of 6 months for suits under the summary procedure referred to in S 128 (2) (f) of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, the intention of the Legislature obviously being to provide for all summary suits under the Code. It was however held by the High Court of Calcutta in the undermentioned case,¹ that the words "summary procedure referred to in S 128 (2) (f), Code of Civil Procedure' did not include suits under O 37 Art 5 hrs, in view of this, been again amended by Act, XXX of 1925, so as to include suits under this Order. The period of 6 months hrs also been increased to one year. At present, therefore, a summary suit whether under this Order or under S 128 of the Code should be filed within one year from the date when the debt becomes payable or when the property becomes recoverable²

5 'Unless he obtains leave

The High Court of Bombay has held that a defendant who has obtained no leave to appear and defend the suit under this Rule, cannot be allowed to participate in the trial of the suit and that, therefore, he cannot appear at the hearing and ask the Court to make the decree amount payable in instalments¹. But the High Court of Rangoon has taken a contrary view that the defendant is entitled to be heard on such a question whether or not he has obtained leave to appear or to defend the suit^{1a}

Where in a summary suit against a firm under O 30 of the Code a partner enters appearance he should obtain leave to defend as required by this Rule². Before granting a decree under this Rule the Court should be satisfied that the defendant has had full opportunity to obtain leave to defend³

6 Allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted

This clause is new and has been substituted for the explanation contained in the old section. It embodies an exception to the fundamental principle that a plaintiff must prove the case with which he comes to Court and dispenses with such proof in view of the special nature of the documents mentioned in the Rule¹

The effect of this provision is that in the special class of suits under consideration, where leave is not applied for or is applied for and refused the plaintiff gets a decree without adducing any evidence but on mere proof of service of summons². The admission as regards the allegations in the plaint mentioned in this Rule does not apply to interest as to which there is a specific provision in sub rule 2, clause (a)³. Thus, where in a summary suit on a hundi, which did not contain any agreement for interest the plaintiff claimed in the plaint interest at the rate of 33 1/3 per cent per annum it was held that the interest claimed could not be deemed to have been admitted and the Court could award interest only at the rate of 6 per cent per annum under S 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act⁴

7 Limitation for application for leave to defend

An application for leave to defend should be made within 10 days of the date of service of summons on the defendant¹. This period which is fixed by the Limitation Act cannot be extended by the Court under the provisions of S 148

Where an ex parte decree is passed in a summary suit and the defendant shows sufficient cause for his inability to appear and apply in time for leave to defend the ex parte decree will be set aside⁴

8 Interest

Before the amendment of this Rule by Act XXX of 1926 interest was awardable at the rate specified, if any, up to the date of the decree Under the present Rule as amended by Act XXX of 1926 interest is to be awarded as follows—

- (a) Up to the institution of the suit in accordance with the provisions of S 79 or S 80 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, i.e., at the rate specified in the document or where no rate is so specified, at 6 per cent per annum¹

2 The affidavit must disclose a defence

The application for leave to defend must be supported by an affidavit disclosing a defence.¹ If the affidavit discloses a triable issue, that is, a plea which is at least plausible then leave should be granted,² whether the defence is a legal or an equitable one³ and even though it may not ultimately turn out to be a good defence.⁴ On the other hand, if no triable issue is disclosed by the affidavit leave should be refused.⁵

Leave to defend was granted in the following cases —

(a) Where the claim was based on an endorsed promissory note and the defendant pleaded that the endorsement was a forgery.⁶

(b) Where a suit was instituted against a member of a joint Hindu family on a hundi drawn by the manager thereof, and the defendant pleaded that no notice of dishonour was given to the drawee.⁷

(c) Where the defendant preferred a cross claim for damages for wrongful arrest before judgment in the very suit instituted against him.⁸

- (c) Where the defendant pleaded that the note sued on formed part of an account of the mutual dealings between him the plaintiff and other parties¹¹

3 Leave when granted conditionally—Sub Rule 2

The Court has a discretion in the matter of attaching conditions to the grant of leave to defend. As a rule where a valid defence or triable issue is disclosed, the leave should be granted unconditionally¹. It is only in cases where there appears to be so grave a suspicion that the Court comes to the conclusion that the defence is put in only to obtain further time, conditions should be attached to the grant of the leave². In such cases the proper course is to grant the leave on the defendant depositing the money into Court³.

In cases where money is deposited as a condition to obtaining leave to defend the decretal amount will be a charge on such deposit⁴.

4 Limitation—See Note 7 to Rule 2 supra

5 Appeal

The High Court of Bombay has held that an order by a Judge in Chambers granting leave on a condition which the defendant is not able to comply with is a judgment within the meaning of Cl 15 of the Letters Patent and hence appealable under that clause¹. But the High Courts of Calcutta² and Rangoon³ have held that a conditional order granting leave under this Rule is not a judgment and hence not appealable.

Power to set aside decree Note No 1

1 Power to set aside decree

A defendant who has not obtained leave to defend will not be allowed to appear at the hearing of the suit. In such cases a decree should follow. Thereafter the remedy of the defendant is to apply under O 20 R 11 or to apply under this Rule to set aside the decree.¹ If on such application the defendant satisfies the Court about his being prevented by sufficient cause from appearing in time and getting leave to defend the decree against him will be set aside and he will be allowed to contest the claim.²

ARREST AND ATTACHMENT BEFORE JUDGMENT

Arrest before Judgment

R. 1. [Ss 477, 478] Where at any stage of a suit other than a suit of the nature referred to in section 16, clauses (a) to (d), the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise,—

1 Where defendant is called upon to furnish security for appearance

(a) that the defendant with intent to delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

(i) has absconded or left the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court or

(ii) is about to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(iii) has disposed of or removed from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or

(b) that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the Court may issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not furnish security for his appearance

Provided that the defendant shall not be arrested if he pays to the officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant any sum specified in the warrant as sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, and such sum shall be held in deposit by the Court until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court

1 Legislative changes

The following are the material changes introduced in the Rule —

- 1 The words "other than a writ for the possession of the immovable property which occurred in the old Section have been substituted by the words "other than a writ of the nature referred to in S 16 Cl (1) to (1)"
- 2 The proviso to the Rule is new and is similar to R 38 of O 21
- 3 The provision for the examination of the applicant which occurred in S 48 of the old Code has been omitted See Note 3 below

2 Scope of the Rule and of the Order

The normal remedy available to a creditor having a demand against his debtor is to first obtain a decree against him and then to arrest him or to attach his property in execution of that decree under the provisions of O 21. Under special circumstances however which are specified in this Rule and R 3 infra, the creditor can take out arrest or attachment against his debtor even before judgment. The object of such a provision is to prevent any attempt on the part of the defendant to defeat the realisation of the decree that may be passed against him.

Before the creditor can resort to the extraordinary procedure provided by this Rule he must show that there is good reason to believe that the debtor is about to depart from the jurisdiction of the Court or to make away with his property (See Note 3 infra). The Rule will not enable him to take out arrest before judgment merely because it would secure easy execution of the decree.¹

3 Distinction between Cls (a) and (b)

In order to apply Cl (a) it is necessary to show that the defendant has committed or is about to commit any of the acts specified therein with intent to delay the plaintiff or to avoid the process of the Court or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him.¹ No such intention need be proved in cases coming under Cl (b). It is only necessary to show that the circumstances under which the defendant is about to leave British India afford a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will be obstructed or delayed in realising his decree.²

4 Affording reasonable probability See S 13 above5 Is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise

Under S 178 of the old Code the Court could issue a warrant to arrest the defendant before judgment where after examining the applicant and making such further investigation as it thinks fit it is satisfied that the defendant has committed or is about to commit any of the acts specified in Cls (a) and (b).¹ This provision has now been omitted and the Court can without any such examination or investigation act under this Rule if it is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise of the existence of the circumstances specified in those clauses. Before the Court can act under this Rule it must have reason to believe on adequate materials, that, unless the jurisdiction is exercised there is real danger that the defendant will remove himself or his property from the ambit of the powers of the Court.^{1a}

Where there was reason to believe that the defendants were removing goods and selling them at less than cost price, and that they were evading arrest without furnishing any security, it was held the Rule was properly applied to the case.² But where the defendant had to leave his place of residence for attendance in a criminal Court, it was held that the departure could not be said to be with a view to delay the plaintiff or to avoid the process of the Court or to obstruct or delay execution and that therefore an order under this Rule should not be passed.³

6 Suit must be bona fide

Before exercising the powers conferred by this Rule a Court should be satisfied that the plaintiff's suit is *bona fide*¹ and that his cause of action is prima facie an unimpeachable one subject to his proving the allegations made in the plaint.²

Where the plaintiff is indisputably entitled to a part of his claim the mere circumstance of the rest of the claim being of a disputable character does not render the suit mala fide.³

7 To show cause why he should not furnish security for his appearance

Where the Court issues a warrant of arrest against the defendant, he is entitled to show cause against his arrest. The cause must be either that he is not going to leave the jurisdiction of the Court or not for so long a time as will obstruct or tend to obstruct the plaintiff should he succeed or that the suit is not a bona fide one or that even if it is the institution of it has been vexatiously delayed till the defendant is about to depart in order to embarrass or coerce him.¹

1 Security

In a suit for the recovery of Rs 29 508 the plaintiff obtained a warrant for arrest of the defendant but the warrant directed the warrant officer to demand Rs 10,000 and if the sum was not paid then, to arrest him. The defendant did not pay the amount and was arrested and brought before the Court. It was held that the Court should limit the security to be given to Rs 10 000 as per terms of the notice in the warrant and not to order security to be given for amount claimed in the suit¹

2 Deposit not open to rateable distribution—See the last paragraph of Note 4 to S 73

3 Deposit by defendant—Effect of insolvency

Money or other property deposited by a defendant arrested before judgment sufficient to answer the claim is earmarked for the suit and is subject to the lien of the plaintiff in the event of his success. Consequently if the defendant becomes insolvent the plaintiff is entitled to appropriate it to the exclusion of the Official Receiver and other creditors. But a security given for the appearance of the defendant in Court whenever called upon cannot be said to be to the credit of the suit or earmarked to the general purposes of the suit¹

4 Or to furnish security for his appearance

Where a judgment debtor was released on furnishing security for his appearance on a certain day and the surety executed a bond for the due performance of the decree on failure of the judgment debtor to satisfy it it was held that the bond was not in accordance with the Court's order and the surety was discharged from his responsibility on the appearance in Court of the judgment debtor on the specified day¹. Where on an application by the plaintiff for arrest of the defendant a pleader appeared on behalf of the latter and stood bail and thereupon the defendant was not arrested it was held that the surety could not be allowed afterwards to contend that the security was illegal by reason of the fact that the defendant was not arrested²

5 Extent of surety's liability

The security to be furnished under this Rule is for the appearance of the defendant while the suit is pending and until satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him. But the fact that the surety bond went beyond the terms of this Rule and provided for the payment of the amount claimed in the suit in the event of a decree being passed against the defendant will not render the bond unenforceable¹. Nor will a surety for the appearance of the defendant, be relieved of his obligation merely because the decree is a compromise decree instead of being

The object of the security bond under this Rule is merely to secure the rights of the judgment-creditor. The Government is not interested in the proceedings in any way. On the failure of the defendant to appear as required the Court cannot suo motu make an order forfeiting the bond and direct him to pay the whole of the maximum sum therein stipulated to Government. The enforcement of the bond should only be made on the application of the judgment creditor and then only to the extent of the sum of money found payable under the decree³

A surety for the appearance of the defendant may apply under this Rule to be discharged from his obligation. But before he is so discharged it is essential that the defendant should appear before the Court either voluntarily or in pursuance of a summons or warrant of arrest issued against him under sub rule (2)¹. If he is present in Court under circumstances which exempt him from arrest,² or if he appears under a protection order of the insolvency Court in his favour³ the surety will not be entitled to be discharged from his obligation under this Rule. decree that may be passed against him¹ It follows that the Rule applies only where the defendant is about to dispose of, or remove from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, his properties, and not to cases where he has already disposed of them² It is also necessary, before the Rule can be applied, to show that the defendant has acted, or is about to act with the intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him³

The Rule applies, in terms, to suits An application to enforce an award under paragraph 20 of the second schedule to the Code, when numbered and registered as a suit, becomes a suit for the purposes of this Order and the Court can pass an order for attachment before judgment under this Rule⁴ It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that this Rule may be applied to proceedings other than suits by virtue of S 141 of the Code, and that therefore a liquidation Court dealing with the proceedings under the Companies Act can make an order under this Rule for attachment before judgment⁵ According to the High Court of Calcutta an attachment before judgment is a matter of relief and not of procedure⁶ It would seem to follow from this that S 141 under which the procedure provided in the Code in regard to suits should be followed in other proceedings also, will not enable the Court to apply this Rule to such proceedings

An application under this Rule should specify the property to be attached and the estimated value thereof, an application generally for security being taken for the satisfaction of any decree that may be passed, without specifying any property is not one falling within the scope of the Rule⁷ In the undermentioned case⁸ where an application for injunction was made to restrain the defendant from withdrawing certain amounts standing to his credit, it was held that the order issued thereon really amounted to an attachment before judgment

The Court can pass orders under this Rule even if the trial of the suit has been stayed under S 10 of the Code (See Note 12 to S 10, ante) As to whether the Court has power in cases not covered by this Rule, to pass orders for attachment before judgment, see Note 2 to S 94

The provisions of the Code relating to attachment before judgment apply to all proceedings referred to in S 265 (3) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908) and in S 16 of the Bengal Rent Act (VI of 1862)

3 Mortgage suits

The provisions of this Rule are not inapplicable to mortgage suits Where there is a reasonable probability of the mortgaged property being insufficient to discharge the mortgage debt and of the mortgagee being entitled to get a personal decree in his favour for the balance, properties of the defendant other than those covered by the mortgage can be attached before judgment under this Rule, if the requirements of the Rule are satisfied¹ The Courts should, however, act with extreme caution in such cases²

5 Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis

It has been held in the case cited below that an application to sue in forma pauperis does not become a suit until the same has been granted, and that consequently, the Court has no jurisdiction to make an order for attachment before judgment under this Rule¹ The decision does not however, advert to the applicability or otherwise of S 141 in such cases

10 Power of Insolvency Court to attach properties

Under S 21, Cl (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1920, the Insolvency Court can attach the property of the debtor under circumstances similar to those specified in this Rule¹

11 Where the Court is satisfied

Under S 484 of the old Code the Court could issue an order for attachment before judgment where after examining the applicant and making any further investigation which it thought fit it was satisfied that the defendant had removed or was about to remove or dispose of his property with the intention of obstructing or delaying the execution of any decree that may be passed against him This provision has now been omitted and the Court can, without any such examination or investigation act under this Rule if it is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise of the existence of the specified circumstances

The jurisdiction of Courts in attaching property before judgment is of an extraordinary nature and should be exercised sparingly and strictly in accordance with the procedure prescribed by the Code¹ The Court should be satisfied on two points namely —

- (1) that the defendant is about to dispose of the whole or part of his property, and
- (2) that the disposal is with the intention of obstructing or delaying the execution of any decree that may be passed against him²

Attachment granted only on ground of difficulty to plaintiff to realize his decree is on insufficient grounds

There must be definite evidence on these points and not merely vague allegations.³ But the Court is not restricted to examine attempts at dissipation made after the commencement of the action: it is open to it to look to the conduct of the parties immediately before the suit and to examine also the surrounding circumstances.⁴

12 Is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property

Before exercising jurisdiction under this Rule and passing orders for the attachment of properties before judgment the Court should satisfy itself of the practical certainty of the plaintiff's success and of the existence of a grave danger and of a real fear that a dishonest defendant, undoubtedly liable, is making away with the probable fruits of the judgment.¹ For this purpose it is not sufficient to merely allege that the defendant is likely to dispose of the property. Nor is it sufficient to state that he is about to dispose it of, without stating the sources of such information.² The word 'property' includes property of every description whether moveable or immovable³ and whether in the possession of the defendant or of some other person on his behalf.⁴ It includes a debt⁵ or a chose in action.⁶ But the debt must be one that is accruing or has accrued.⁷ Joint property belonging to a partnership of which the judgment debtor is a member is not the property of the judgment debtor and cannot be attached before judgment under this Rule.⁸

13 With intent to obstruct or delay

The Court must be satisfied not only that the defendant is about to dispose of his property or to remove it from the jurisdiction of the Court but also that his object in so doing, is to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him.¹ Such an intention cannot be inferred merely from the fact that the defendant has entered into an agreement to sell a portion of his property,² or that he has actually alienated a portion of his properties³ or that he has allowed his properties to be sold in execution of decrees or for arrears of revenue⁴ or that he is running into debts or is attempting to secure debts already incurred by executing a mortgage in respect thereof.⁵ A man is not debarred from dealing

5 with his property simply because a suit has been filed against him⁶ Nor can an attachment be ordered merely because the defendant has failed to give an undertaking⁷

14 Court may direct security to be furnished for producing the attached property in Court

The expression has reference only to such property as is capable of being produced in Court¹

15 Extent of surety's liability — See Note 9 to S 145 ante

The surety is liable whether the decree is passed on a compromise¹ or on an award² In a recent Bombay case, however, where a decree was passed on the consent of parties allowing the payment of the decree amount in 9 monthly instalments the Court applied the principles of S 133 of the Contract Act and held that the surety was discharged from liability on the ground that the compromise which was subsequently embodied in the decree prejudiced the rights of the surety against the debtor and that such a decree was not in the contemplation of the surety when he gave the bond³ Again where a surety for the production before the Court of property released from attachment before judgment was not put in possession of the property so released it was held that he could not be proceeded against in the event of a decree being passed⁴

But a mere notice given by the surety to the effect that he intends not to be surety any longer will not enable him to withdraw from the guarantee at any time⁵ Nor will the death of the defendant operate to discharge him⁶ It has been seen in Note 9 to S 145 that the dismissal of a suit will put an end to the liability of the surety But if the dismissal is one for default and the suit is immediately restored the surety will remain liable under the bond⁷

16 Whether the Court can extend time for furnishing security

The Court may under its general powers extend the time for furnishing the security directed to be given under this Rule¹

17 Property situated outside jurisdiction

As has been seen in Note 7 to S 136 ante there was a conflict of decisions under the old Code as to whether a Court could attach before judgment property situate outside its jurisdiction¹ but in view of the omission in the present section of the words 'within the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court can now order the attachment of properties whether situated within or without its jurisdiction² though in the latter case the proper procedure for attachment is to transmit the order to the Court in whose jurisdiction the property is situate³

But a Court cannot order the attachment of properties outside British India⁴

18 Effect of attachment

See Note 5 to S 64 and Note 11 to O 21, R 54. An attachment of property involves the attachment of the profits of that property, but the creditor does not thereby become entitled to such profits. The debtor who collects such profits cannot be called upon to account for the profits received by him.¹ An attachment of a debt, does not prevent the creditor from suing for the debt.² See also Note 16 to O 21, R 46. An attachment before judgment without complying with the provisions of R 5 is ultra vires and does not come in the way of an alienation pending such attachment.³

19 Money deposited into Court in pursuance of the attachment, if liable to rateable distribution

Where money and moveables are attached before judgment by several creditors in various suits and they are realized by Court before any of them has obtained a decree, they should be held to the credit of all the suits and distributed rateably among all the creditors who have obtained decrees, before any of the others apply for payment.¹ Attachment before judgment does not give any priority over another who attaches in execution and may be defeated by a decree holder who attaches in execution and applies for payment.² Money paid by a surety after the decree holder takes out execution is also liable to rateable distribution.³ (See also Notes to O 21 R 52 and Note 4 to S 73.) Where however, property attached before judgment is released on the defendant giving security of some of the items attached the plaintiff on obtaining the decree is entitled to a preferential right and can execute against the security.⁴

20 Vesting order in insolvency how affects attachment before judgment

Where the property of the defendant is attached before judgment and subsequently the defendant becomes insolvent, the attachment will not give any priority to the plaintiff over the Official Receiver or Official Assignee in respect of such properties.¹ If the defendant pays money into Court as security for raising the attachment and subsequently becomes insolvent, the plaintiff will not get any charge over the money as against the Official Assignee.² (See also Notes 10 and 14 to S 64 and the case noted below.³)

21 Right of survivorship if defeated by attachment

There is a conflict of opinion as to the effect of attachment before judgment on the right of survivorship among members of a joint Hindu family. According to the High Courts of Bombay and Patna where the judgment debtor dies after in attachment before judgment but before it is converted into an attachment in execution the right of survivorship would prevail over the attachment.¹ The High Court of Madras has dissented from the said view and has held that as soon as a decree is passed in the suit the attachment before judgment would operate so as to defeat the right of survivorship and that it is not necessary that any steps need

22 Liability for wrongful attachment

The general principle is that it is not an actionable wrong to institute Civil Proceedings But proceedings taken for the arrest of the defendant or for the attachment of his property form an exception to the general rule and a suit is maintainable for damages for wrongful arrest or attachment¹ In such a suit the plaintiff must show that the defendant was actuated by malice, that the proceedings were without reasonable and probable cause and that damages have been sustained thereby² It should also be shown that the attachment was withdrawn in plaintiff's favour^{3a} General and special damages may be awarded according to the circumstances of the case³

The cause of action for the suit is the date of the wrongful seizure and not the date when the seizure is declared wrongful⁴

See also Note 20 to S 9 Note 4 to S 62, and S 95 and also the under mentioned case⁵

23 Conditional attachment

'Conditional attachment' means an immediate attachment of a provisional kind conditioned to become plenary if security should not be furnished or cause shown according to the terms of the order¹ The power given by O 38 R 5 to make an alternative order directing the defendant within a specified time to furnish security or to appear and show cause carries with it as an incident the power to confirm the order that security be furnished² A conditional order of attachment cannot be made without at the same time making an order directing the defendant to furnish security or to show cause why he should not furnish security without such an order the order of attachment will be invalid³ A conditional order of attachment pending the disposal of an application for the appointment of a guardian cannot be said to be invalid merely because the guardian proposed subsequently comes and states that he is unwilling to act⁴ When after a conditional order is passed under this Rule the suit is transferred to another Court the latter Court can pass further necessary orders in the matter⁵

A conditional order has effect only till the defendant shows cause or furnishes security⁶

24 Appeal

No appeal is provided for against orders under this Rule in O 43 R 1 An order made under the provisions of O 38, R 5 is not a Judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent and is not appealable as such under the Letters Patent¹

1 Scope of the Rule

A conditional order of attachment passed under R 5 above has effect only until the defendant furnishes security or appears to show cause.¹ An unconditional order of attachment under this Rule can be passed only if the defendant fails to show cause why he should not furnish security or on his failure to furnish the security required.² The question whether there has been a failure to do so is one that must be judicially determined before drawing up the writ of attachment.³

3 Appeal

This Rule contemplates orders of two kinds—

- 1 An unconditional order directing attachment under Cl 1 on the defendant's failure to furnish security or to show cause against the order for security, and
- 2 An order withdrawing a conditional attachment made under R 5 on the defendant furnishing security or showing cause

Both these orders are appealable under O 43, R 1 (q)¹ but an order directing security to be furnished is not appealable². Similarly where on an application for attachment under R 5 the Court issued notice to the defendant without ordering any conditional attachment and on the defendant's showing cause, in answer to the notice the Court dismissed the application, it was held that the order of dismissal was not one under Cl 2 of this Rule and is therefore not appealable³. But where the defendant appears in answer to the notice and gives an undertaking not to alienate certain properties and the petition is thereupon closed, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that there is an order under this Rule from which an appeal lies⁴.

An appeal against an order directing attachment before judgment is not restricted to the grounds mentioned in Rule 5 ante and this Rule. Thus the question whether a certain property can be attached having regard to the provisions of S 60 ante, can be raised in the appeal⁵. An order passed under this Rule is a discretionary order and therefore, an appellate Court ought not to interfere with the exercise of the discretion by the first Court, unless it is satisfied that it acted on wrong principles. The mere fact that the appellate Court might have taken a different view is not a sufficient ground for interference⁶.

An appeal against an order of attachment before judgment under this Rule does not become infructuous merely because of a decree having been passed in favour of the plaintiff.

4 Form—See App F Form No 7

5 Enforcement of security bond given under this Rule

A security bond executed by a defendant under this Rule, for the purpose of removing the attachment before judgment can be enforced in execution. A suit under S 67 of the Transfer of Property Act is not necessary to enforce it¹.

1 Mode of making attachment

This Rule provides that the attachment before judgment shall be made in the manner provided for the attachment of property in execution of a decree i.e., in the manner provided in O 21^{1a}

Thus an attachment before judgment of immoveable property must be effected in the manner provided by O 21 R 34 by a prohibitory order. Where no such order is passed or published there is no legal attachment¹. Similarly an attachment before judgment of a debt must be made in the manner prescribed by O 21 R 46 and as in cases under that Rule the Court cannot enquire into the truth or genuineness of the debt². See also Note 7 to O 21 R 46.

Where there is no positive evidence that the attachment was not effected in accordance with the law the Court should give effect to the presumption regarding the regularity of official acts³. See S 114 of the Evidence Act Note 3 to S 64 and Note 5 to O 21 R 34.

An attachment ordered before judgment cannot be treated as a nullity merely because it is not completed till after judgment⁴.

1 Rights of third persons not affected by attachment before judgment

An attachment before judgment does not affect the rights of persons not parties to the suit. Thus a stranger to whom the property has been transferred before attachment¹ or a receiver of the property who is not a party to the suit² is not affected by the attachment. Where an agreement for sale has been entered into in respect of a property before the attachment thereof the right of the purchaser to have the conveyance executed is not affected by the attachment.³ A puisne mortgagee has a charge over the surplus sale proceeds in Court after the property was sold at the instance of the prior mortgagee. He is not affected by an attachment before judgment effected subsequent to the mortgage.⁴

As to the effect of attachment on the right of survivorship in a joint Hindu family see Note 21 to R 5

2 Other decree holders' right to execute their decree not affected

It has been seen in Note 5 to S 64 and Note 11 to O 31 R 54 that an attachment does not confer any title charge lien or priority in the property in favour of the person attaching it.^{1a} It will not therefore prevent the property from being attached and sold in execution of any other decree against the same judgment debtor.¹ Where A attaches before judgment money deposited in Court to satisfy B's decree he does not thereby get any right or title to the money and cannot apply to the Court holding the money for payment. He must apply for execution of his decree and for transfer of the money to his own suit.²

1 Legislative changes

The words "upon an application for the execution of such decree to apply for re attachment of the property" have been substituted for the words "to re attach property in execution of such decree". The words "upon an application" make it clear that after decree the plaintiff must apply like any other execution creditor.

2 Scope of the Rule

Where an attachment before judgment has been made, the decree passed in the suit does not determine the attachment. It, therefore, continues to remain in force in the absence of a specific order of the Court raising it.¹ Upon an application for execution of the decree, it is not necessary to re-attach the properties.²

But as has been seen in Note 10 to S 73 an attachment before judgment confers no right on the party who obtains the attachment, and he will not thereby become entitled to get rateable distribution under S 73 unless like other decree holders, he applies for execution after getting his decree.³

3 Re-attachment if operates as waiver of attachment

If an attachment is made before judgment it does not terminate with the decree unless there is proof of an intention on the part of the plaintiff to abandon it. The mere fact that the properties were re attached after judgment is no proof of such abandonment.¹

4 Objection that property is not attachable can be raised after decree

When attachment before judgment is asked for the defendant is not bound to take exception to the validity of the attachment on the ground the property is inalienable. He could take such objection when an application is made for execution of the decree passed in the suit.¹

Attachment of immoveable property—Small Cause Courts Note No 1

1 Attachment of immoveable property—Small Cause Courts

As has been seen in the Notes to S 7 ante, that before Act I of 1926 was passed it had been held that an attachment of immoveable property before judgment could be passed by a Small Cause Court¹ This Rule newly introduced in this Order now makes it clear that such an order cannot now be passed by a Small Cause Court²

It has been held in the undermentioned case³ that Act I of 1926 operates retrospectively and that an order for conditional attachment before judgment made before the Act came into force cannot be confirmed and made absolute after the Act came into force

Delete the words "or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree" in Cl (a) and delete the word 'sale' after the words "diminishing alienation" and add the following proviso to the Rule—

Provided that if it appears to the Court that the property in suit is in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree the Court may also by order grant a temporary injunction restraining the Court executing the decree from confirming the sale held in execution of the decree until the disposal of the suit or until further orders.

RANGOON

In Cl (a) the words "or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree" shall be deleted.

In the last sentence the word 'sale' occurring between the words "alienation" and "removal" shall be deleted.

1 Legislative changes

In the last paragraph of the Rule the words (or refuse such injunction or other order) which occurred at the end of the old section have been omitted and the words until disposal of the suit or until further orders have been newly added

2 Injunctions temporary and perpetual

An injunction is a judicial process whereby a party is required to do, or to refrain from doing any particular act¹. It is in the nature of a preventive relief granted to a litigant quia timet i. e., because he fears future possible injury². Its main purpose is to preserve the subject matter of the suit in status quo for the time being³.

Injunctions are of two kinds temporary and perpetual. A perpetual injunction restrains a party for ever from doing the act specified. It is regulated by Ss 54 to 57 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877⁴ and can be granted only by a decree passed after the hearing of the suit on the merits. A temporary injunction, on the other hand, endures only until the disposal of the suit in which it is granted or until the further orders of Court. It is regulated by the provision of O 39 of the Code⁵ and can be granted on an interlocutory application at any stage of the suit. Although temporary injunctions are regulated by the Code the general principles governing their grant have been held to be the same as those governing the grant of perpetual injunctions,⁶ though in the undermentioned case⁷, the rule was held to be too broadly stated. An injunction whether temporary or perpetual, compelling a party to do a particular act is called a mandatory injunction. In a Bombay case⁸ Beaman J. doubted whether a mofussil Court in India had power to issue a temporary injunction in a mandatory form. Such a power has, however, been recognised in the undermentioned cases⁹.

3 Scope and principle of the Rule

This Rule lays down the circumstances under which a temporary injunction can be granted¹ and unless those circumstances exist, a Court has no jurisdiction to grant it². But the fact that those circumstances exist does not compel the Court to grant it in all cases inasmuch as the Rule only says that in the cases mentioned therein the Court may grant an injunction. Thus the granting of an injunction under the Rule is purely within the discretion of the Court³. This discretion, however, should, like other cases of discretion vested in Courts be exercised in accordance with reason and on sound judicial principles ⁴

What then are the principles which govern the exercise of the discretion conferred by this Rule? They are set out in the undermentioned cases⁵ and are to the effect that a person who seeks a temporary injunction must satisfy the Court —

Firstly that there is a serious question to be tried in the suit and that on the facts before the Court there is a probability of his being entitled to the relief asked for by him

Secondly that the Court's interference is necessary to protect him from that species of injury which the Court calls irreparable before his legal right can be established on trial, and

Thirdly that the comparative mischief or inconvenience which is likely to issue from withholding the injunction will be greater than that which is likely to arise from granting it

The first of the above conditions is what is generally termed a prima facie case. In other words the prima facie existence of a right and its infringement are the first conditions for the grant of a temporary injunction ⁶. But the existence

Civil Procedure Code has no application when the defendant is in pos-

1. of a prima facie case is not by itself sufficient. The applicant should further satisfy the second condition by showing that irreparable injury will accrue to him if the injunction is not granted⁷ and that there is no other remedy open to him by which he could protect himself from the consequences of the apprehended injury.⁸ Irreparable injury however does not mean that there must be no physical possibility of repairing the injury, but means only that the injury must be a material one i.e., one that cannot be adequately compensated for in damages.⁹ The third condition is what is called the principle of the "balance of convenience."¹ In applying this principle, the Court should weigh the amount of substantial mischief that is likely to be done to the applicant if the injunction is refused and compare it with that which is likely to be caused to the other side if the injunction is granted.¹⁰ If on such a consideration, the Court thinks that pending the determination of the suit, the subject-matter should be maintained

A temporary injunction will not be granted to a plaintiff restraining defendants from selling property to a third person during the pendency of a suit for specific performance of contract for sale where permission necessary to sell the property was obtained owing to certain facts not being brought to the notice of the Court granting it.

(1920) 1926 Lah 553 (550). The rule that before the issue of a temporary injunction the Court must satisfy itself that the plaintiff has a prima facie case does not mean that the Court should examine the merits of the case closely and come to a conclusion that the plaintiff has a case in which he is likely to succeed, but only has to see that on the face of it the person applying for injunction has a case which needs consideration and which is not bound to fail by virtue of some apparent defects.

Even where all the above conditions are satisfied a temporary injunction may nevertheless be refused for other reasons Thus it can be refused on the ground of delay¹³ For other circumstances justifying such refusal see the under mentioned cases¹⁴

Where the suit itself is one for a perpetual injunction a temporary injunction ought not to be refused where such refusal would defeat the object of the suit¹⁵ In such a case the mere possibility of a perpetual injunction being refused ultimately will be no ground for refusing a temporary injunction¹ Where however there is no chance at all of a perpetual injunction being granted in the suit a temporary injunction during the pendency of the suit may be refused¹⁷

1. The power to grant temporary injunctions under O. 39 extends to an appellate Court in regard to appeals pending before it¹⁸ The provisions of O. 39 apply also to proceedings in liquidation¹⁹

Has a Court inherent jurisdiction to grant a temporary injunction? It has been held that the inherent jurisdiction of the High Courts, as Courts of Equity, to grant such injunctions independently of the Civil Procedure Code, is beyond all doubt²⁰ (See also Notes under Note No 22, infra) As regards other Courts there is a conflict of opinion for which, see Note 2 to S. 94, ante and the under-mentioned cases²¹

4 Applicability of the Rule to probate proceedings

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that the Rule does not apply to probate proceedings on the ground that the provisions of the Probate and Administration Act 1881, indicate the intention of the Legislature that that Act itself should be looked to, for the powers necessary for the proper custody of property pending the proceedings instead of leaving the Court to act under the Civil Procedure Code¹ The High Court of Calcutta has held that, assuming that the provisions of O. 39 apply to such cases, there could be no "property in dispute" in such a proceeding and that, therefore, no injunction can be issued under this Rule, though, in proper cases, the Court could act under R. 7, *infra*²

5 'Any property in dispute in a suit'

The Rule contemplates cases where the property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged, *etc*¹ "Property in dispute in the suit" means only such property as is the subject-matter of the suit² For cases of suits for partition of joint estates see the undermentioned cases³

6 In danger of being wasted damaged or alienated by any party to the suit'

An injunction can be granted under this Rule only if there is a real danger of the subject matter of the suit being wasted, or damaged, etc, by a party to the suit¹ Where there is no allegation of danger of such waste or

There must be proof of actual or reasonably apprehended danger of such waste or damage, before an injunction can be granted.³ The question as to what constitutes sufficient danger of waste or damage will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. In order to show that property is in danger of being alienated, some overt act towards the alienation of the properties such for example as negotiations or offers for sale should be alleged and proved.^{3a} For illustrative cases, see the undermentioned cases.⁴

7 Injunctions in respect of judicial proceedings

An injunction can be granted to restrain a party from proceeding with judicial proceedings (other than execution proceedings) pending in the same or in another Court if such injunction is necessary to prevent multiplicity of proceedings and not otherwise.¹ It can be issued even in respect of proceedings pending in a foreign Court if the party to be so restrained resides within the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the injunction.² In Madras however it has been held that such a power exists only in the High Court under its equity jurisdiction and not in the mofussil Courts.³ Speaking generally, a civil Court in the mofussil, cannot issue an injunction in order for temporary injunction restraining defendant from doing the property in good

1. an injunction restraining proceedings in a criminal Court,⁴ though the High Courts can do so in proper cases⁵ Vide also notes under Note Nos 22, 23 and 24

As regards proceedings in execution of a decree, it is clear that the High Courts have the power under their equity jurisdiction to restrain a party by a temporary injunction from executing his decree in another Court of even co-ordinate jurisdiction⁶ But the mofussil Courts have no such power unless the case comes within the terms of O 39, Rr 1 and 2 or unless they could act under their inherent powers As to whether and where the Court can restrain a party from taking such proceedings under the provisions of O 39, Rr 1 and 2, see Note 3 above and also the undermentioned cases⁷ As to the inherent powers of the Court to grant temporary injunctions, see Note 2 to S 94, ante

Courts cannot be too careful as to the mode in which their machinery is used to delay a decree holder in another suit in obtaining the fruits of his decree⁸ Consequently an injunction in respect of a judicial proceeding should not be issued except in strong cases or unless the facts fall within the express provisions of O 39⁹

A permanent injunction can, of course, be granted under the provisions of the Specific Relief Act restraining a party from proceeding with the execution of a decree in another Court¹⁰

7a Injunction in respect of elections

A candidate for election to a Local Board has a right to pursue his legal remedies but save in exceptional circumstances, it is an abuse for a candidate to make his pursuit of his remedies in the civil Courts a weapon for dislocating the electoral machinery and stopping an election¹

8 Right to worship

No person is entitled to enforce his religious views upon another, or to restrain that other from doing any lawful act or from making any lawful use of his property, simply because it would not fit in with the religious tenets of that person so long as the right to worship is not interfered with, the owner of a property can do what he likes with it¹ Where, however, such act or user amounts to an actionable wrong, it can be restrained by an injunction²

10 'Wrongfully sold in execution of a decree'

The provisions of this Rule will not apply unless the property is in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree A obtains a decree against B and in execution thereof proceeds to sell properties belonging to B B thereupon files a suit for a declaration that the decree is not binding on him for various reasons He also prays for a temporary injunction under this Rule Does such an application lie? No The reason is that until the decree is set aside it is binding on the parties thereto, and A has every right to execute it There is thus no danger of property being wrongfully sold in execution of the decree¹ But suppose A, in execution of a decree obtained by him against B, attaches or otherwise proceeds against properties which belong to C, and the latter, thereupon, files a suit for declaration of his rights thereto and prays for a temporary injunction restraining A from executing his decree This is a case of properties being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree and the application for injunction is maintainable under this Rule² The words "or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree" were deleted from sub rule (1) by the Allahabad High Court by rules framed under S 122 of the Code with the result that an application under this Rule was held not maintainable in Allahabad on the ground that any property is in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree³ The said words have, however, now been restored See also the Local Amendments for Rangoon, Nagpur and Oudh

Where a case comes under this Rule an application for injunction is the proper remedy and not an application to the executing Court for stay of execution.⁴

Where the sale has already taken place no injunction will be granted restraining such sale.⁵ But an injunction can be granted even in such a case restraining the delivery of possession.⁶

In granting injunctions restraining sales in execution Courts should exercise their discretion cautiously and wisely, and see that the machinery of the Court is not abused for fraudulent purposes.⁷

A Court is not debarred from restraining a party in cases covered by Rr 1 and 2 from executing his decree in another Court merely by reason of the fact that such Court is of a superior grade to that of the Court which issues the injunction inasmuch as the latter Court has jurisdiction over the suit and to pass orders on all interlocutory applications.⁸

11 Execution of decree of Revenue Court

The High Court of Allahabad has held that the word decree does not include the decree of a Revenue Court, and that an injunction cannot be granted restraining the sale in execution of such a decree.¹ Where, however, the decree of a Revenue Court is being executed by a civil Court, the High Court of Calcutta has held that an injunction restraining its execution can be granted under this Rule on the ground that the decree in such a case should be treated as a decree of a civil Court for purposes of execution.²

12 Disposal of property in fraud of creditors

An injunction can be granted to restrain a threatened disposal of property in fraud of creditors whether the property is moveable or immovable.¹ But in either case the threat or intention to remove or dispose of property to defraud creditors must be proved by definite evidence.²

13 Against whom injunction can be granted

An injunction can be issued only against a party to the suit and not against either a *Court*¹ or a stranger to the suit.²

(1896) 2 Cal W N 521 (523) But in a proceeding under the Guardians and Wards Act an injunction can be issued to a person who is not a party

An injunction can be granted against persons within the Court's jurisdiction restraining them from doing acts outside jurisdiction though it will not be granted unless the remedy is likely to be an effective one ^{2a}

An injunction will not also be ordinarily granted against a person residing outside the jurisdiction of the Court granting it, and against whom the order cannot be enforced within that Court's jurisdiction ⁴ Where, however, the order can be so enforced, ⁴ or, where the person has submitted to the jurisdiction of the Court, ⁵ it can be issued against him. No injunction will ordinarily be issued against Government Officers lona fide exercising rights or alleged rights in the course of their duty, ⁶ nor against public bodies under similar circumstances, ⁷ unless it would amount to a manifest injury to refuse to do so ⁸

An injunction does not run with the land and cannot, therefore, avail against property in the hands of a purchaser ⁹ But when it has been issued against a defendant it can, if the defendant dies, be enforced against his legal representatives ¹⁰

An injunction can be granted against a co-owner or a co sharer in possession restraining him from using the property in a manner which will change the nature of the property ¹¹ Great caution should, however, be exercised in such cases ¹²

14 Injunctions will be granted only in any suit

Before an injunction can be granted under this Rule —

(i) A suit must, in the first place, be pending Thus no injunction can be granted if the suit has not yet been filed or if the suit has been disposed of ¹

(ii) It must be pending on the file of the Court granting the injunction ²

15 Injunction in suit for declaration only

It would appear that a temporary injunction can be granted even in a suit for mere declaration, ¹ but not where the plaintiff, if successful in the suit, will have to bring another suit for enforcing the right which he seeks to keep undisturbed by the injunction ² It is also not proper, in a suit for mere declaration, to grant an injunction staying another suit pending in another Court ³ It was held in the 17 Effect of temporary injunction

An alienation made contrary to an order of injunction is not, on that account void¹ But the party guilty of the breach will be liable for contempt of Court or damages² (Vide also notes under Note No 18, "Breach of injunction", infra)

18 Breach of injunction

An injunction although subsequently discharged must be obeyed while it lasts¹ When the injunction is disobeyed, the party guilty of such disobedience can be proceeded against for contempt under the provisions of R 2, Cl 3² The Court which granted the injunction will be the Court competent to punish disobedience³ but it must be set in motion by the aggrieved party and cannot act suo

Apart from the provisions of the Code the High Courts have, under authority conferred by Charters of the Supreme Court and continued by their own Letters Patent, power of enforcing obedience of their orders by committing the delinquent for contempt ⁵

19 Injunction to restrain marriage

An injunction may be granted to prevent the marriage of a bride for a second time to another husband ¹. But if the bride is a Mahomedan of age and has ceased to be the wife of her former husband no injunction to restrain the second marriage will be granted either against herself or against her relations ²

An injunction will not be granted to restrain a Hindu woman from marrying her minor daughter to a third party pending a suit for specific performance of a contract to marry ³. But where the father of the bride files a suit for injunction against his wife restraining her from giving away the bride in marriage, a temporary injunction may be granted inasmuch as the father has the predominant right to give his girl in marriage ⁴

An appeal lies from an order granting as well as from an order refusing a temporary injunction under this Rule ¹. An appeal will also lie if the order purports to be made under this Rule even though the Court had no jurisdiction to pass it ^{1a}

It is for the appellant to show in appeals against orders under this Rule that the lower Court acted wrongly in the exercise of its discretion ². The mere fact that the appellate Court might have come to a different conclusion is not enough ³. No second appeal lies from an order under this Rule ⁴. As has been seen in the Notes to Ss 96 and 104 those sections only apply to appeals from Courts of inferior jurisdiction to Courts of superior jurisdiction and not to appeals within the High Court, i e., from one or more Judges of the High Court to other Judges of the same Court ⁵. No appeal will, therefore, lie under O 43, R 1 from an order of a single Judge of a High Court, refusing to grant a temporary injunction. Nor will an appeal lie under Cl 15 of the Letters Patent against such an order inasmuch as such an order is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of Cl 15 ⁶. 1.

An order directing the furnishing of security or the submission of accounts passed or directing notice to the opposite party on an application for temporary injunction is not an order under O 39, R 1 and is not, therefore, appealable⁷

An order passed without jurisdiction is liable to revision. But no revision will lie on the mere ground of an error of judgment of the lower Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction¹

Where a Court on appeal renews a temporary injunction dissolved by the first Court a revision may lie against it²

22 Power of High Court—General

Apart from the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Courts have jurisdiction to grant temporary injunctions in suitable cases¹. The order of injunction will however be directed to a party and not to a Court. But in the undermentioned case³ it has been held that when the High Court deals, as appellate or revisional authority with a case coming from a mofussil Court, it can only apply the law as would be applied by that mofussil Court and that consequently it can only grant an injunction in such a case in accordance with the provisions of O 39

23 Power to restrain party from proceeding with suit in another Court

Apart from the provisions of the Code, the High Courts have, by virtue of their equity jurisdiction, power to restrain a party before them from proceeding with a suit in another Court¹. Such power extends to restraining a party from proceeding with a suit in a foreign Court but the power in such cases should be exercised with the greatest caution. An order to the said effect cannot, however, prevent the party from proceeding with the suit in the foreign Court but if he

Injunction to restrain repetition or continuance of breach

from committing a breach of contract or other injury of any kind, whether compensation is claimed in the suit or not, the plaintiff may, at any time after the commencement of suit, and either before or after judgment, apply to the Court for a temporary injunction to restrain the defendant from committing the breach of contract or injury complained of, or any breach of contract or injury of a like kind arising out of the same contract or relating to the same property or right

(2) The Court may by order grant such injunction, on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit

(3) In case of disobedience, or of breach of any such terms the Court granting an injunction may order the property of the person guilty of such disobedience or breach to be attached, and may also order such person to be detained in the civil prison for a term not exceeding six months, unless in the meantime the Court directs his release

(4) No attachment under this Rule shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time, if the disobedience or breach continues, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance, if any, to the party entitled thereto

The words of any kind after the words or other injury are new See Note 1 below

2 Scope and principle of the Rule

This Rule deals with the grant of injunctions in a particular class of cases not covered by the provisions of R 1, viz, cases of apprehended breach of contract or other injury of any kind. Where therefore, there is no such apprehended breach of contract or other injury of any kind, this Rule will not apply.¹

As has been seen in Note 2 to R 1 above, the general principles governing the grant of temporary injunctions is the same as those governing the grant of perpetual injunction^{1aa}. Now S 56 Cl (f), of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, provides that an injunction cannot be granted 'to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced, and under S 21 Cl (a) of that Act, a contract will not be specifically enforced when the non performance of it can be adequately compensated for, by the award of damages^{1a}. This therefore furnishes an important test to see whether temporary injunction should be granted in cases of breaches of contract. Further the general principles governing the grant of an injunction under R 1, also govern the grant of an injunction under this Rule. Thus —

- (i) Before the granting of an injunction under this Rule the Court should be satisfied that the plaintiff has a prima facie case² that the Court's interference is necessary to protect him from irreparable or at least serious injury³ that the balance of convenience is in favour of the applicant^{3a} and that there is no other sufficient

(ii) Where a perpetual injunction has not been asked for in the suit,⁶ or where the facts show prima facie, that there is no chance of a perpetual injunction or specific performance being granted,⁷ a temporary injunction will be refused

(iii) Delay in bringing the suit or applying for the injunction will be a ground for refusing the same⁸

An injunction under this Rule also, can be issued only against the defendant in the suit and none else⁹ It is not necessary that the defendant should be living within the Court's jurisdiction¹⁰

Generally speaking, Courts will not issue an injunction restraining a candidate from partaking in an election¹¹ Further a Court holding an enquiry into the validity of an election under the District Municipalities Act, has no jurisdiction to grant an injunction restraining the candidate from taking his seat¹² The rule extends to proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act¹³

This Rule applies to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act VI of 1908 See S 265 (3) thereof

3 Injunction to restrain breach of contract

Pending a suit relating to a contract, the Court can, under this Rule, grant an injunction restraining the commission of any act which will involve a breach of the contract¹ Before such injunction is granted, however, the applicant must satisfy the Court that there is a completed contract under which he has acquired a right² and that irreparable injury will be sustained by him unless the injunction is granted³ Further, as has already been noticed under the previous Note, no injunction will be granted in respect of a contract of which specific performance will be refused Thus,

(i) no injunction will be granted to restrain marriage⁴ or adoption⁵ in breach of an agreement to marry or adopt respectively

- (ii) no injunction will be granted to restrain breach of a contract in restraint of trade or profession. But a contract to supply goods exclusively to the promisee⁶ and a contract to serve the promisee exclusively for a period⁷ are not contracts in restraint of trade or profession and an injunction can, therefore, be granted to restrain breaches of such contracts,
- (iii) no injunction will be granted which will have the effect of compelling the employment of any person, in matters requiring services of a personal nature,⁸
- (iv) no injunction will be given where the circumstances under which the contract was made are such, as to give the plaintiff an unfair advantage over the defendant⁹
- (v) no injunction will be given where money compensation will afford an adequate relief for the non performance of the contract¹⁰

Where the defendant alleges a breach of contract and refers the matter to arbitration under a provision contained in the contract, and the plaintiff thereupon files a suit attacking the contract and asks for an injunction restraining the arbitration proceedings pending disposal of the suit, the injunction asked for will not be granted if the suit is based on a denial of the existence of the contract, but will be granted if the suit is based on an attack of the contract on equitable grounds like fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the other party¹¹

4 Or other injury of any kind

Under the old Code, the words 'of any kind' were absent. It was held by the High Court of Allahabad that the word 'injury' referred only to injuries akin to breaches of contract and that, therefore, no injunction could be granted in respect of other kinds of injury such as trespass or nuisance¹. The addition of the words 'of any kind' after the words 'or other injury' in the present section, makes it clear that an injunction can be granted to restrain any kind of legal injury. The word 'injury' connotes an act or omission contrary to law, resulting in an infringement of a right vested in a person¹². Thus an infringement of a copyright or of a

But the lawful exercise of a right vested in a person cannot furnish a ground for granting an injunction restraining such persons from exercising it.⁷

It is not necessary that the injury should have been actually suffered though it is essential that the Court should be satisfied that there is a real or reasonable apprehension of such injury.⁸ An injunction will be refused if the

5 Grant of injunction on terms

Sub rule (2) empowers the Court in granting injunctions to impose such conditions as it deems necessary. Thus it may call for an undertaking from the plaintiff that he will abide by any order which the Court may make as to damage.¹ Or where the plaintiffs are a foreign firm and do not carry on business in British India it is reasonable that they should be put on terms.²

6 Disobedience of injunction Effect—See also Note 18 to Rule 1

A disobedience of an order of injunction is a contempt of Court. Sub rule (3) confers on Courts the power to punish such contempt and further prescribes the punishment to be awarded therefor.¹ While the High Courts as Courts of record have inherent jurisdiction to commit for contempt, the other Courts have no such power apart from the provisions of this Rule.²

The provisions of the sub rule apply not only to disobedience of an order issued under Cls (1) and (2) of R 2 but have a more general application and apply equally to disobedience of all injunctions issued under S 94 of the Code.³

As regards the power conferred by this sub rule for punishing disobedience of injunctions the following points must be noted—

- (1) The Court which ordered the injunction is the Court which can punish its disobedience. Thus where an order of injunction was passed by a particular Court and the suit was thereupon transferred to another Court it was held that the latter Court had no power to punish disobedience of the injunction passed by the former Court.⁴ It has also been held that an interlocutory application to punish for contempt under this sub rule cannot be transferred to another Court and thus give that Court jurisdiction to deal with it.⁵ But a Court to which the business of the Court granting the injunction has been transferred under S 150 of the Code can exercise the power of punishment under this sub rule.⁶ The appellate Court has the same power to order punishment as the original Court.^{6a}

- (2) In taking action under this sub rule the Court cannot act suo motu but only on the application of the aggrieved party.⁷

to an appeal disobeys an injunction order restraining him from aliena

As regards the penalty for disobedience of an injunction it has been held that the sub rule should be strictly construed and that it cannot be read as providing any penalty other than that specifically mentioned in it.⁸ Thus the disobedience will not render any transaction void,⁹ nor can a separate suit be filed for damages for non compliance with an order of injunction.¹⁰ The six months period of detention prescribed in the sub rule cannot even indirectly be added to.¹¹ But the two modes of punishment prescribed are only alternative and it is not necessary that attachment should be effected before imprisonment is ordered.¹² Where an injunction was issued against a person restraining him from bringing about the marriage of a girl, but the marriage took place, the person enjoined not being responsible for it and he was sought to be punished for contempt on the ground that he did not do all in his power to prevent the marriage, it was held, refusing the application that the injunction order contained no direction that he should do all in his power to prevent the marriage.¹³ In another case, where a company had been restrained from holding a meeting but the share holders had not been restrained from voting and, at a meeting held in a private house, some of the shareholders attended and voted, it was held that they were not liable to punishment for disobedience.¹⁴

Although there might be a breach of an injunction in the literal sense yet, if the party acted in good faith and without any intention to violate the order, he will not be liable for punishment.¹⁵

Where an injunction has been disobeyed the fact that the injunction has been subsequently dissolved will not exempt the party from punishment.¹⁶ Although an injunction takes effect from the date of the service of the order, yet, if the order had been passed in the presence of the counsel for both sides, it is no excuse to say that the order was not communicated to the party personally.¹⁷

A person against whom no injunction has been ordered cannot be punished under this sub rule on the ground that he abetted the disobedience of the order.¹⁸

An undertaking not to alienate, duly recorded in the order of the Court, amounts to an injunction and a breach thereof is liable to be punished under this Rule.¹⁹

7 Power to grant temporary injunction in mandatory form

Courts in England have power to grant temporary mandatory injunction.¹ In a Bombay case, Beaman, J., held that the power to issue such an injunction was not within the scope of O 39 and doubted whether a mohussil Court in India had power to issue such an injunction.² The power was, however conceded in has been affirmed beyond all doubt in a

1 Scope of the Rule

Courts have jurisdiction to grant an injunction ex parte. But it should not be so granted without strong and grave reasons¹. In other words except where the delay involved in the issue of notice will defeat the object of the injunction notice should be ordered to the party before injunction is ordered against him². An injunction granted in violation of this principle is irregular³.

In an appeal from an order granting an ad interim injunction the appellate Court under this Rule can pass an order ex parte staying the operation of the injunction order⁴.

2 Appeal

No appeal lies from an order directing notice before granting injunction¹.

1 Scope of the Rule

This Rule is intended to cover two classes of cases —

(1) Where an urgent order ex parte has been made under R 3, and

(2) Where an injunction order already in force, has owing to fresh circumstances become unduly harsh or unnecessary or unworkable¹

This is not intended to set at naught the ordinary Rule that where an injunction has been ordered after granting each side an opportunity of being heard, it is not to be interfered with except on the presentation of new matter not available when the original order was passed²

Where an injunction is dissolved under this Rule, the plaintiff may apply again for an injunction if he can make out a sufficient case³

2 Appeal

An order under this Rule is appealable under O 43, R 1 (i).¹

R. 5. [S. 495.] An injunction directed to a corporation is binding not only on the corporation itself, but also on all members and officers of the corporation whose personal action it seeks to restrain.

INTERLOCUTORY ORDERS

R. 6. [S 498] The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, order the sale, by any person named in such order, and in such manner and on such terms as it thinks fit, of any moveable property, being the subject matter of such suit, or attached before judgment in such suit, which is subject to speedy and natural decay, or which for any other just and sufficient cause it may be desirable to have sold at once

1 Legislative changes

1 The words or attached before judgment in such suit are new

2 The words or which for any other just and sufficient cause it may be desirable to have sold at once are also new and have been added in order to empower the Court to order sale of securities when the state of the market requires such a course

2 Scope of the Rule

This Rule will apply only if the property is either the subject matter of the suit or has been attached before judgment in the suit¹. An order under this Rule can be passed only on an application made therefor and after notice to all the parties concerned². The Rule does not empower the Court to appoint a commissioner to sell any crop on the property attached³.

Detention, preservation, inspection, etc. of subject matter of suit

R. 7. [S 499] (1) The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit, and on such terms as it thinks fit,—

(a) make an order for the detention, preservation or inspection of any property which is the subject matter of such suit, or as to which any question may arise therein,

(b) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid authorize any person to enter upon or into any land or building in the possession of any other party to such suit; and

(c) for all or any of the purposes aforesaid authorize any samples to be taken, or any observation to be made or experiment to be tried, which may seem necessary or expedient for the purpose of obtaining full information or evidence

(2) The provisions as to execution of process shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to persons authorized to enter under this Rule

The words "as to who has any jurisdiction arise therein" in Sub rule (1) (a) are new

2 Scope of the Rule

The first part of the Rule applies to cases where the articles are in the possession or custody of the party against whom the order is made¹ As to the power of Courts to pass an order under this Rule in Probate Proceedings, see the amendments in cases²

3 Inspection of subject matter of suit

Where in respect of the property of one person a right accrues in favour of another and that right cannot be measured without inspection of the property, such inspection can be ordered under this Rule¹ Thus in a suit for damages alleged to have been caused to the plaintiff by the defendant's construction in his premises the extent of the alleged injury has to be ascertained and the Court has jurisdiction under this Rule to order an inspection for the purpose² Similarly where the question to be decided is whether certain structures are old or new, the proper procedure is to issue a commission under this Rule and not under O 26 Rr 4 or 9 ante^{3a} In ordering such inspection, the Court should take care to impose as little inconvenience as possible on those against whom the order is made³

4 Inventory

The power to order inspection implies a power to order the preparation of an inventory if such inventory is essential for a proper decision of the case¹ If such an inventory is not so essential, it should not be ordered²

5 Application for such order to be after notice

An application for an order under this Rule can only be made after reasonable notice to the parties concerned¹

1 Legislative changes

Section 503 dealing with receiver's remuneration and receiver's duties have been modified by Rules 2 and 3 of this Order. Apart from this the present Rule contains the following changes—

- (1) S. 503 provided for the appointment of a receiver whenever it appeared "to be necessary for the realisation, preservation or better custody or management of any property." Under the present Rule the Court may appoint a receiver where it appears to be just and convenient to do so.
 - (2) S. 503 applied only to property which was the subject of the suit or attachment.¹ This restriction has been removed now.
 - (3) The words, "whether before or after the decree" in the present Rule are new. Thus the present Rule is much wider in its scope than S. 503.
- As to S. 243 of the Code of 1859 see the undermentioned cases.²

2 Scope and object of the Rule

This Rule authorises a Court to appoint a receiver whenever it appears to it to be just and convenient to do so. The matter is thus left to the discretion of the Court.¹ Such discretion must, however, be exercised, not arbitrarily but judicially and according to legal principles. (See Note 14, infra.) The object and purpose of the appointment of a receiver may generally be stated to be the preservation of the subject matter of the litigation pending a judicial determination of the rights of the parties thereto.^{1a} The Court does not, at the time of appointment of a receiver, arrive at any final decision on the merits of the case, its aim being merely to preserve the status quo ante during the litigation.² Where a receiver is appointed under this Rule in respect of any property, such property is in custodia legis for the benefit of the several parties according to their titles (see Notes 27 and 28, infra). When the Court appoints a person as the manager of the suit property, it really appoints a receiver, the term 'manager' being only another name for a

3 Receiver if can be appointed in proceedings other than suits

The omission in R 1 of the words subject matter of suit which occurred in S 503 of the old Code makes it clear that a receiver can be appointed in proceedings other than suits¹ Thus, a receiver may now be appointed in proceedings for the appointment of a guardian under the Guardians and Wards Act,² or in a suit for rent and ejectment under Bengal Act VIII of 1869³ or under S 32 of the Bengal Settled Estates Act III of 1904 for the purpose of recovering the amount of any decree against a tenant for life of a settled Estate But a Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver in proceedings under the Succession Certificate Act⁴ or in proceedings for the removal of a trustee under S 74 of the Trusts Act⁵ or to manage any occupancy holding under the Central Provinces Tenancy Act⁶

4 Receiver if and when may be appointed in mortgage suits

The High Courts of Allahabad and Patna have held that O 40 has no application to mortgage suits inasmuch as O 34 provides in itself a complete machinery for such suits¹ But the general trend of opinion of the other High Courts is that O 40 is not inapplicable to mortgage suits and that a receiver can be appointed even if the mortgage is a simple one² The test to be applied in this class of suits is, as in the case of other suits, to consider whether it will be just and convenient to appoint a receiver^{2a} A receiver cannot be appointed merely because it is convenient to the mortgagees to do so³ or because a private sale by the receiver will fetch a higher price than the Court sale,⁴ or because the mortgagors reversioners support the appointment of a receiver⁵ The High Court of implies, that receiver could be appointed

Dis-

Madras has held that a receiver can be appointed even when the right to a personal decree is not subsisting.⁶ But it has been held that a receiver cannot be appointed if the other properties of the mortgagor where there is no likelihood of a personal decree being paid against the mortgagor in case the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property is found insufficient to satisfy the mortgage.⁷ It has been held in the unmentioned cases⁸ that where a receiver is appointed at the instance of a mortgagee the rents and profits of the property realized by the receiver may be treated as additional security for the amount found due to the mortgagee under the mortgage and that therefore the mortgagee is entitled to be paid out of the rents and profits so received in priority to other personal creditors of the mortgagor.

Where the mortgage is vol ab initio and the mortgagee obtains a simple personal decree in respect of the mortgage amount it has been held by the High Court of Bombay that he cannot apply for the appointment of a receiver of the properties of the mortgagor.⁹ It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the Court has no power to appoint a receiver pending a suit for the specific performance of a contract to execute mortgage.¹⁰

In the circumstances of the following cases, it has been held that a receiver may properly be appointed—

- (1) Where the interest due on the mortgage is in arrears or the sale proceeds of the property are likely to be insufficient to satisfy the mortgage.¹¹
- (2) Where the mortgage is by the karta of a joint Hindu family and it is found that such a mortgage is binding on the family.¹²
- (3) Where the suit is to enforce a floating charge on the good will and the stock in trade of a business under a mortgage containing a proviso could not permit the stock in trade to fall below

- (5) Where the mortgagee is entitled to enter into possession on default of payment of the mortgage moneys¹⁵
- (6) Where the mortgagor transfers his properties with the mortgagee's consent, to trustees who undertake to liquidate his debts by periodical payments but the arrangement fails¹⁶

A receiver can be appointed in a mortgage suit for sale even though a receiver has already been appointed in a prior partition suit comprising such property¹⁷. Such appointment can be made even after the final decree in the mortgage suit is passed and at any time before the mortgage is fully satisfied¹⁸. A receiver may thus be appointed after the sale under the mortgage decree and pending in application to set aside such sale¹⁹.

Where a receiver is appointed in a mortgage suit the mortgagee if in possession must give up such possession to the receiver even though he has been in possession under an arrangement that he should apply the income of the property to the discharge of the debt²⁰.

S 69 A of the Transfer of Property Act which was introduced newly by Act XX of 1929 now makes provision for the appointment of a receiver of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee himself in cases where he is entitled to sell the property without recourse to a suit for sale. Hence the undermentioned decision²¹ passed prior to Act XX of 1929 wherein this right was not recognized is no longer good law.

5 Receiver of future earnings of judgment debtor if can be appointed

Apart from any charge given by the debtor the Court has no power to appoint a receiver in aid of a judgment of the future earnings of the judgment debtor inasmuch as such earnings are not property in respect of which the judgment creditor could proceed in equity or at law¹. A receiver cannot therefore be appointed to receive the maintenance allowance² or the pension payable to the judgment debtor³. But where the latter has been given certain lands for his maintenance a receiver can be appointed to collect the rents and profits of the lands and pay out of the same, a sufficient sum for the maintenance of the judgment debtor and his family applying the balance if any, to the liquidation of the judgment creditor's debt⁴. See also the undermentioned cases⁵.

The Court can appoint a receiver in a suit under S 92 of the Code¹ But a receiver is not in a suit under the Religious Endowments Act except under S 14 of that Act² See also the undermentioned cases³

8 Partnership suits

Where a dissolution of the partnership is inevitable and the partners are embroiled, the usual way of guarding their interests is by appointing a receiver to carry out the good will of the business and the stock in trade to be sold by the partners being at liberty to bid at the sale¹ But no receiver can be appointed to manage a partnership business where all the partners are not parties to the suit² It is not necessary that on the death of a co partner the Court must in every case appoint a receiver The Court should look at the whole of the circumstances of each case³

9 Maintenance suits

Where a decree for maintenance a charge is created on the defendant's property for the payment of maintenance it is desirable in order to facilitate execution and to avoid further litigation that the decree itself should appoint a receiver with directions to take possession of the property, in case of default of payment, and to sell the same and to pay out of the proceeds of the sale the amount due to the plaintiff¹

10 Receiver if can be appointed where one has been appointed by a Magistrate under S 146 of the Criminal P C

Before the amendment of the Code of Criminal Procedure in 1923 it was held that a civil Court cannot appoint a receiver in respect of properties for which a criminal Court has already appointed a receiver under S 116 of the Criminal Procedure Code¹ These rulings referred to above are not good law after the amendment of S 146 of the Code of Criminal Procedure The mere fact that there exists with reference to any property an order under S 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code is no bar to a civil Court appointing a receiver in respect of such property² Nor can a Magistrate acting under S 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code interfere with the possession of a receiver appointed by a civil Court without the permission of that Court³

1. 11 Who may be appointed receiver

A party to the litigation should not be appointed a receiver except under very special circumstances or with the consent of the other parties,¹ because, as a general rule, absolute disinterestedness is an indispensable qualification for a receiver.² Subject to the above general rule however in the case of partnership and partition suits, a party is more readily appointed a receiver than in other cases.³ There is nothing to prevent a Hindu from being appointed receiver of the properties of a Muhammadian wakf where his duties do not include the performance of religious ceremonies.⁴ Similarly the appointment of the guardian of a minor as receiver of his properties is not illegal.⁵ But the attorney of a party to the litigation cannot be appointed receiver, as such appointment will interfere with the arrangement made by such party for the conduct of his case.⁶

The fact that the receiver lives far away from the properties is a disqualification, which though not absolute, should be taken into consideration in making the appointment.⁷

12 What Court may appoint or remove a receiver

Under S 505 of the Code of 1882 a receiver could be appointed only by the High Courts and the District Courts and not by Courts subordinate to the District Court.¹ Under the present Code, a receiver can be appointed by all Courts. The appointment can be made only by the Court before which the suit wherein the receiver is sought to be appointed is pending, or where the decree has been appealed against, by the appellate Court.² Hence a District Court cannot appoint a receiver in a suit pending in a Court subordinate to it.³ Now that the words "property, the subject of a suit or attachment" which occurred in S 503 of the old Code have been omitted in the present Rule, a Court can appoint a receiver even of property situated beyond its local jurisdiction⁴ and even before deciding the question of jurisdiction, where such a question is raised.⁵ (A Court of Small Causes cannot appoint a receiver of immoveable property. See Ss 7 and 94 of the Code⁶) A civil Court in the Punjab can appoint a receiver to

Where a receiver of a certain property has already been appointed by a Court it is sufficient that another Court should appoint another receiver for the same property.⁸ It is only the Court that appointed the receiver that can remove him⁹ or give him any directions in the matter.¹⁰

13 When a receiver may be appointed See also Note 6 to S. 51

As has been seen in Note 2 ante, the appointment of a receiver is in the judicial discretion of the Court. Where the property is in medio litæ in the possession of one party a receiver can readily be appointed. But where any one is in possession under a legal claim strong reasons are necessary for interfering with his possession. See Notes 14 and 18 infra where the general principles are discussed. See also sub rule (2).

A plaintiff applying for the appointment of a receiver must show prima facie that he has a strong case and good title to the property¹ or a special equity in his favour² that the property in the hands of the defendant is in danger of being wasted.³ The distinction between the appointment of a receiver and temporary injunction is this. While in either case it must be shown that the property should be preserved from waste or alienation it is enough to show in an application for injunction that the plaintiff has a fair question to raise as to the existence of the right alleged but this is not enough for the appointment of a receiver—a good prima facie title has to be made out.⁴ The mere fact that the plaintiff in his plea made violent and wholesale charges of malversation against the defendant in possession is no ground for the appointment of a receiver.⁵ Nor is a mere future apprehension of misappropriation or mismanagement sufficient ground for the appointment.⁶ Vague charges against the person in possession are not enough; the charges must be specific.⁷ Persons in possession under a legal claim must not be removed on the strength of mere suspicion.⁸ In a suit for possession and mesne profits against a defendant who claims to hold the property as trustee, the mere fact that the defendant is a poor man from whom it would be impossible to realise any mesne profits which might be decreed, is no ground for appointing a receiver.

1884—Heinzel Court of Small Causes had power to appoint a receiver.

where there is no allegation of misappropriation or waste.⁹ But in the undermentioned cases the insolvency of the person in possession of the disputed property was held to be good ground for the appointment of a receiver.¹⁰

A receiver cannot be appointed for the purpose of ascertaining the real income of a property so that the Court may have correct data for fixing the rate of maintenance payable to a widow.¹¹ The allegation against a defendant a trustee that since his acceptance of office, he has not paid allowances to the beneficiaries, without any allegation of waste or mismanagement etc., is no ground for appointing a receiver in his place.¹² Nor should a receiver be appointed merely because the relations between the parties are strained¹³ or because the manager of the estate of the defendant produces his accounts and documents late.¹⁴ But where the defendant removes under suspicious circumstances a large extent of property during the pendency of a suit in which the title to the property is to be determined¹⁵ or where a Hindu widow in possession of her husband's estate is found to be wasting the property¹⁶ or where a life tenant intends to transfer the estate to a stranger thus constituting a danger to the reversionary interests,¹⁷ a receiver may be properly appointed. In a suit for possession where it is clearly proved that the estate is grossly mismanaged and wasted a receiver should be appointed.¹⁸ It is not necessarily improper that a receiver should be appointed to deal with the rents and profits of land assigned to a Hindu widow for her maintenance, even if she has no other source of income.¹⁹ The mere fact that the party in possession is a Mahomedan widow claiming a lien for her dower debt is no bar to the appointment of a receiver if there are good grounds for such appointment.²⁰ See also the undermentioned cases.²¹

A receiver may be appointed in a suit for a declaration²² or in a mere suit for money.²³ But in such cases the creditor must establish a special equity in his favour.²⁴ The High Court of Calcutta has however held that a simple creditor

A receiver cannot be appointed merely because it is expedient or convenient to the mortgagee to do so⁹ or because it will do no harm to do so¹⁰. The bona fide possessor of the property in dispute should not be disturbed by the appointment of a receiver unless there is some substantial ground for such interference,¹¹ such as a well founded fear that the property in question will be dissipated or that other irreparable mischief may be done unless the Court gives its protection¹². As has been said already in Note 13 ante the Court will refuse to interfere unless the applicant establishes some special equity in his favour¹³.

15 Partition suits

O 40 R 1 sub rule (2) applies only to the dispossession of third parties (See Note 19 infra). Hence it is no bar to the appointment of a receiver in a suit for partition¹. But a receiver will not be appointed in such a suit in the absence of special circumstances necessitating interference by the Court². The mere fact that there is a dispute as to the share to which the plaintiff is entitled³ or that the relations between the parties are strained⁴ is no ground for appointing a receiver. Nor is a mere apprehension of future waste sufficient for that purpose⁵. There should be some specific act of misappropriation, malversation, or mismanagement shown and this principle is practically to be applied in the case of partition of Hindu joint family property in the hands of the eldest brother who is the manager of the property⁶. But this Rule does not apply when one co owner occupies the whole property and excludes the other co owners from their shares of the ten

16 Executor in possession

In England the rule is that the Court will not interfere with the possession of an executor of a will by appointing a receiver except where a case of gross misconduct is established against the executor ¹ In India also very strong reasons are necessary to appoint a receiver in such a case ² (See the undermentioned cases ³ for instances in which a receiver was appointed) But in the case of Muhammadan will the executor is not entitled to the same degree of protection from interference as is given by the English Law and a receiver can more readily be appointed in displacement of such an executor than in the case of the executor of a will made by other persons ⁴ This is because a Muhammadan can dispose of by his will only a third of his property and the reason for the English rule, viz that the executor is a person enjoying in a marked degree the testator's confidence and as such his possession should not be lightly interfered with, does not apply with the same force to the executor of a Muhammadan will

19 Receiver in Execution proceedings

The appointment of a receiver is prescribed by S 51 of the Code as one of the modes of executing a decree. This Rule prescribes the conditions and limitations under which such appointment is to be made. Reading S 51 with this Rule, as it ought to be, it is clear that the Court can appoint a receiver in execution proceedings only when it considers just and convenient to do so.¹ The decree holder's consent is, however, not necessary for such appointment.² Nor can he as of right and as a matter of course apply for execution by the appointment of a receiver.^{3a}

Although in India where there is no distinction between law and equity it is not always necessary that legal execution should be exhausted before equitable execution by the appointment of a receiver is made, such appointment is not to be resorted to when there is no impediment to execution being levied in the ordinary way as provided by the Code, the person seeking equitable execution must show that he was met by difficulties arising from the nature of the property which prevented his obtaining relief by the usual modes of execution and that it is necessary and advantageous to appoint a receiver.³ The mere fact that the defendants belong to an old family and that, unless the Court steps in and saves them from the consequences of their debts they may be ruined, is not, in itself, a sufficient ground for such appointment.⁴

A receiver should not be appointed where it would unduly delay the realisation of the decree debt.⁵ In execution of a decree against a legal representative of a judgment debtor a receiver cannot be appointed of properties which do not form part of the assets of the deceased.⁶ nor can he be appointed where such appointment has the effect of depriving one of the legal representatives of the entire profits from the portion of the estate in his hands without anything being left even for the maintenance of himself and his family while the other legal representatives who are in enjoyment of substantial portion of the deceased's

Where the decretal debt will be equilly and as surely satisfied by the appointment of a receiver as in any other way and at the same time the judgment debtor will be saved from great prospective loss the Court can appoint a receiver ⁸ Such an appointment can also be made where the interests of both the decree holder and the judgment debtor can be safeguarded and where such appointment appears to be the only way in which the decree holder can hope to realise any appreciable part of his dues ⁹ Thus where a decree has been obtained against trust property and such property cannot be sold in execution of the decree ¹⁰ or where the debts and rents due to the judgment debtor are sought to be attached in execution of the decree and the person owing the same denies his liability to the judgment debtor ¹¹ or where a decree in favour of the judgment debtor is attached in execution of the decree in favour of his decree holder ¹² a receiver can properly be appointed See also the under mentioned case ¹³ where a receiver was appointed to sell a colliery directed to be sold by the decree so as to safeguard the interests of all parties

A receiver can be appointed for the preservation of a property after its sale in execution and before its confirmation ¹⁴

The appointment of a receiver in execution does not operate as a stay of execution so as to disentitle the decree holder from executing his decree in respect of the same debt in any manner provided by the Code The mere fact that the decree holder consented to the appointment does not estop him from subsequently seeking to enforce his decree by execution ¹⁵

20 Receiver after decree

The words whether before or after decree are new and make it clear that a receiver can be appointed even after a decree has been passed in the suit ¹ These words have given effect to the undermentioned case ² under the former Code A receiver can be appointed even after execution sale and before its confirmation ³ or after the grant of leave to appeal to the Privy Council ⁴ But the Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver when there is no litigation pending before it, in which such appointment can be made Thus no receiver can be appointed after a suit has been dismissed ⁵ or compromised ⁶ or after the decree has been satisfied ⁷

1. 21 Receiver of property in the hands of a common manager

Under this Rule a receiver can be appointed for property in the hand of a common manager under S 95 of the Bengal Tenancy Act¹. A receiver can also be appointed pending proceedings for the appointment of a common manager. A Civil Court can appoint a receiver of property in respect of which proceedings for the appointment of a common manager are pending before the District Judge³.

22 Powers of receiver

A receiver has no powers except what have been conferred on him expressly or impliedly by the Court¹. His powers are therefore conditioned by the terms of his appointment subject to any subsequent modification by the Court². In the absence therefore of any provision express or implied as to the powers conferred on him there is no presumption that all the powers mentioned in Cl (d) of the Rule are conferred on him³ and he cannot deal with the property of which he is the receiver in any way without the consent of the Court⁴. Thus he has no power to lease out debutter property without the sanction of the Court⁵. Even if full powers are conferred on the receiver he should take the directions of the Court in all important matters if he wishes to have complete protection for himself⁶.

A receiver who has been given all the powers mentioned in Cl (d) will have impliedly a discretionary power of sale⁷. The authority will also include a power to give notice to quit or to sue for compensation for use and occupation without the special leave of the Court⁸. A general power of management will include a power to exercise the powers of a proprietor under Madras Act II of 1894⁹. A bona fide acknowledgment of a debt by the receiver is an acknowledgment by an authorized person which will extend the period of limitation under S 19 of the Limitation Act¹⁰. But a receiver can have at the most only such powers and rights over the property as the parties to the suit are found to possess when their rights are finally determined¹¹. Any misrepresentation or concealment of material facts from the Court in connexion with a proposed transaction by the receiver would vitiate the authority conferred on the receiver¹². Nor can a clause be added to a lease granted by the receiver subsequent to the grant of the sanction if it was not mentioned in the terms proposed in the application for sanction¹³ When property is sold by a receiver in auction under the directions of the Court, the sale is as much a Court sale as an execution in the usual course, and is therefore not complete till it is confirmed by the Court¹⁴ Nor can it be attacked by the parties *collaterally*¹⁵ In the case of a private sale by the receiver, a right of pre-emption can be exercised to the same extent as if the sale was by the owner himself¹⁶

A Court has no power to confer on the receiver any fresh power such as a liberty to sell *after the suit has been dismissed*¹⁷ It is also irregular for the Court to order payment of the debts of any party from the estate before the ascertainment of the estate In exceptional cases, as where a plaintiff applies for payment to the creditors from out of the estate in the hands of the receiver, payments might be ordered out of the share of the plaintiff, where such share is admitted and it is more than enough to satisfy the debts of the creditors, subject to the plaintiff later on proving that they are liabilities of the estate and as such must come out of the whole estate¹⁸ No Court other than that by which the receiver was appointed can make or give any directions to the receiver as supplementary to those given by the appointing Court¹⁹ A mortgage by the receiver under the Court's order directing that it should be entitled to priority over the pre-existing charges, takes precedence over such mortgages as a salvage lien²⁰ See also Note 42 below

23 All such powers as to bringing or defending of suits as the owner himself has

A right to sue is not necessarily incidental to the general powers of a receiver¹ and does not exist unless it has been conferred on him expressly or by necessary implication² It depends solely on the order of the Court and not on the wishes of the parties³ A Court can expressly authorise the receiver to sue in his own name⁴ But such an authority may also be given impliedly Thus a receiver who is given the same powers of suing and defending suits as the owner himself has, is entitled to sue in his own name though not expressly authorised to do so⁵ Similarly, a receiver appointed to collect outstandings can sue in his name⁶ On the appointment of a receiver with the requisite powers he is the only person competent to bring suits and obtain decrees Hence, after such a receiver has been appointed for an estate the landlord cannot sue for rent⁷

Though ordinarily a suit for possession can only be instituted by a person having a present title to such possession, and though by his appointment no pro-

Court all the requisite powers⁸ In a suit brought by the receiver within his authority, the defendant cannot question the validity of his appointment as receiver⁹ Where however, after the appointment of the receiver, the property is sold in Court auction to a third person, and a sale certificate issued to him, the authority to sue for possession of that property must be taken to be withdrawn from the receiver and he cannot therefore sue for possession of that property The only person who could sue therefor is the auction purchaser¹⁰ A receiver's discretion to spend money in litigation ought not to be interfered with by the appellate Court the Court of first instance will, if necessary take security from him for restitution of such expenses in certain events¹⁰

It was held in the undermentioned case¹¹ that a receiver of a Zemindari was entitled to sue for sums spent by the Zemindar at the defendant's request before the appointment of the receiver as it was found that the claim arising out of such expenditure was one annexed to the estate

24 Realization of property

A receiver appointed to get in and realise the estate of a deceased person and to pay debts has a power of sale also¹ Similarly, a receiver of mortgaged properties in respect of which mortgage decrees have been passed, who has been given powers of realisation, management protection and preservation of the property has a discretionary power of sale² But a receiver empowered to collect outstandings and do all things necessary for the realisation and preservation of the assets of a firm has no power to mortgage the property of the firm³ A receiver of debts due to a judgment debtor can take legal proceedings by way of suit or execution proceedings to collect the outstandings⁴ A receiver however, cannot recover property sold away by the judgment debtor, on the ground of the sale being voidable under S 53 of the Transfer of Property Act⁵ Rent accrued due to the estate prior to the appointment of the receiver is not part of the estate in his hands and therefore a payment to the proprietor on account of such liability is a sufficient discharge of the debt⁶ For further information, see Notes 22 and 23, supra

25 'Collection of the rents and profits thereof'

A receiver appointed to collect the rents of land cannot raise the rent¹ A receiver appointed in respect of property under attachment, has the powers of the owner as they existed at the time the property was brought under the orders of the Court by attachment provided they have not ceased by operation of law Hence, where subsequent to the attachment but before the appointment of the receiver, the landlord had reduced the rate of rent payable by the tenant, the receiver was held entitled to recover rent at the original rate²

Where a receiver is appointed in execution of a decree to collect the rents and profits of the estate of the judgment debtor, but the lessee pays the rent to the mortgagee of the judgment debtor, the receiver is entitled to follow the rent

27 Delegation of duty by receiver

A receiver being an officer of the Court, is responsible to the Court for the due discharge of his duties He is not entitled to delegate to another any of the duties entrusted to him by the Court,¹ or assign to another for valuable consideration any of his rights as receiver^{1a} Not having any proprietary interest in the estate under his control, he cannot assign his rights to another so as to enable the latter to enforce them as such assignee² As to whether and under what circumstances a receiver is entitled to have clerks and agents to assist him, see Notes 35 and 42 below

A receiver is an officer of the Court He is also "a public officer within the meaning of S 2 Cl 17"¹ He is nothing more than the hand of the Court for the purpose of holding the property of the litigants whenever it is necessary that it should be kept in the grasp of the Court, in order to preserve the subject matter of the suit pendente lite^{1a} He is a representative of the Court and not of any of the parties to the suit, though he holds the property for the benefit of those ultimately found to be rightful owners² Thus, a receiver in execution proceedings is not the agent of the judgment creditor and moneys realised by the receiver do not become ipso facto moneys belonging to the judgment creditor³ (See Note 33, infra) A receiver's possession being that of the Court, no one is entitled to interfere with it⁴ A sale of property by the receiver has the same effect as a sale by the Court and the purchaser is entitled to the assistance of the Court in obtaining possession of the property so purchased⁵ A receiver, though an officer of the Court is not a judicial officer Hence, a Court has no power to delegate to a receiver the duty of enquiring into the claims of rival claimants to the property⁶

A receiver should not be allowed to purchase the property of which he is the receiver⁷ and such a sale if made would be voidable and can be avoided by an

29 Possession of the receiver enures for the benefit of the true owner

The possession of the receiver is the possession of the Court,^{1a} and the possession of the Court by the receiver is the possession of all the parties to the action according to their titles. The property passes into legal custody (custodia legis) and such custody is for the benefit of the true owner. The receiver thus holds the property for the benefit of those ultimately found to be the true owners.¹ By the appointment of a receiver the Court takes upon itself the management of the property during the continuance of the litigation. But the proprietary right or interest in the property is not transferred from the rightful owner either to the Court or to the receiver appointed by it.² The receiver's possession being possession on behalf of all the parties to the action according to their titles none of them can claim to be in adverse possession during the continuance of the receiver's possession against the party ultimately found entitled to the property.³ Nor is it open to the receiver during the continuance of the receivership to set up a title in himself adverse to that of the parties. Even if the receiver is discharged he would still hold the property on behalf of the rightful owner.⁴ Thus the title of the real owner is in no way affected either in theory or principle, by the appointment of a receiver. A payment made by a receiver out of the funds of an estate is equivalent to a payment made by the owner of the estate and where he would be entitled to get reimbursement from a third person if he had made the payment himself he would be equally entitled to such reimbursement if the payment is made by the receiver.⁵ If despite the appointment of the receiver the defendant continues in possession he can be sued by the true owner for the profits misappropriated by him.⁶

The appointment of a receiver does not supersede a prior attachment of the property.⁷

When the owner of a property is himself appointed receiver he does not lose his rights as a proprietor of dealing with the property during the receivership except that he cannot impair the value of the property in his hands or cause interference with his possession of the property as receiver.⁸

of the Court, it is as a general rule, exempt from judicial process except to the extent permitted by the Court appointing such receiver. In other words the possession of the Court is not to be interfered with by taking any judicial proceedings against the property in the receiver's hands without the permission of the Court.¹ Hence leave of Court is necessary for execution of a decree by attachment and sale of property in the hands of the receiver.²

Such leave is necessary even where the property is sought to be proceeded against in execution of a mortgage decree, although no attachment is necessary for sale in such a case.³ The High Court of Calcutta is, however, of opinion that as no attachment is necessary in the case of a sale under a mortgage decree the permission of the Court is not necessary for such a sale.⁴ Even where an attachment was levied on property before the appointment of the receiver it is within the discretion of the appointing Court, to refuse to permit a sale of property under such attachment. A purchaser in Court auction at a sale held without the previous permission of the Court, buys at his peril, as the sale may be cancelled.⁵ Permission is necessary even for an application for rateable distribution against the receiver.^{6a}

A sale of property in the hands of a receiver without the leave of the Court, is however, not void but is only voidable, i.e., it is valid until set aside by appropriate proceedings. If the persons interested do not impeach the sale it is not open to others to do so.⁶ It has even been held that the sale cannot be set aside if the person seeking to have it set aside has in no way been prejudiced by the sale.⁷

But where a decree obtained by a receiver is attached without the Court's permission and is then transferred by the receiver to a third person who takes the assignment in good faith and without knowledge of the attachment the attachment being irregular does not affect the title of the assignee.⁸

Though a receiver of a property may have been appointed yet until he actually takes possession of the property a stranger decree holder is not precluded from executing his decree against the property without obtaining the leave of the Court.⁹

As to the effect of subsequent grant of leave, see Note 31 infra

31 Suits by or against receiver—Leave of Court—See also Note 43 infra

A receiver can neither sue nor be sued without the leave of the Court¹ He is merely an officer of the Court and not the representative of the owner of the estate Hence, no cause of action vests in him and he has no locus standi to sue except with the leave of the Court² "There is no statutory provision which requires a party to take the leave of the Court to sue a receiver The rule has come down to us as a part of the rules of equity, binding upon all English Courts of Justice in this country It is a rule based upon public policy which requires that when the Court has assumed possession of a property in the interests of the litigants before it, the authority of that Court is not to be obstructed by suits designed to disturb the possession of the Court The institution of such suits is in the eye of the law a contempt of the authority of the Court and therefore the party contemplating such a suit is required to take the leave of the Court so as to absolve himself from that charge The grant of such leave is made not in the exercise of any power conferred by statute, but in the exercise of the inherent power, which every Court possesses to prevent acts which constitute or are akin to an abuse of its authority"³

A Court will, however, readily grant leave to sue the receiver if it is satisfied that there is a case to be tried so that the claim of the third party may be tried in the presence of the receiver⁴

The omission to obtain the sanction of the Court prior to the institution of the suit can be rectified by leave granted subsequent to the institution of the suit⁵ In the undermentioned cases⁶ however, it was held that the Court's sanction was a condition precedent to institution of the suit and the defect due to the want of such sanction could not be rectified by leave obtained subsequently A suit against a receiver without the leave of the Court is liable to be dismissed.⁷ If a decree is passed in such a suit it can be set aside.⁸ The absence of an objection by the receiver, that no leave was obtained will not entitle the Court to pass a decree against a receiver.⁹ But where the receiver has been discharged¹⁰ or has ceased to exist and has been replaced by the heirs of one of the parties who were on the record¹⁰ the objection that the suit against the receiver was instituted without the leave of the Court will not stand. The leave of the Court is not necessary for a suit against a receiver, under S 95 of the Madras Act VIII of 1865.¹¹

It is the Court appointing the receiver that can grant leave for the institution of a suit by or against the receiver. The Court trying the suit cannot grant it.¹² A Court does not by granting leave to sue the receiver relinquish its possession of the property to the Court in which the suit against the receiver is instituted.¹³ The Court trying such suit cannot issue an injunction against the receiver restraining him from dealing with the property as it would lead to a conflict of jurisdictions.¹⁴ Nor can a Court other than the appointing Court issue a rubkar to the latter Court requesting it to restrain the receiver from taking possession of a part of the property in respect of which the receiver has been appointed.¹⁵ The proper course for a person who has obtained a decree against the receiver is to apply to the Court by which he has been appointed, to direct the receiver to act according to the decree.¹⁶

A receiver is not a necessary party to a suit for declaration of title and possession in respect of the property in the receiver's hands. The decree passed in such a suit can always be carried out against the property in the hands of the receiver with the leave of the Court appointing him, although he has not been made a party to the suit.¹ (See also Note 44, infra)

A receiver appointed by a Civil Court is not a necessary party to proceedings in respect of the property under S 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code.¹⁸ A Criminal Court has no jurisdiction in such proceedings to interfere with the possession of a receiver appointed by a Civil Court, without the permission of such Court.¹⁹

An owner of an estate cannot sue for accounts a Jahaidar appointed by the receiver. There is no fiduciary relation between the receiver and the owner, which is essential for such an action.²⁰ Similarly, a present receiver cannot sue a former receiver of the estate for recovery of money alleged to be due by the latter to the estate for breach of duty committed by him as receiver.²¹ entered into by him in the course of his management of the estate, but he is entitled to indemnity from the estate for such debts.¹ The creditors can also proceed against the estate for the recovery of such debts in priority to other creditors of the estate the principle being that as the acts of the receiver acting within his authority are the acts of the Court, the estate cannot be permitted to enjoy the benefits of those acts without being held liable for the obligation arising therefrom. The ordinary rule that the creditors who have advanced money to a receiver for the management of the estate can proceed against him personally does not apply where the advance has been expressly made on the condition that the estate alone should be liable.³

33 Loss caused by receiver's default

The receiver is not the agent or representative of any party to the suit. If therefore loss arises from the default of the receiver, such loss, subject to the receiver's liability for his default, must be borne by the estate, and not by the party at whose instance he was appointed receiver.¹ But in the undermentioned case a Full Bench of the Oudh Chief Court has held that where a receiver in execution misappropriates the moneys paid by the judgment debtor, the loss should be borne by the decree holder and not the judgment debtor, the reason given being that the payment to the receiver absolves the judgment debtor from all further responsibility.

34 Agreement with receiver—Contempt of Court

It is only the Court that can control the powers of the receiver. As an officer of the Court, he has only such powers as the Court chooses to give him. It is a contempt of Court for anyone else to enter into an agreement with the receiver restricting and controlling his powers.¹ Similarly, a promise by a party to pay remuneration to a receiver is against law and not enforceable.²

A receiver also can apply for process for contempt of Court against any one interfering with his possession.³

35 Remuneration of receiver

Under Rule 2, infra the Court has the power of fixing the receiver's remuneration. Such remuneration is generally by way of percentage or commission but there is no absolute rule that he should be so remunerated. The Court has a discretion if it thinks fit to allow him remuneration at a fixed rate.¹ The receiver is also entitled to all reasonable expenses of management² including the fees of counsel whom he may have to employ.³ (See Note 12, infra, for further information.) An agreement by a party to pay remuneration to the receiver is as has been

The receiver of mortgaged property is entitled to priority over the mortgagee in respect of his remuneration and the expenses properly incurred by him in the course of his management.⁴ But the priority does not extend to the wages that became due to a servant of the estate before the appointment of the receiver.⁵

36 Liability of receiver See R 3 infra

The receiver is liable to duly account for the income and the properties that come into his hands. He is responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default and gross negligence. See Note 32 supra for the receiver's liability for debts incurred by him in the course of the management of the estate. A receiver disregarding the Court's orders is liable to be removed¹ or committed for contempt in case he is appointed by a High Court.² (For further information, see next note)

37 Liability to account

In *Yohani Mohan Patra v Baroda Kanta Sarkar*¹ Their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court expressed themselves as follows —

The receiver is but an officer of the Court appointing him and is therefore bound to account to that Court for all property which he has received. It is his duty to keep his accounts and vouchers in such condition that they will be ready for examination at any time and as a general proposition whenever property or funds come into the hands of a receiver pending litigation the Court may require him to report his acts and doings and to render an account in order to ascertain the condition of the property and to enable the Court to settle the rights of and do justice to all the litigant parties. When the accounts of the receiver come up for adjustment he is a party in interest entitled to be heard and it is the duty of the Court to see that his rights are protected. But so also all other interested parties are entitled to notice and an opportunity to attend and be heard. All persons having an interest in the estate which the receiver represents have the right to be present and be examined on any subject pertinent to the inquiry which springs out of the proceedings itself and to take exception to the receiver's accounts. Courts are disposed to hold receivers to great strictness in rendering their accounts and a thorough investigation of the accounts and vouchers is proper where as here the rights of infants are involved. A receiver is bound to exercise the same degree of diligence in keeping down expenses and in caring for the estate in his possession as a prudent man would observe in connection with his own property under similar circumstances. A receiver therefore will not ordinarily be permitted without the sanction and authority of the Court to incur any expenditure which will seriously diminish the funds entrusted to his charge and it is his duty if he wishes to protect himself to apply to the Court for receipts and which the receiver

the fund in his possession he will be denied reimbursement. Where a receiver has laid out money without a previous order of Court and the transaction is proved by him to have been beneficial to the parties in interest he is entitled to be allowed credit in his accounts for the amount thus expended.

A receiver must produce vouchers for all payments other than petty sums,² but when produced they will be evidence of the payment of the sums therein specified and credit will be given for such sums to the accounting party.

in the account unless it is shown that there are reasonable grounds for impeaching the vouchers³. A receiver can be required to submit his accounts for scrutiny even after the suit has been dismissed⁴ and even after his discharge⁵. He is responsible not only for sums actually received by him but also for all such sums which he might have received but for his default or negligence⁶. A party appointed receiver is liable to account in the same way as a stranger so appointed⁷.

It is not right, when considering the accounts submitted by the receiver, to go into the question of the liability to account for periods other than the period covered by the account itself⁸. Nor does the question of bad management by the receiver arise when he submits his accounts for being passed⁹.

The accounts of the receiver can be examined only by *the Court appointing him*¹⁰. And where it has overruled the objections of a party impugning the accounts and passed them, a suit will not lie against the receiver for damages for negligence, etc., based on allegations which have already been considered and overruled by the Court¹¹.

See also Note 3 to R. 3, infra

38 Liability of receiver and that of an executor or trustee

A trustee or executor is not personally liable for debts incurred by him in the course of the management of the estate, but a receiver is personally liable for such debts¹.

39 Liability to criminal prosecution

A receiver of property cannot be prosecuted for criminal breach of trust in respect of the property without the sanction of the Court appointing him¹. The same rule applies to any other offence committed by the receiver in his capacity of receiver². But where the offence committed by the receiver has nothing to do with the office held by him the Court's sanction is not necessary for his prosecution³.

40 When appointment takes effect

Where the order appointing a person as receiver requires him to give security so that the order is conditional on the security being given, the appointment is not complete till such security is given¹. But the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court has held in the undermentioned case² that the appointment of the receiver is complete on the passing of the order of appointment although he may not be able to take actual possession of the property until security is approved.

Where there is no direction as to security and the order appointing the receiver is unconditional, it takes effect immediately it is made³. But the transfer of the property to the receiver's possession, actual or constructive, and the conferment of special powers on him require specific orders under Cls (b), (c) and (d).

41 Security to be given by receiver

Rule 3, infra, requires a receiver, inter alia, to furnish such security as the Court thinks fit. As to whether the appointment of a receiver is complete before the payment of security, see Note 40

42 Receiver's lien

A receiver has a lien on the estate for all his just claims and allowances¹ "On this principle it follows that a Court will not compel a receiver who has been discharged, to make over the property in his possession until his lien has been satisfied or provided for by a sufficient indemnity"²

43 Remedy of third party aggrieved by receiver's action

A third person feeling aggrieved by the receiver's conduct has ordinarily two remedies —

(1) He may apply to the Court in the very suit in which the receiver has been appointed for a summary order against the receiver,

(2) He may, with the leave of such Court, sue the receiver

The more proper and usual mode is by applying to the Court for summary relief. This is done by the aggrieved person applying to the Court for permission to come in and be examined pro interesse suo (for his own interest). If no question of title is involved and if the applicant has shown diligence, the Court will decide the matter on such an application. But otherwise, it will refer the third person to a separate suit against the receiver¹. Where debatable questions, not easy to be dealt with at the passing of the receiver's accounts, are involved, the Court will decline to go into them in summary proceedings in the suit itself².

44 Receiver if and when a necessary party to a suit

In a suit for money against the representatives of a deceased person, the receiver holding possession of the deceased's estate is not a necessary party¹. Nor is he a necessary party in every suit concerning the property of which he is the receiver². Thus he is not a necessary party to a suit between third parties for declaration of title to, and possession of, the property in his charge³. In such cases, if the plaintiff obtains a decree he can go to the executing Court, obtain the leave of that Court to execute the decree against the property in his hands and then enforce the decree⁴. receiver is intended to be affected by the result of the suit and the possession the receiver or the jurisdiction of the Court is intended to be interfered with leave of the Court must be obtained and the receiver made a party.⁵ Thus the receiver is a proper party to proceedings for the sale of property in the receiver's hands in execution of a decree for sale on a mortgage.⁶

A receiver cannot be added as a party to proceedings under the Criminal Procedure Code.⁷

45 Notice to opposite party if necessary before appointment

Notice to the other side is not indispensable in every case before a receiver is appointed. The very object of appointing a receiver may be defeated in many cases if notice were insisted on.¹ Hence in emergent cases a receiver may be appointed without notice to the opposite side.² But except for very special reasons notice should not be excused before an order is made for such appointment.³

46 Appointment of new receiver in place of old receiver

Where a receiver ceases to hold the office of receiver pending a suit filed by him the suit does not abate but may be continued by his successor in office.¹ See Note 31 supra as to a present receiver's power to sue a former receiver for act done by the latter during his tenure of office as receiver.

47 Joint receivers

It is competent to a Court under this Rule to appoint two or more persons as joint receivers of the same property. In such a case the retirement or resignation of one of the receivers does not put an end to the order appointing receivers.¹ In a partition suit where the Court ordered the plaintiff to be in charge of one portion of the suit properties and the defendant to be in charge of the remaining portion it was held that the order was not ultra vires.² Ordinarily it is not open to a Court to appoint a receiver when a receiver has already been appointed in respect of the same property by another Court.³ But a receiver can be appointed in a mortgage suit where the decree is for sale although a receiver has already been appointed in respect of the same property in a prior partition suit.

48 Duration of office of receivership

A Court appointing a receiver may order that the office should continue permanently or for such period as is deemed necessary.¹ It can also cancel the order of appointment at any time if it considers it necessary.² Even if such appointment has been made with the consent of parties,³ it has an inherent power to discharge or remove the receiver appointed by it.³ But until otherwise ordered by the Court the receiver will continue in office⁴ though the suit in which he has been appointed has come to an end, but the purpose of his appointment has not been achieved⁵. A fortiori a receiver in a partition suit is not discharged merely by the passing of a preliminary decree in the suit⁶. A receiver in an administration suit cannot ordinarily be discharged before the completion of the administration^{6a}.

A consent order of appointment of a receiver does not prevent a party from impugning the administration thereunder which is of such a character as to amount to a malfeasance or to be, in substance so protracted and imperfect as to be futile.

The removal of a receiver is a matter of discretion to be exercised by the Court with care after due and proper enquiry. A receiver should not be dismissed summarily merely at the instance of one of the parties⁸. The burden of proving the circumstances justifying the removal is on the party applying for such removal⁹. Where incapacity on the part of the receiver is alleged it should be clearly proved¹⁰. A receiver may be removed for partiality¹¹.

A Court which appoints a receiver has authority to pass orders necessary to wind up his charge even after the suit has been disposed of¹². It can also examine the receiver's accounts and pass all necessary orders¹³.

Where the receivership is put an end to pending a suit filed by the receiver the party ascertained to be the true owner can continue the suit¹⁴.

Where a claim for restitution is made on the cancellation of an order of appointment of a receiver the Court will not, in ordering restitution, consider the fact that the receiver's appointment was to the applicant's advantage¹⁵.

Where any property in the receiver's possession is duly sold away to another the receiver cannot be allowed to continue in possession¹⁶.

49 Court may remove any person from the possession or custody of property

The Rule empowers the Court to remove any person from the possession of property in respect of which a receiver has been appointed. The only case in which the receiver's possession can be resisted is that provided for by sub rule (2) according to which the Court has no power to deprive a third person of the possession of any property when no party to the suit has a present right to do so¹. When therefore a third person in possession of property in respect of which a receiver has been appointed objects to deliver possession to the receiver, the Court

1, must hold an enquiry into his claim with a view to ascertain if he was under a present liability to be removed from the possession of the property²

It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the person in possession of the property though he may have a right to continue in possession cannot interfere with the receiver but should apply to the Court for redress and that otherwise he will be guilty of contempt of Court³. According to the High Court of Patna on the other hand the third party in possession is not bound to deliver possession to the receiver pending the enquiry into his claim⁴.

Sub rule (2) applies only to third persons in possession of the property and is no bar to the removal of any party to the suit, from possession⁵. Thus a mortgagee decree holder who is in possession of the mortgaged property under an arrangement with the judgment debtor for the liquidation of the mortgage debt is not entitled to possession as against a receiver who is subsequently appointed⁶.

The Rule does not empower a Court to authorise a receiver to enter upon immovable property in the possession of another person without his consent, in order to take an inventory of such property as the plaintiff may indicate as the property in dispute⁷. The Court, instead of actually evicting the party in possession, may order him to pay the receiver a certain occupation rent⁸.

Sub rule (1) (b) refers to the removal of persons other than the receiver. Hence an order removing a receiver does not fall under Cl (b)⁹.

50 Summary jurisdiction

A Court has power to enforce summarily a contract made by the receiver¹. But where a lease has been granted by the receiver and the lessee has been put in possession the lease cannot be set aside in summary proceedings². Where a judgment debtor took a sum of money from the receiver and refused to pay it back, it was held that the Court could order repayment and that such order could be enforced as a decree³. Although, ordinarily, proceedings for contempt are started at the instance of the parties and not of the receiver, there is nothing in law to prevent the receiver from applying for process for contempt⁴.

51 Appeal

Under O 43, R 1 (s) an appeal lies from an order under O 40, R 1 or R 4. An order under R. 1 may be one either appointing a receiver or may be one refusing to appoint a receiver. In either case the order will be appealable¹. The High Court of Calcutta has, in *Sripati Datta v Bibhuti Bhusan Datta*² held that the power to appoint includes a power to remove and that therefore an order removing the receiver is an order under O 40, R 1 and is therefore appealable. The same High Court has held however in earlier cases³ that a refusal to remove a receiver is not an order either under R 1 or R 4 and is not appealable. The same view has been held by the High Court of Madras⁴. The High Court of Allahabad has dissented from the Calcutta view in Sripati Datta's case and has held that an order removing a receiver from office is not appealable^{4a}.

O 40, R 1 is a general provision and even an order appointing or refusing to appoint a receiver in execution proceedings falls under O 40, R 1, and therefore is appealable as an appealable order and not as a *decree*⁵. The reason is that the definition of a 'decree' in S 2, Sub S (2) does not include an appealable order though it may fall within the terms of S 47. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that an order in execution proceedings refusing to remove a receiver comes within S 47 of the Code and is appealable as a decree⁶.

It is only a final order of appointment or refusal that is appealable. Where an ex parte order is confirmed by a second order, an appeal lies only from the latter order⁷. An order appointing a receiver subject to his furnishing security is then⁸ order

Where the effect of an order of appointment of a receiver and the directions given to him, is to remove any third person from the possession or custody of any property, it is an order under Cl (b) of this Rule and is open to appeal by such third party¹⁷. But a third party who is not in possession or custody of any property has no right of appeal against an order dismissing his objection to the

An order under Cl (d) of the Rule giving directions as to the disposal of the income of the property, is appealable under O 43, R 1 (s)¹⁹. But an order giving certain directions to the receiver in passing his accounts, does not fall under this Rule but under R 3 and hence is not appealable.²⁰ There is no right of appeal in the following cases —

But an order *passing the receiver's accounts*²⁵ or an order that the receiver should pay into Court a sum of money for loss caused by his neglect and directing the security furnished by him to be proceeded against in default²⁶ will be one falling under R 4 and will thus be appealable.

The High Court of Madras has held that an appeal lies under Clause 10 of the Letters Patent against the judgment of a single Judge of the High Court passed on an appeal preferred to it under O 43 R 1.²⁷

There is no right of appeal to the Privy Council from an order refusing to appoint a receiver.²⁸

In an appeal from an order appointing or refusing to appoint a receiver the appellate Court will not lightly interfere with the discretion of the lower Court²⁹ except on the ground of some overwhelming objection in point of propriety or principle³⁰ or on the ground that the Court was proceeding on a wrong view of the facts³¹ or has failed to exercise its discretion according to legal principles.³² The burden of showing that interference is necessary is on the appellant³¹ Pending an appeal from an order appointing a receiver the appellate Court can direct the receiver through the lower Court not to take any steps in pursuance of his appointment³²

Only those persons who are materially prejudiced by the appointment of the receiver need be made parties to the appeal Third persons not in possession of the property are not necessary parties thereto³³

A party who suggests names for the receivership is not thereby estopped from objecting to the appointment of a receiver in appeal³⁴

The unmentioned cases³⁵ under S 503 of the old Code regarding the right to appeal against an order under that section are no longer of any practical importance under the present Code as that section has been repealed

52 Letters Patent Appeal

An order appointing a receiver under R 1 is a judgment and is appealable under the Letters Patent¹ But an order directing a receiver to advance money to a guardian ad litem to conduct the defence on behalf of a minor defendant is not a judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies from the order²

As to whether appeal lies against Judgment of a single Judge of the High Court passed in an appeal under O 43 R 1 see note ante

53 Revision

An order appointing a receiver in a case in which the Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver as for instance, in a proceeding under the Succession Certificate Act, can be set aside in revision by the High Court¹ Where an objection of a third party in possession of the property, to the appointment of a receiver was dismissed it was held by the Patna High Court that the third party had no right of appeal but could apply for revision of the order dismissing the objection² In the undermentioned case, it was held by the Madras High Court that the refusal of a Court to join a receiver as a party to proceedings for the sale of property in his hands in execution of a decree for sale on a mortgage was a material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction by the lower Court and that a revision lay³

54 Practice

Applications for the appointment of receivers should be made in the ordinary way by notice of motion in open Court and not in chambers¹

A receiver being an officer of the Court, it is for the Court to determine his remuneration an agreement without leave of the Court by a party to pay remuneration to the receiver is contrary to law and is not enforceable¹ Where the managing partner of a partnership business consents to act as a receiver without remuneration and is appointed as receiver for the purpose of keeping the assets and profits and accounts of the partnership and for submitting proper accounts thereof he does not by such consent, forego his right to such remuneration as he would be entitled to for managing and carrying on the business² A receiver is entitled to a commission on the collections made by him and cannot claim any commission where certain Government securities in deposit with a bank are converted under the authority of the Court, by the bank itself, into other securities issued by the Government³ Similarly where in a condiment business the receiver is ordered to retain 5 per cent of the gross sale proceeds he cannot take such commission on trade discounts inasmuch as proceeds do not include trade discounts^{3a} When a party is dismissed from an action as having been wrongly impleaded and the receivership of his property is cancelled, the Court has inherent jurisdiction to order restitution to be made to such party by ordering the plaintiff to refund to such party the commission and charges paid by him to the receiver⁴

1 Security necessary—Clause (a)

This Rule provides for the duties of the receiver¹ Though under the Code the Court has discretion to appoint a receiver without security, it should obviously be done only in the most exceptional circumstances² Where the appellate Court directs the lower Court to appoint a receiver and take security from him but the lower Court appoints a receiver without taking any such security the appointment cannot be said to be without jurisdiction³

2 Liability of surety

A surety for a receiver is liable to the payment of interest on balances improperly retained by him, as also for the costs of proceedings in Court necessarily or properly incurred in consequence of the receiver's default, such as the costs of a proceeding to take accounts of an attachment for failure to account, of an application for his discharge and for the appointment of another person in his place, and of any proceedings taken to enforce the recognizance The liability of a surety upon the bond of a receiver conditioned for the due discharge of his duties is, however, limited to cases of a violation of those duties which may properly be said to be within the scope of his appointment as receiver, in other

3 words the surety is responsible only in respect of liability incurred by the receiver in his capacity as receiver. To determine whether a particular liability has been incurred by the receiver in his capacity as receiver the test to be applied is 'could the receiver be made accountable in that respect in the account proceedings?' If he could not the surety is not liable; if he could be held liable in that proceeding as receiver the surety is also liable. But a surety who has satisfied the claim against the receiver is entitled to stand in the place of the receiver and to reimburse himself from the sums ordered to be paid to the receiver.¹

3 Submission of accounts—Clause (b) —See Note 37 to R 1 supra

The sanction of the Court is necessary for all expenditure of special nature incurred by the receiver.¹ A receiver is liable for all unauthorised expenditure incurred by him such as salaries of unnecessary servants appointed without the leave of the Court, bribe to the Police for obtaining the release of a minor of whose estate he is the receiver and sums advanced to the minor owner of the estate in excess of the limit sanctioned by the Court.² Where litigation expenses are incurred by the receiver the latter must show not merely that he paid the expenses but the details of such expenditure.³

The liability of a receiver not appearing on the face of the accounts, such as for imprudent management for wilful default or neglect for the mal practices of his servants etc cannot be properly gone into on the receiver's application for the passing of his accounts. A separate suit is the more appropriate procedure for the investigation of such matters.⁴

Before passing an order for the attachment of the receiver's property under R 4 the Court should examine the accounts under this Rule and give him an opportunity to pay the amount found due by him.⁵

If on an application to discharge a receiver the latter puts forward a claim to a larger amount than what is due to him and such amount is deposited in Court he is liable if such amount is found to be in excess of that actually due, to interest on the excess amount but if the receiver's action has compelled the owner of the estate to borrow money at a higher rate than usual the question of the receiver's liability in consequence of that fact should form the subject of a separate suit.⁶

No order can be passed against the receiver to make good the loss to the estate due to his gross negligence till the passing of the accounts.⁷

4 Responsibility for loss —Clause (d)

A receiver appointed to collect the rents due to an estate must make good the loss caused to it by a breach of his duties. Thus if he delegates his duties to another (which he is not competent to do) and the latter misappropriates the funds collected by him¹ or if he fails to realise rents by taking proper proceedings he will be liable for the loss. Mistaken proceedings though taken in good faith will not absolve the receiver from liability. A decree holder is not bound to accept promissory notes obtained by the Receiver from the tenants for the rents due and the receiver must make good the amounts of the rent not collected. Any loss arising from the default of the receiver will, as between the parties, devolve on the estate to which the appointment relates and not on the decree holder at whose instance he may have been appointed¹. A receiver is not entitled to recover the costs of proceedings initiated by him through mistake². A succeeding receiver cannot sue a former Receiver for funds which he should have realized and accounted for³. Ordinarily creditors advancing money to a receiver for the purposes of management can proceed both against the estate and the receiver personally. But the receiver's personal liability may be expressly excluded by the terms of a particular loan⁴. A receiver's liability on account of his wilful default or neglect, can more appropriately be investigated in a separate suit against him than in an application in the suit wherein he was appointed as receiver⁵. See Notes 31 to 33 to R 1.

5 Appeal

An order under this Rule is not one that is appealable under O 43, R 1 (s). Thus an order holding a receiver of an estate liable for a certain sum of money is not appealable. But where such an order is followed by another one under R 4 for coercive action against the receiver, an appeal lies and in the appeal the prior order under R 3 can be attacked¹. An order directing the receiver to pay a certain sum of money as damages² or an order of the Court giving directions to the receiver in passing his accounts is not open to appeal³. No appeal lies against an order construing an order of appointment of receiver under R 1⁴. Where a receiver is appointed subject to his furnishing security the appointment is not complete till security is given and till then there is no right of appeal⁵. See also Note 51 to R 1.

An order under this Rule is open to revision⁶.

the Court may direct his property to be attached and may sell such property, and may apply the proceeds to make good any amount found to be due from him or any loss occasioned by him, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the receiver.

1 Scope and applicability of the Rule

The Rule provides for coercive steps against the receiver who fails to carry out his duties as laid down in R 3 The Court has got a discretion in deciding whether to take action or not under this Rule as against the receiver^{1a} When the receiver is guilty of a wilful default or gross negligence the only provision for taking action against him apart from proceeding against the security, is that his property can be attached arrest and imprisonment are not to be the methods of enforcement¹

2 Loss to property by wilful default or gross neglect

Property includes not only corpus of the property entrusted to the receiver but also the income derived from it¹ The Rule is a residuary provision and covers a case of misappropriation also³ Even a partner who is appointed receiver of partnership assets will be guilty of gross misconduct if he appropriates to his own use any of the partnership assets³

the basis of a wilful default and neglect⁴. Such a suit may be filed even after his discharge if it transpires that he has in his hands moneys belonging to the estate⁵. Similarly his accounts may be re opened on discovery of errors, even where he has been discharged after the passing of his accounts. The proper procedure however, in such a case is to hold an enquiry to find out whether any loss has been occasioned by his wilful default or gross negligence and to pass an order under this Rule or if desired to proceed against him under S 145 of the Code. A separate suit against him is not necessary in such circumstances⁶.

If money paid by a receiver does not reach the proper destination he must make good the loss unless he can show that he acted with perfect regularity and has used such a degree of prudence as would be expected from an ordinary individual in his own affairs.

Where at the time of appointing a receiver, there was a decree in favour of the estate about 11 years old and after his appointment the receiver applied for the arrest of the debtor but not for attachment of his properties on the ground that it was very much encumbered it cannot be said that the receiver is guilty of any negligence at all. It must be shown by the party wishing to establish gross negligence on the part of the receiver that it would have been profitable to the estate if the debtor's property had been attached⁷.

3 Court may direct his property to be attached

Where a receiver dies his property in the hands of his legal representatives may be attached¹. But before directing the attachment of property under this Rule the Court must first determine the exact amount for which he is liable after due enquiry under R 3, and give him an opportunity to pay the same².

4 Removal of a receiver—See Note 43 to R 1 supra

The Court has an inherent power in the exercise of its discretion to remove a receiver appointed by it¹. A receiver who has not complied with the Court's orders to keep proper accounts should be removed from office². A receiver can be removed only by the Court appointing him³.

5 Appeal—See also Note 51 to R 1 ante

An order under this Rule is appealable under O 43, R 1 (s)¹.

No appeal lies from the following orders—

- (1) An order which merely declares that the receiver is liable to the estate for a certain sum of money and which is not accompanied by any order for the attachment of his property^{1a}.
- (2) An order fixing the period for which an account is to be filed².
- (3) An order removing a receiver from office³.

1, decree has not yet been prepared³ or the appellant is under an erroneous impression that it has not yet been prepared⁴ It has been held that the Court may in such cases give time for getting a copy of decree prepared and filing the same^{4a} But see the criticism of this view in S 2 (2) Note 8 The Court may however, where the copy of the decree is filed after the expiry of the period of limitation, excuse the delay under S 5 of the Limitation Act^{4b} The fact that a copy of the decree has already been filed in another proceeding is not sufficient⁵ In an appeal in a land acquisition case a copy of the award which is the decree in the case should be filed along with the memorandum of appeal⁶ Similarly in a probate case, a copy of the decree should accompany the memorandum of appeal⁷

A memorandum of appeal should also be accompanied by a copy of judgment appealed from Only the final judgment need however be filed It is not necessary to file interim orders and judgments disposing of preliminary issues in the case⁸ This Rule makes a distinction between the filing of a copy of the decree and the filing of a copy of the judgment The Court has no power to dispense with a copy of the decree,⁹ but it can dispense with a copy of the judgment But unless dispensed with, a memorandum of appeal unaccompanied by a copy of the judgment is not valid¹⁰ Where, however an appeal is admitted without a copy of the judgment the order admitting the appeal may be taken to amount to an order dispensing with such copy¹¹ The power to dispense with the copy of the judgment should ordinarily be exercised at the first hearing¹² The fact that a copy of the judgment has been filed in another proceeding is not a sufficient ground for dispensing with the copy¹³ By force of O 43, R 2

order should be accompanied by a copy of the Order appealed from^{13a}. In cases, however, where a formal order is not drawn up^{13b} or where the formal order is an exact copy of the concluding portion of the judgment^{13c} the failure to file a copy of such order has been held not to invalidate the appeal.

An appeal from a decree which has been amended must be accompanied by a copy of the amended decree and not a copy of the original decree¹⁴. Where the decree is amended after the filing of the appeal the appellate Court may permit a copy of the amended decree to be attached to the memorandum of appeal, and the appeal becomes from that moment an appeal against the amended decree¹⁵. Where the amendment of the decree is only for the purpose of making the meaning of the decree clear there is no such alteration as to make it a new decree and no copy of the amended decree need be filed in order to make the appeal, already filed, competent¹⁶.

The word 'copy' in the Rule means a certified copy¹⁷. A copy of the translation of the decree is not enough¹⁸. Nor does the Rule require a printed copy of the judgment to be filed¹⁹. It is also not necessary that the copy should be one obtained by the appellant himself²⁰. See also the case cited below¹.

As to whether in second appeal a copy of the trial Court's judgment should be filed, see O 42, R 1, and the cases cited in Note 2 thereof. A copy of the trial Court's decree need not, under this Rule, be filed along with a memorandum of second appeal^{21a}. The Rule does not apply to appeals under the Madras Rent Recovery Act²² or under the Oudh Rent Act²³.

5 Date of presentation for purpose of limitation

An appeal will be deemed to be validly presented for the purposes of limitation only when it is accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed from and of the judgment on which it is founded. Hence though the memorandum of appeal may be filed within the period of limitation, it will be barred if the copies of the decree and judgment are not filed till after the expiry of the period of limitation¹. 1 Scope and applicability of the Rule

The Rule provides for coercive steps against the receiver who fails to carry out his duties as laid down in R 3 The Court has got a discretion in deciding whether to take action or not under this Rule as against the receiver^{1a} When the receiver is guilty of a wilful default or gross negligence the only provision for taking action against him apart from proceeding against the security, is that his property can be attached arrest and imprisonment are not to be the methods of enforcement¹

Property includes not only corpus of the property entrusted to the receiver but also the income derived from it¹ The Rule is a residuary provision and covers a case of misappropriation also² Even a partner who is appointed receiver of partnership assets will be guilty of gross misconduct if he appropriates to his own use any of the partnership assets³

the estate a wilful default and the fact that such a receiver would not be able to discharge his responsibilities as receiver of the estate. Similarly his accounts may be rejected and a receiver may be removed if he has been discharged after the passage of time. The proper procedure is to make an enquiry into the case of a receiver and if it is found that he has committed a wilful default or some other offence, the court may remove him and direct that the receiver should be removed from office. If the receiver is removed from office, the court may direct that the receiver should be removed from office and that the receiver should be removed from office.

If more particularly a receiver is removed from office, the proper procedure is to make an enquiry into the case of a receiver and if it is found that he has committed a wilful default or some other offence, the court may remove him and direct that the receiver should be removed from office. If the receiver is removed from office, the court may direct that the receiver should be removed from office and that the receiver should be removed from office.

Where at the time of appointing a receiver there was a decree in favour of the estate about 11 years old and after his appointment the receiver applied for the arrest of the debtor but not for attachment of his properties on the ground that it was very much encumbered it cannot be said that the receiver is guilty of any negligence at all. It must be shown by the party who wishes to establish negligence on the part of the receiver that it would have been practicable to the estate if the debtor's property had been attached.¹

3 Court may direct his property to be attached

Where a receiver dies his property in the hands of his legal representatives may be attached.¹ But before directing the attachment of property under this Rule the Court must first determine the exact amount for which he is liable after due enquiry under R 3, and give him an opportunity to pay the sum.²

4 Removal of a receiver—See Note 43 to R 1 s pra

The Court has an inherent power in the exercise of its discretion to remove a receiver appointed by it.¹ A receiver who has not complied with the Court's orders to keep proper accounts should be removed from office.² A receiver can be removed only by the Court appointing him.³

5 Appeal—See also Note 51 to R 1 s pra

An order under this Rule is appealable under O 13, R 1 (v).¹

No appeal lies from the following orders—

- (1) An order which merely declares that the receiver is liable to the estate for a certain sum of money and which is not accompanied by any order for the attachment of his property.^{1a}
- (2) An order fixing the period for which an account is to be filed.²
- (3) An order removing a receiver from office.³
- (4) An order for refund of losses to the estate due to the receiver's neglect.⁴

But in an appeal from an order for attachment under R 4 the propriety of an order under R 3 requiring the receiver to pay a certain sum of money to the estate can be attacked⁷

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that an order passing a receiver's account is appealable inasmuch as it is really an order refusing relief against the receiver under this Rule⁸

1 Memorandum of appeal to be signed by appellant or his pleader

It is necessary that the memorandum of appeal should be signed by the appellant or his pleader. By virtue of the provisions of O 3 R 1, supra an agent of the appellant, duly authorised may also sign the memorandum of appeal.¹ A defect in the authority will not necessarily invalidate the memorandum of appeal.² Where an appeal was filed on behalf of a company by one of its officers not duly authorised to do so, it was held that the defect could be cured by putting in a power of attorney duly authorising him to do so.³ Similarly where a memorandum of appeal was signed by a pleader whose vakalat was not signed by the party, it was held that the defect could be subsequently rectified by the party signing it.⁴ It is immaterial, if the appellant has signed the appeal, that he has not written the memorandum of appeal himself.⁵ Where an appeal consisted of two documents one containing the names of the parties and the other containing the grounds of appeal, the fact that the latter was not signed by the party is not fatal to the appeal.⁶

2 Presentation of memorandum of appeal

Order 3, Rule 1 provides that an appearance, application or act in or to any Court required or authorised by law to be made by a party may, except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognised agent or by his pleader. The presentation of a memorandum of appeal by a pleader holding a power of attorney from the party expressly authorising him to present it is valid though the power is not filed with the appeal.¹ A memorandum of appeal may be presented where the appellant is a minor, by the appellant's guardian ad litem.² But a presentation by an unauthorised agent is no presentation in the eye of the law.³ As to a presentation by the clerk of the pleader, see Note 9 to O 3 R 4, ante.

The memorandum of appeal should be presented to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf. A presentation to the Judge at his private residence after Court hours on the last day of limitation, is sufficient compliance with the law.⁴ A presentation during the vacation or even on a Sunday is valid, provided it is to the proper officer.^{4a} It was held in the undermentioned case⁵ that a memorandum of appeal must be taken to have been validly presented where it was deposited in the box put up by the appellate Court for the purpose. But a presentation to an officer of the Court other than the one appointed by the Court in this behalf⁶ or the placing of the memorandum on the table of the appointed officer when he was absent⁷ or the sending of a memorandum by post⁸ is not a valid presentation

A debtor in Civil Jail is entitled to present an appeal without the assistance of a pleader.⁹

An omission to join the necessary parties to an appeal makes the appeal invalid.¹⁰

See also Notes to O 4, R 1 as to the presentation of plaints

3 Presentation with defective vakalatnama

The presentation of a memorandum of appeal by a vakil without any authority from the party is not valid¹ But the mere fact that the party has omitted by oversight to sign the vakalatnama² or the fact that the vakalatnama was not filed with the memorandum of appeal³ does not invalidate the appeal Where an appellant executes a vakalatnama in favour of two persons, but one of them alone accepts it, the presentation of the appeal by the latter is a valid presentation^{3a}

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the presentation of a memorandum of appeal is valid where the name of the vakil presenting it, is omitted in the vakalatnama. The High Court of Allahabad has held that it is not a valid presentation, the reason given being that the word shall in O 3 R 4 shows that the Rule is of an imperative character.⁴ The High Courts of Calcutta,⁵ Lahore,^{5a} Patna⁶ and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,⁷ on the other hand, have held that the presentation is not invalid and that the defect is one that can be cured. See also O 3, R 4, Notes 14 to 16.

4 Memorandum must be accompanied by copies of judgment and decree

It is absolutely essential that a memorandum of appeal should be accompanied with a copy of the decree appealed from.¹ A memorandum of appeal not accompanied by such a copy is not a valid appeal² and thus is so even if the

[See (1933) 1933 Lah 938 (939). Decree

1, decree has not yet been prepared³ or the appellant is under an erroneous impression that it has not yet been prepared⁴ It has been held that the Court may in such cases give time for getting a copy of decree prepared and filing the same^{4a} But see the criticism of this view in S 2 (2), Note 8 The Court may, however, where the copy of the decree is filed after the expiry of the period of limitation, excuse the delay under S 5 of the Limitation Act^{4b} The fact that a copy of the decree has already been filed in another proceeding is not sufficient⁵ In an appeal in a land acquisition case a copy of the award which is the decree in the case should be filed along with the memorandum of appeal⁶ Similarly in a prolate case, a copy of the decree should accompany the memorandum of appeal⁷

A memorandum of appeal should also be accompanied by a copy of judgment appealed from Only the final judgment need however be filed It is not necessary to file interim orders and judgments disposing of preliminary issues in the case⁸ This Rule makes a distinction between the filing of a copy of the decree and the filing of a copy of the judgment The Court has no power to dispense with a copy of the decree,⁹ but it can dispense with a copy of the judgment But unless dispensed with, a memorandum of appeal unaccompanied by a copy of the judgment is not valid¹⁰ Where, however, an appeal is admitted without a copy of the judgment, the order admitting the appeal may be taken to amount to an order dispensing with such copy¹¹ The power to dispense with the copy of the judgment should, ordinarily, be exercised at the first hearing¹² The fact that a copy of the judgment has been filed in another proceeding is not a sufficient ground for dispensing with the copy¹³ By force of O 43 R 2 a memorandum of appeal from an order should be accompanied by a copy of the Order appealed from^{13a} In cases however where a formal order is not drawn up^{13b} or where the formal order is an exact copy of the concluding portion of the judgment^{13c} the failure to file a copy of such order has been held not to invalidate the appeal

An appeal from a decree which has been amended must be accompanied by a copy of the amended decree and not a copy of the original decree¹⁴ Where the decree is amended after the filing of the appeal the appellate Court may permit a copy of the amended decree to be attached to the memorandum of appeal and the appeal becomes from that moment, an appeal against the amended decree¹⁵ Where the amendment of the decree is only for the purpose of making the meaning of the decree clear there is no such alteration as to make it a new decree and no copy of the amended decree need be filed in order to make the appeal already filed competent¹⁶

The word copy in the Rule means a certified copy¹⁷ A copy of the translation of the decree is not enough¹⁸ Nor does the Rule require a printed copy of the judgment to be filed¹⁹ It is also not necessary that the copy should be one obtained by the appellant himself²⁰ See also the case cited below¹

As to whether in second appeal a copy of the trial Court's judgment should be filed see O 42 R 1 and the cases cited in Note 2 thereof A copy of the trial Court's decree need not, under this Rule, be filed along with a memorandum of second appeal^{21a} The Rule does not apply to appeals under the Madras Rent Recovery Act²² or under the Oudh Rent Act²³

5 Date of presentation for purpose of limitation

An appeal will be deemed to be validly presented for the purposes of limitation only when it is accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed from and of the judgment on which it is founded Hence though the memorandum of appeal may be filed within the period of limitation, it will be barred if the copies of the decree and judgment are not filed till after the expiry of the period of limitation¹ Where an appeal is filed against a minor respondent,

6 Omission to file copy of decree in rival appeal

Where there are several appeals from one judgment by different appellants a copy of the judgment and of the decree should be filed in each appeal¹ Thus in an appeal from an award under the Land Acquisition Act the fact that the award disposed of many references and it was filed in an appeal filed by a party in one appeal does not enable its being dispensed with in the other appeals² But where the same appellant files different appeals from the same judgment it has been held that it is sufficient if he files a copy of the judgment in one of the appeals only³

7 Two decrees in two cross appeals

Where two cross appeals are heard together and disposed of by a single judgment but two separate decrees are drawn up one in each appeal there is a conflict of opinion as to whether an appeal against the judgment filing a copy of one of the decrees only, is valid¹ The conflict is due to another aspect of the question, namely whether an appeal against one of such decrees only is barred by res judicata by the non-filing of an appeal from the other This aspect is discussed in Note 29 to S 11, ante

8 Limitation for appeal

See Arts 152 and 156 of the Limitation Act

The said Act provides for the extension of the period of limitation prescribed in certain cases and for exclusion of certain periods in computing the period of limitation prescribed

Extension of the period—S 4 of the Act provides that where the period prescribed expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day that the Court

A Judge sitting in the Admission Court has power to excuse the delay in filing the appeal under S 5 of the Limitation Act.⁷ But an ex parte order admitting an appeal after the period of limitation can be set aside by the Court on objection by the opposite side after notice.⁸ Such an objection should, however, be taken at the earliest possible opportunity after becoming aware of the order.⁹ If an appeal is transferred from a District Judge who has admitted the appeal ex parte, to a subordinate Judge for hearing the latter can decide the question of limitation.⁹

An order admitting an appeal beyond limitation can be attacked in second appeal preferred against the appellate decree.¹⁰ But the lower Court's direction in allowing or refusing to allow an appeal to be filed beyond limitation under S 5 of the Limitation Act will not be lightly interfered with.¹¹ S 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to appeals in forma pauperis.¹²

Exclusion of period under S 12 of the Limitation Act—In computing the period of limitation for an appeal the appellant is entitled under S 12 of the Limitation Act to a deduction of the time required for obtaining copies of the decree and of the judgment appealed from.¹³ It is not necessary for the extension of time under S 12 that the copy must have been applied for by the appellant himself or his authorised agent.¹⁴

The following points should be noted in computing the Time requisite for obtaining the copies—

The High Court of Madras has added sub-rule 3 to this Rule under which when an appeal is presented out of time, the question whether the delay in filing the appeal should be excused or not should be decided before the memorandum of appeal is admitted²⁸

9 Exclusion of time in seeking review of judgment

An appellant is not entitled, as of right, to the exclusion of the time spent by him in seeking a review of the judgment, in computing the period of limitation for his appeal¹ But if the appellant can show that he had reasonable grounds for applying for review instead of preferring an appeal and that he had exercised due diligence, the time taken up by the review application may be excused under S 5 of the Limitation Act in computing the limitation for the appeal² amendments or otherwise.⁴ Thus objections as to joinder of parties or causes of action which might have been cured by amendment even in the trial Court cannot be raised for the first time in the memorandum of appeal.⁵ Again, there are certain objections such as those relating to the place of suing or the valuation of the suit that cannot under the specific provisions of the statute be raised for the first time in appeal (see S 21 of the Code and S 11 of the Suits Valuation Act 1887). Such objections therefore cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in the memorandum of appeal.⁶ An objection that a declaratory decree cannot be passed with respect to a future right will not also be allowed to be raised for the first time in the memorandum of appeal.⁷

The following are, however, recognised as exceptions to the general rule that a new case cannot be raised for the first time in the memorandum of appeal—

(1) Objections as to jurisdiction apparent on the face of the record.⁸

(2) Matters going to the root of the case and which are obvious on the face of the record,⁹ such as non-joinder of essential parties¹⁰ or want of notice to quit,¹¹ or insufficiency of notice in suits for foreclosure.¹²

(3) Questions of law¹³ such as a question of limitation¹⁴ or of *res judicata*¹⁵ which can be substantiated on the facts already on the record

13 When appellate Court may not interfere with findings of fact

In Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co v Moti Lal,¹ their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows —

On appeal the whole case including the facts are within the jurisdiction of the appeal Court. But generally speaking it is undesirable to interfere with the findings of the trial Judge who sees and hears the witnesses and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attached to one or other of conflicting witnesses. Nor should his pronouncement with respect to their credibility be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the Court of appeal.

In Prasanna Moyce v Baikunthnath,² the Calcutta High Court observed as follows —

Two conflicting view points have to be reconciled namely on the one hand the undoubted duty of the Court of appeal to review the recorded evidence and to draw its own inferences and conclusions and on the other hand the unquestionable weight which must be attached to the opinion of the Judge of the primary Court who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and noticing their look and manner.

14 Competency of appeal

Where leave to appeal has to be obtained before preferring an appeal, the memorandum of appeal should be accompanied by a petition for such leave¹ An objection as to the maintainability of the appeal should be considered by the Court, though it was not raised in the first instance by the respondent's pleader² See also the following cases³ Where a party has accepted the order of the lower Court as correct and has enjoyed the benefit thereof he will be estopped from appealing against the same⁴ (See also Notes under S 96)

15 Consolidation of appeals

A Court has inherent power to consolidate suits or appeals in proper cases. But this cannot be done so as to affect the provisions of the Court-Fees Act or of this Code. Thus several appeals in cases disposed of by one judgment cannot be consolidated so as to enable the appellant to pay Court-fee on the value of the consolidated appeals and file only one *vakalat*² Where one decree only was passed in two appeals preferred by two sets of defendants against the decree of the trial Court it was held that one second appeal was enough³

16 Stamp on memorandum of appeal

It has been seen in Note 2 to S 149 ante that the institution of a suit or other proceeding will not be a legal institution if the fee chargeable under law is not paid at the time of the institution but that Court may under the provisions of S 149, allow the payment of the stamp fee at any stage and thus validate the institution. A memorandum of appeal which does not bear the proper stamp-fee prescribed therefor is not validly presented,¹ unless the Court allows under S 149 the fee to be paid subsequently.^{1a}

18 Applicability of the Order to other proceedings

It has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras¹ that the provisions of this Order apply also to Original Side appeals. In the undermentioned cases it was held that appeals under S. 476 B of the Code of Criminal Procedure should also be treated as civil appeals regulated by the provisions of this Order.

The provisions of this Order apply to proceedings under the N.W.F.P. Law and Justice Regulation VII of 1901 S. 89 and the Punjab Pre-emption Act I of 1913 S. 29. See also the Agra Tenancy Act III of 1926 Sch. 2.

R. 2. [S. 542] The appellant shall not, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal but the Appellate Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this Rule.

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any other ground unless the party who may be affected thereby has had a sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground.

Under S 5 of the Court-Fees Act, 1870 the decision of the Taxing Officer as to the Court fee required is final. Where however, no such decision has been given by the Taxing Officer, the respondent can raise the question at the time of the hearing of the appeal.²

In order to see which part of the decree is the subject of appeal before the appellate Court must look at the memorandum of appeal and not at the stamp fee affixed thereon.³ Nor, where a memorandum of appeal is insufficiently stamped can the Court grant a relief proportionate to the stamp affixed.⁴ As to the amount of fee leviable in appeals, see the Court-Fees Act 1870 and the undermentioned cases.⁵

17 Refund where memorandum is over stamped

The Court has inherent jurisdiction in a fit case to order the refund of excess Court fee paid on the memorandum of appeal.¹ But the Court can only grant a certificate to the appellant authorising him to receive back such excess. The appellant should thereafter apply to the Collector for refund of the Court fee.² See also S 13 of the Court Fees Act.

Under S 5 of the Court-Fees Act, 1870, the decision of the Taxing Officer as to the Court-fee required is final. Where however, no such decision has been given by the Taxing officer, the respondent can raise the question at the time of the hearing of the appeal.²

In order to see which part of the decree is the subject of appeal before the appellate Court must look at the memorandum of appeal and not at the stamp fee affixed thereon.³ Nor, where a memorandum of appeal is insufficiently stamped can the Court grant a relief proportionate to the stamp affixed.⁴ As to the amount of fee leviable in appeals, see the Court-Fees Act 1870 and the undermentioned cases.⁵

The Court has inherent jurisdiction in a fit case to order the refund of excess Court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal.¹ But the Court can only grant a certificate to the appellant authorising him to receive back such excess. The appellant should thereafter apply to the Collector for refund of the Court fee.² See also S 13 of the Court-Fees Act

18 Applicability of the Order to other proceedings

It has been held by a Full Bench of the High Court of Madras¹ that the provisions of this Order apply also to Original Side appeals. In the undermentioned cases it was held that appeals under S. 476 B of the Code of Criminal Procedure should also be treated as civil appeals regulated by the provisions of this Order.

The provisions of this Order apply to proceedings under the N.W.F.P. Law and Justice Regulation VII of 1901 S. 89 and the Punjab Pre-emption Act I of 1913 S. 29. See also the Agra Tenancy Act III of 1926 Sch. 2.

R. 2. [S. 142] The appellant shall not except by leave of the Court urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal but the Appellate Court, in deciding the appeal shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this Rule.

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any other ground unless the party who may be affected thereby has had a sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground.

2 at the hearing of the appeal¹ though he can do so with the permission of the Court²

4 Leave of Court to raise new point

The Court has under this Rule, a direction to permit a new point, not raised in the memorandum of appeal, to be raised and argued at the hearing¹. The leave may however, be express or implied^{1a}. But, unless such permission is taken the Court will not allow such a point to be argued at the hearing^{1b}. The mere fact that the respondent has had notice of the fact that the appellant intends to raise such point at the hearing cannot dispense with the Court's permission under this Rule².

The Court will refuse to permit a new point to be argued where at the time of taking it, the period of limitation for the appeal had expired and where the allowing of such a point to be argued would practically amount to the appellant to set up a new appeal³. But where the point sought to be raised is involved in the points already raised in the memorandum of appeal⁴ or is a question of law depending on no new facts except those already on the record⁵ or is a point to which the other side cannot legitimately raise an objection on the ground of surprise⁶ the Court may grant the appellant leave to raise it. The Court should, however, grant the permission only on such terms as would indemnify the opposite party for the loss caused to him by re-argument on the failure of the appellant to raise the point in time.⁷

5 Point of limitation

Under S. 3 of the Limitation Act a Court is bound to reject a suit or appeal if it is barred by limitation even though the bar of limitation may not have been raised in the pleadings.¹ But this section does not apply where the plea is not that the appeal before that Court is barred by limitation but that the suit or appeal in the lower Court was barred by limitation.² Hence, unless a plea that the suit or appeal in the lower Court was barred by limitation is taken in the memorandum of appeal preferred to the higher Court under R. 2, it cannot be urged at the hearing of the appeal without the leave of the appellate Court.³ As a general rule, the appellate Court will permit a point of limitation though not raised in the memorandum of appeal, to be raised at the hearing of the appeal, where it is apparent on the face of the proceedings and does not involve any new question of fact.⁴ But it will not do so where such a plea involves an investigation of further facts.⁵

6 Point of jurisdiction

A point of jurisdiction not involving an investigation into other facts than those on the record will be allowed to be raised at the hearing of an appeal, though it was not raised in the memorandum of appeal. Thus a plea as to the jurisdiction of the Court to make a reference to arbitration¹ or a plea as to the competency of the Court to grant the relief claimed² or a plea of *res judicata*³ or a plea that the plaint does not disclose a cause of action against the defendant⁴ can be permitted to be argued at the hearing of the appeal.

7 Appellate Court shall not be confined by leave of the Court

1911 Pun Re No 81 But appellate Court has option of refusing to listen to plea of limitation even though it cannot advance at the hearing a point not so raised or taken. But the appellate Court is not confined in deciding the appeal to the points so raised or taken. It is entitled to base its decision on grounds neither set forth in the memorandum of appeal nor taken with the leave of the Court.¹ Thus it can suo motu raise a point of limitation² or of jurisdiction³ apparent on the face of the record and decide the appeal on that point. Where alternative grounds of appeal are raised it can go into questions which are admitted for the purpose of an alternative argument and give a finding against the appellant.⁴ But a party cannot claim as of right that the Court must exercise power given under this Rule.⁵

The power given to the appellate Court under this Rule does not extend to the making out a new case for either party and to grant them relief on that basis⁶ or to go behind a finding of fact which is accepted by the appellant⁷ or to interfere with a part of the decree which is not appealed from.⁸ Thus in an appeal by the defendants where there is no cross objection by the plaintiff the appellate Court cannot while dismissing the appeal, enlarge the relief granted to the plaintiff by the lower Court.⁹ The Court will not also be justified in taking up a new question under this Rule unless there can be no reasonable doubt on the record that the evidence on the new point had been completely given on both sides or the point is a pure question of law and it is expedient in the interest of justice to consider and decide it.¹⁰ An appellant can give up any of the grounds of appeal at the hearing¹¹ and the appellate Court is bound to give a decision only on those pleas which are urged and argued.¹²

The Court can exercise its power of rejecting a memorandum of appeal under this rule *at any stage*⁴ though, as a general rule, the proper time to do so would be the time of its presentation and not after it has been admitted⁵

2 Or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended¹

Where the memorandum of appeal consisted of two documents, one, in the vernacular, containing the names of parties, and signed by the appellant, and the other in English containing the grounds of appeal but not signed by the appellant, it was held that the defect, if any, could be remedied by an amendment under this rule¹ A memorandum of appeal which merely states that the proceedings of the lower Court are irregular and contrary to law is too vague and general and requires amendment before the appeal can be heard² In this rule there is no limitation as to the time or stage when the memorandum of appeal may be returned for amendment³ But whenever a memorandum of appeal is returned for amendment the Court should fix a time for its re presentation⁴ The time that the Court allows for re-presentation of a memorandum of appeal is only by way of concession and cannot be demanded as a matter of right, at any rate after the expiry of the period of limitation within which the appeal can be filed^{4a}

A memorandum of appeal from the preliminary decree can be amended so as to constitute an appeal from the final decree also⁵

3 Defect of parties

Where the respondent is wrongly named owing to a clerical error in the decree, the mistake is not a fatal one but can be rectified¹ A single appeal by different persons having different defences and reasons for appealing is irregular² As to whether an appeal filed against a dead person can be rectified by adding the legal representatives, see S 153, Note 5 and O 1, R 10 and also the case cited below³

7 Second appeal

An order returning a memorandum of appeal for presentation to the proper Court is appealable as an order and hence under S. 104 sub S. 2 n second appeal lies therefrom¹ In the undermentioned case the High Court in second appeal refused to convert an order rejecting a memorandum of appeal into one returning it for amendment² The High Court in second appeal can interfere with the discretion of a lower appellate Court in admitting or refusing to admit an appeal after the expiry of limitation, where the lower Court has exercised its discretion arbitrarily and not according to legal principles³ See also Note 16 to S. 100, ante

1 Scope and object of the Rule

The general rule is that on an appeal by one of several plaintiffs or defendants, the appellate Court can reverse or vary the decree of the trial Court only in favour of the party appealing. This Rule and R 33 provide exceptions to the general rule,¹ and give the Court ample power to make the appropriate order needed in the interests of justice.² While R 33 of this Order provides that the appellate Court has power to make the proper decree even in cases where the appeal is as to a part only of the decree,³ this Rule provides that where a decree proceeds upon a ground common to all the plaintiffs or defendants any one of the plaintiffs or the defendants may appeal from the whole decree and thereupon the appellate Court can reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or the defendants as the case may be.⁴ In such a case the appeal by one is virtually treated as an appeal on behalf of all, though they may not be parties to the appeal.⁴ The Rule therefore will not apply where the appeal is directed only against that portion of the decree which affects the appellant,^{4a} or where the appealing plaintiff or defendant cannot, under the circumstances of the particular case, be considered as appealing on behalf of the non appealing plaintiffs or defendants, e. g., where one of the defendants appeals on his own behalf and impleads the non-appealing defendants as respondents.^{4b} A decree passed by the appellate Court does not, as a matter of course, enure to persons who have not joined in the appeal merely because the lower Court's decree has proceeded on a common ground. The Rule will apply only where the Court consciously decides to apply it.^{4c} The policy of the Rule is, firstly, to give the appellate Court full power to do justice to all parties, whether before it or not, provided the whole case is gone into at the instance of the parties representing all the necessary contentions in the case,⁵ and, secondly, to prevent contradictory decisions in the matter in the same suit.⁶

The Rule does not become inapplicable merely because the non-appealing defendant has, in the meanwhile, obeyed the lower Court's decree,⁷ or because he has separately appealed from the same decree and has failed in his appeal.⁸ But the Rule has no application where there are several suits, the decree in each of which, proceeds on a ground common to the defendants in all the suits,⁹ unless such suits are consolidated.¹⁰ Nor will the Rule apply where the plaintiff who appeals has no locus standi to appeal.¹¹ Where, for a suit under S. 92 of the Code, the consent of the Advocate-General has been given to three persons they all constitute in the eye of the law, one plaintiff and therefore one of them alone cannot appeal so as to make this Rule applicable.¹²

Where a decree is passed against two defendants on a ground common to both and one of them appeals against the decree while the other files cross-objections to the decree, the appellate Court can transpose the latter defendant as an appellant and decide the appeal in his favour¹³

Where there are several respondents before the lower appellate Court any one of them may maintain the second appeal on behalf of all under this Rule but he cannot represent a person who was not a respondent in the lower appellate Court.¹⁴ Nor can a person not a party to the first appeal prefer a second appeal under this rule.^{14a}

The Rule applies also to a cross-appeal by respondents.¹⁵

2 Decree

A decree may be reversed under this Rule in favour of all the defendants even if some of them allowed the decree to be passed ex parte against them, provided the other conditions laid down in the Rule are satisfied¹ But where a decree is passed against some of the defendants on confession of judgment the decree cannot be reversed in their favour under this Rule²

3 Common ground

It is essential for the application of this Rule that the decree appealed from should have proceeded on a ground common to all the plaintiffs or defendants. Otherwise the appellate Court has no jurisdiction to reverse or vary the entire decree except on the appeal of all the plaintiffs or defendants¹. Further the Rule does not apply unless the lower Court's decree proceeds on a common ground and not where the appellate Court wishes to proceed on a common ground and reverse or vary the lower Court's decree in favour of all the parties². It is not necessary that all the grounds upon which the lower Court proceeds should be common to all the parties. It is enough if it proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or defendants². It is not also necessary that all the defendants should claim an interest in the property affected by the decree³. The Rule will apply when the defendants put forward a common defence as against the plaintiff although they dispute each other's rights⁴.

In applying this Rule, the Court is entitled to consider the ground or finding upon which the judgment or decision is based, and not merely the operative portion of the decree⁵.

4 Ground common to all the plaintiffs

Where there are several plaintiffs and the suit is dismissed on a ground common to all of them the appellate Court may reverse the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs although only some of them have appealed¹. A and B the alleged reversioners of one F sued X for possession. The suit was dismissed as time-barred. A alone appealed and the appellate Court came to the conclusion that the suit was not time-barred. The appellate Court reversed the decree in favour of B also although he had not joined in the appeal, inasmuch as the lower Court's decree proceeded on

5 Ground common to all the defendants

Under this Rule, where a decree is passed against several defendants and the decree proceeds on any ground common to all the defendants, it is open to any of them to appeal from the whole decree and on such appeal the appellate Court can reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the defendants¹ A mortgaged certain properties to X and sold the same to B on 5-3-1925 On 10-3-1925, A paid X the whole of the interest due up to that date and it was arranged that the principal should be paid by 16-10-1925, failing which further interest would accrue from 10-3-1925 till payment On 16-3-1925, B tendered to X a certain sum as the principal amount due on the mortgage On X refusing to receive the same, B deposited the amount in Court under S 84 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 on 22-10-1925 X thereafter filed a suit against A and B for the interest accrued due from 10-3-1925 to 22-10-1925 on the ground that no valid tender was made on 16-3-1925 A and B contested the suit on the ground that the tender was a valid one The trial Court passed a decree against both A and B overruling their plea B alone appealed against the decree It was held that the ground on which the decree of the lower Court proceeded, viz, that there was no valid tender being common to both A and B, the appellate Court could under this Rule reverse the decree against A also though he had not joined in the appeal²

10 Court fee

Where one of several appellants takes a ground of appeal which goes to the root of the respondent's case so that if the ground succeeds the entire decree will be reversed and not merely that portion of it which concerns the particular appellant the appellant must pay the Court fee sufficient to cover the whole relief obtainable on such a ground¹. The entire decree can be reversed in an appeal by some of the defendants under this Rule though one of them appealing as to costs alone engrosses his appeal with only a stamp to cover the amount of costs².

This Rule does not apply to applications for review¹.

12 Revision

Where in a case coming under this Rule the appellate Court refuses to reverse a decree in favour of non appealing parties while reversing it in favour of the appellants on the ground that it has no power to do so its decree can be set aside in revision as it amounts to a failure to exercise jurisdiction¹.

The power of the High Court in revision under S. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is not less wide than under this Rule².

6 May reverse the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants

The word may in the Rule shows that the exercise of the power under this rule is discretionary, and that the Court is not bound to exercise it.¹

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this Rule applies to cases where one of the plaintiffs or defendants appeals without impleading the other plaintiffs or defendants as parties to the appeal. The High Court of Calcutta has held that it does,² while the Lahore High Court and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Peshawar hold that it does not.³ Opinion in the High Court of Allahabad is conflicting, some cases holding that it does⁴ and some, that it does not.⁵ It is submitted that the Calcutta view is correct.

The Court may under this Rule, reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants as the case may be. It does not enable a decree to be passed against a person. Such a decree may be passed under R. 33 infra if the person against whom the decree is varied or reversed has been impleaded as a party to the appeal.⁶ The reason is that it is a fundamental rule of law that no order can be passed against a person without his being given an opportunity of showing cause against it. It has however been held by the High Court of Bombay in the undermentioned case⁷ that where A and B obtain a decree against C for a part of the claim made in the suit, and in an appeal by B for the portion of the claim disallowed C filed cross-objections against the portion decreed, and the appellate Court dismissed the claim in toto, A was bound by the decision, notwithstanding he was not a party to the appeal, inasmuch as B's appeal was on behalf of A also. See also Note 13 to O. 41, R. 22 and Note 9 to O. 41, R. 33, infra.

Where a suit is partly decreed and partly dismissed and in an appeal by the plaintiff against the part dismissed, no cross-objections are filed against the part decreed, the appellate Court cannot interfere with such portion. This Rule has no application to such a case.⁸ Where a decree is passed against A and B, and B alone appeals from the decree, the appellate Court cannot while setting aside the decree against B pass a new decree against A.⁹

Where the appellate Court exonerates a particular defendant from the lower Court's decree and that defendant's interest is separable from that of the others, the appellate decree does not enure to the benefit of the latter.¹⁰

8 Death of one of several appellants in a case where the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all of them

See O. 22, Rr. 2, 3, 4 and 11, ante. The provisions of O. 22 apply also to appeals, (Vide O. 22, R. 11). Hence, on the death of one of several appellants, if the right of appeal survives to the surviving appellants alone, the appeal may be proceeded with by the latter.¹ Where the right of appeal does not survive to the surviving appellant alone the appeal will abate so far as the deceased appellant is concerned if his legal representatives are not brought on the record within the prescribed period of limitation.

If the case is of such a nature that it cannot be disposed of in the absence of the legal representatives of the deceased the whole appeal will abate. But if the lower Court's decree proceeds on a ground common to the deceased as well as to the survivors then the latter can under this Rule appeal from the whole decree and the absence of the legal representatives of the deceased is no bar to the disposal of the appeal. Hence in such a case if the legal representatives are not substituted within the period of limitation the appeal abates only so far as the deceased is concerned and not as a whole² and if the appeal succeeds the appellate decree or order enures to the benefit of all the appellants including the deceased³.

Where one of several respondents dies and his legal representatives are not brought on the record within the period of limitation and the right of appeal does not survive against the surviving respondents alone, the appeal will abate against him. See O 22, R 4. But if the presence of the legal representatives of the deceased is essential for the determination of the appeal the entire appeal will abate and must fail by reason of defect of parties. This Rule does not apply to such a case so as to prevent the abatement of the appeal as the Rule applies only to appellants and not respondents to an appeal.⁴

The death of an unnecessary party does not affect the validity of a decree passed in the absence of his legal representatives.⁵

9 Application for execution by non appealing parties and the limitation therefor

When a decree is appealed from, limitation for an application for its execution runs from the date of the appellate decree, [see Limitation Act, Art 182 Cl (2)]. Where there are several plaintiffs or defendants and the appellate Court reverses or modifies the lower Court's decree on the appeal of some of the plaintiffs or defendants under this Rule, time for execution runs from the appellate decree even as regards the non-appealing parties. But where this Rule does not apply to the case the appeal does not postpone the starting of limitation for an application for execution by the non appealing parties.

10 Court fee

Where one of several appellants takes a ground of appeal which goes to the root of the respondent's case so that if the ground succeeds the entire decree will be reversed and not merely that portion of it which concerns the particular appellant the appellant must pay the Court fee sufficient to cover the whole relief obtainable on such a ground¹. The entire decree can be reversed in an appeal by some of the defendants under this Rule though one of them appealing as to costs alone engrosses his appeal with only a stamp to cover the amount of costs².

11 Review

This Rule does not apply to applications for review¹.

12 Revision

Where in a case coming under this Rule the appellate Court refuses to reverse a decree in favour of non appealing parties while reversing it in favour of the appellants on the ground that it has no power to do so the decree can be set aside in revision as it amounts to a failure to exercise jurisdiction¹.

The power of the High Court in revision under S. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is not less wide than under this Rule².

1 Legislative changes

(1) The word "an appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the appellate Court may order" rule (1) the new and have been added to make it clear that proceedings under a decree shall mean execution of the decree can be stayed by the appellate Court.

(2) Section 141 (1) It expressly authorises the Court to grant an order of stay of execution of the main application for stay of execution.

2 Scope and object of the Rule

This Rule provides for—

(1) A stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from and

(2) A stay of execution of such decree or order

After an appeal has been filed the appellate Court may, on application for stay is made to the appellate Court, it can grant a stay of execution of the decree whether an application to execute it has been made or not provided the conditions of sub-rule 3 are satisfied in Bhagat

5, is filed from an appealable decree, the Court which passed the decree may order the execution to be stayed but not of other proceedings under the decree. Nor, in such a case has the appellate Court any jurisdiction to order the stay of execution of the decree."

The object of the Rule is to see that the ultimately successful party gets not merely a barren success but is able to reap the fruits of his success.³ At the same time the decree-holder's right to reap the fruits of his decree should not be lightly interfered with.⁴ This Rule combines these two principles and, while it provides for the execution of a decree being stayed pending an appeal, it restricts the circumstances under which such stay may be granted.

The Rule applies to all decrees including decrees relating to moveable as well as immoveable property⁵ and to decrees for the restitution of conjugal rights.⁶ But it does not enable the High Court to stay proceedings in a Court not subordinate to it.⁷

This Rule is not exhaustive of all the circumstances in which a stay of execution can be granted under the Code. Thus—

- (1) Under O 20, R 11 the Court which passed the decree can postpone the payment of the amount decreed.⁸
 - (2) Under O 21, R 26 the Court to which a decree has been transferred for execution can stay execution under the circumstances mentioned therein.
 - (3) Under O 21 R 29 where a suit by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder is pending execution of the decree may be stayed.
 - (4) Under R 6 sub-rule (2), infra, the sale of immoveable property in execution of the decree appealed from may be stayed.
 - (5) Under O 45, R 13 the execution of a decree against which an appeal is preferred to the Privy Council can be stayed.
 - (6) In cases not covered by any of the said provisions a sale or execution can be stayed under the Court's inherent powers.⁹
- See also Note 2 to S 151 under the heading Stay of execution and other proceedings.

3 Rule does not apply where decree has been executed

The Rule does not apply where a decree has already been executed.¹ But, where a respondent prevented an order for stay of execution being passed by representing to the Court that there was no application for execution, and immediately afterwards applied for execution in the lower Court and obtained a delivery of possession, it was held that the respondent was

3a Rule applies only when decree under appeal is capable of execution

This Rule will apply only when the decree under appeal is capable of execution.¹ Thus, where an appeal is filed against an order overruling the objections of the judgment-debtor to the execution of the decree and the appellant applies for stay of sale this Rule has no application.² But the Court has power to stay the sale under its inherent powers apart from the provisions of this Rule.

4 Stay of proceedings

The mere filing of an appeal does not suspend the operation of a decree and is no bar to proceedings being taken under the decree except so far as the appellate Court orders otherwise.¹ Under the old Code there was no express provision for staying proceedings under the lower Court's decree, other than execution proceedings.² It was, however, held that the appellate Court could, under its inherent power, stay such proceedings.³ The present rule now expressly authorises the appellate Court not only to stay the execution of the decree, but to stay proceedings under the decree as well.⁴ Thus in an appeal from an order directing the issue of a probate of a will, the appellate Court can pass an order staying the issue of probate.⁵ In an appeal against an order appointing a receiver, the appellate Court can pass an order directing the receiver not to act till further orders.⁶ In an appeal from a preliminary decree in a partition suit⁷ or in a mortgage suit⁸ further proceedings can be stayed under this Rule. Similarly, in an appeal from a preliminary decree in a suit for accounts an order can be made staying enquiry into the accounts pending the appeal⁹ though as a general rule no such stay will be allowed, unless ir-

The High Court can under this rule read with S. 47, sub S. (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act suspend a sentence of imprisonment passed under that Act pending the disposal of the appeal from such sentence.¹¹

A proceeding for restitution on a decree being varied or reversed is not a proceeding under the decree within the meaning of this Rule and cannot be stayed.¹² But an application for possession is a proceeding under the order confirming a sale and the appellate Court can under this rule, order the same to be stayed pending appeal by the judgment-debtor against the order confirming the sale.¹³

Where proceedings as distinct from execution of a decree, are stayed by an appellate Court, sub-rule 3 of this rule does not apply as such and therefore the furnishing of security is not compulsory though the Court has a discretion in the matter.¹⁴

The Court can make the payment of interest a condition for staying execution of the decree.¹⁴

5 Stay of execution when may be granted

As has been seen in Note 2 above, an appellate Court has no power before an appeal is filed before it, to order the stay of execution of the decree of the lower Court. It is the Court which passed the decree that can in such a case, stay the execution of the decree.¹ An application for stay of execution of a decree passed on the original side of the High Court in view of an intended appeal must ordinarily be made to the Judge who tried the case.² It is, however, essential for the applicability of sub-rule (2) that the decree, the execution of which is sought to be stayed should be an appealable one, and that the application for stay is made before the expiry of the period of limitation for the appeal.³ Thus if a decree has become final and unappealable the Court has no power to stay the execution thereof in view of a pending application for review.^{3a} The fact that a preliminary decree has been appealed against, does not empower the Court to order the stay of execution of the final decree in the suit from which no appeal is intended to be preferred.^{3b} A Court cannot under this rule order the stay of execution of the decree at the instance of a person not a party to the suit, who claims immovable property liable to be taken under the decree.^{3c}

After an appeal has been filed from a decree it is only the appellate Court that can under this rule, stay the execution thereof, the lower Court has no power to do so,⁴ though it can grant time to the judgment-debtor to enable him to obtain a stay order from the appellate Court.⁵ The appellate Court may grant a stay even where an appeal has been filed in forma pauperis and the application for leave to appeal as a pauper is pending disposal.^{6a} But in order that the appellate Court may exercise its powers under this rule, it is necessary that there should be an appeal pending against the decree the execution of which is sought to be stayed. Thus, where an appeal is filed against an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree, the appellate Court has no power to stay the execution of the decree,⁶ though the original Court can postpone the sale in execution of such decree, under the provisions of O 21, R 69. Similarly, the appellate Court cannot, in an appeal against an order filing an award stay the execution of the decree on the award.⁸ It has been, however, held by the High Court of Bombay in the case cited below,⁹ that, in an appeal from an order refusing to set aside an award, it has inherent power to stay the execution under the award.

Rule 6, sub rule (2), infra, provides that the Court which passed the decree may stay the sale in an execution of the decree. This, however, does not affect the powers of the appellate Court under this rule to stay such sale.¹⁰ Nor does the refusal of a stay under this rule bar an application under R 6.¹¹ A stay may be granted though the decree may have specified a date within which the judgment-debtor should comply with it and such date has passed without the judgment-debtor doing so.¹²

It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that no order staying execution of the decree appealed from can be made when no execution application has been made or is pending before any Court.¹³ It purports to rely upon the undermentioned case of the High Court of Bombay¹⁴ which was a case of a stay of a sale under the section corresponding to R 6, which requires an application for execution to be pending before the lower Court. The said decision of the Lahore High Court cannot be accepted as laying down the correct law.

6 Sufficient cause¹

A stay of execution under this Rule either by the appellate Court or by the Court which passed the decree, can be ordered only on 'sufficient cause' being shown for such stay.¹ A stay will not be granted where the appeal does not raise fairly arguable questions.² The mere fact that the period of limitation for appeal from the decree has not expired is not a sufficient cause for ordering the stay of execution of the decree.³ The fact that the judgment debtor has been constructively guilty of contempt of Court in not having complied with a decree which specified a certain time within which he should have done so does not disentitle him to an order for stay.⁴ See security for the performance of the decree that may be ultimately binding upon him¹ Thus security may be ordered to be given for the restitution of mesne profits which may be ultimately declared due to respondent² A stay order on condition of security being given comes into operation only on security being given³

The Court should not accept any security without inquiring into its sufficiency⁴ The judgment-debtor must be allowed an opportunity to show that the security offered is sufficient⁵ A security, the enforcement of which is likely to lead to litigation should not be accepted⁶

Stay of execution is often granted on condition that the appellant deposits the amount of the security in Court In such cases if the appeal is dismissed the money so deposited is held to the credit of the decree-holder The depositor cannot withdraw it⁷ even if the decree-holder has failed to apply for execution within the prescribed period of limitation⁸ A decree-holder attaching the amount in execution of his decree is not entitled to claim any portion thereof in preference to the decree-holder with reference to whose decree the deposit was made⁹ If the sum so deposited exceeds the sum ultimately awarded to the decree-holder it should be applied towards the payment of the costs¹⁰ Where, however, the judgment-debtor satisfied the decree otherwise, the sum deposited as security should be returned to him¹¹ See also the under-mentioned case¹²

A security bond hypothecating immovable property is chargeable with stamp duty under Art 40 of the Stamp Act, 1899¹³ According to the High Courts of Madras¹⁴ and Rangoon¹⁵ such a bond for a sum exceeding Rs 100 is compulsorily registrable The High Courts of Lahore¹⁶ and Bombay¹⁷ have on the other hand held that it is not

After execution has been stayed on giving security, it is not open to the judgment-debtor to cancel the security bond¹⁸ though, where it is no longer required the Court may cancel it¹⁹

14 When respondent is insolvent

Where the respondent decree-holder was an insolvent and the appellant judgment-debtor applied for stay of execution as to costs, he was ordered to pay the costs to the respondent's solicitor on his personal undertaking that he would return the amount, if the appellant succeeded in the appeal ¹

15 Insolvency of appellant and deposit

Where execution is stayed on the appellant depositing in Court the decretal amount and the appellant is thereafter declared an insolvent, the amount deposited in Court is payable, on the appeal being dismissed, to the decree holder and not to the Official Assignee ¹

16 Effect of stay order

The jurisdiction of a Court to deal with further proceedings under the decree ceases when the appellate Court stays such proceedings, and an order passed while the stay order is in force is without jurisdiction ¹ Where the stay order is conditional on security being given it does not come into operation till such security is given and does not affect the validity of a sale held after the order for stay and before the giving of the security ² Where an order for stay is set aside on the ground of fraud the effect is, as if the stay had never been ordered at all. Therefore a sale held while the order was in force, is valid ³ The appointment of a receiver does not operate as a stay of execution ⁴

17 Effect of uncommunicated order staying execution

There is a conflict of decisions on the question whether execution proceedings held by a Court after passing of an order for stay, but before the communication thereof to the Court, are valid. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that an order for stay of execution takes effect as soon as it is passed and not after it has reached the executing Court, and that therefore, a sale held after an order for stay has been passed but before it reaches the execution Court is invalid ¹ According to the Madras High Court an order for

5, stay of execution operates only from the time it is communicated to the executing Court and hence a sale held before such communication, is not invalid.² A similar view has been taken by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court.³ But an opinion was expressed therein that if the decree-holder himself was the purchaser the sale would not be valid as he takes the property subject to all orders made in the suit. The Bombay High Court has held that it is difficult to lay down a principle as to the moment of operativeness of the stay order. According to that High Court a great deal depends on the nature of the order, the question of good faith and other facts.⁴ According to the Lahore High Court a sale held before the stay order reaches the auctioneer is valid.⁵ The High Court of Hongkong has held that such a sale is illegal.⁶

18 Costs of application

It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that in the absence of special circumstances the general rule is that the costs of the application for stay should be costs in the appeal.¹ The High Court of Calcutta has on the other hand held that the order for stay is only an indulgence shown to the appellant and therefore he should be made to pay the costs thereof even though he is successful in his application.²

19 Appeal

The question whether an order granting or refusing stay of execution is appealable or not depends upon the question whether such an order falls within S. 47. As to this see generally Notes 44, 84 and 86 to S. 47 and the undermentioned cases.¹ It was held in the undermentioned case that an order rejecting the security offered and ordering execution to continue is not amounting to a refusal to stay the execution of the decree and is not, therefore, appealable as a decree under S. 47.²

20 Letters Patent Appeal

An order granting or refusing stay of execution is a judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such.¹ An order relating to the sufficiency of the security tendered does not come within the purview of S. 47 of the Code nor is it a judgment within the meaning of

1. The words "or has been taken" have been added in sub-rule (1). See Note 5, infra.
2. The words "for money" which occurred after the words "in execution of a decree" in the third para of the old section (corresponding to sub-rule (2) of the present Rule) have been omitted. Hence, sub-rule (2) applies to all decrees whether they are decrees for the payment of money or not. The decisions under the old section leaving upon the meaning of the expression "decree for money" are only of academic interest now.
3. The words "to the Court which made the order" in sub-rule (2) are new. See Note 9 infra.

2 Scope and applicability of the Rule

In order that this rule may apply it is essential that an appeal should be pending against the decree under execution, and an order should have been made for the execution of the decree. Where therefore, no appeal has been filed against the decree¹ or where no order for execution has been made,² there can be no order for security for restitution under this rule. Where an appeal is only against a part of the decree, an order for security for restitution cannot be passed with reference to the portion not appealed against.³ It is competent for the trial Court as well as the appellate Court to pass an order for security under this rule. There is, however, a distinction between the powers of the two Courts. The Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown, require security, while the appellate Court may for like cause, direct the trial Court to take security. The rule applies only to parties to the suit.⁴

Pending an appeal to the Privy Council the trial Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order for security under this rule. The matter is governed by the provisions of O. 45 and not by this order.⁵

3 Restitution—See S. 144 ante

4 Security.

A surety is not discharged merely by reason of the death of the decree-holder.¹ Where under a decree for redemption, the mortgagor decree-holder deposits the mortgage money in Court and applies for execution of the decree the money so deposited can be accepted as security for restitution under this rule.² Where the holder of a decree for money is willing to give security for restitution, the Court should not ordinarily grant a stay of execution of the decree.³ As to the extent of the liability of the surety, see Note 8 to S. 145 and the cases cited below.⁴

8 Stay of sale of immovable property

Sub-R (2) is a mandatory provision It is, therefore incumbent on the Court to stay the sale of immovable property, on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as it thinks fit¹ An order for stay of sale can be passed even where the sale has already taken place provided it has not been confirmed² The sub rule applies also to sale of immovable property in execution of a mortgage decree³ Where a person has become liable as a surety for the performance of a decree and an order for the execution of such a decree by the sale of immoveable properties is made against him under S 145 ante, he is a judgment debtor within the meaning of this rule and is therefore entitled to apply for stay of execution^{3a}

The expression on such terms as to giving security or otherwise in sub rule 2 of this Rule means that the terms may be either giving security or any other term such as the deposit of the decree amount in the Court ordering the stay The Court has therefore jurisdiction to make it a condition that the stay would be given only on the judgment-debtor depositing the decree amount in Court^{3b}

An order for the stay of sale of immovable property under this rule does not preclude the execution of the decree in other ways, e g by proceed-

9 Petition to stay sale where to be made

The words to the Court which made the order in sub-rule (2), which are new show that an application for stay of sale under that sub-rule should be made to the executing Court and not to the appellate Court ¹ This is in accordance with the following decisions under the old Code ^{2a} But the Madras High Court has held that the appellate Court can direct a stay of sale of immovable property by virtue of its general powers under O 41, R 5 ²

The Court cannot, under this rule stay the sale in execution of a decree passed by another Court in another suit ³

10 Appeal

An order requiring security to be given for restitution is one falling within S 47 and is appealable [See Note 71-A Pt (21) to S 47, ante] An order accepting or refusing to accept security is however, not appealable either as a decree or order under S 47 of the Code ¹

A surety against whom a decree is sought to be executed under S 145 can by virtue of that section appeal from an order made against him in execution proceedings ^{2a}

A judgment debtor to whose instance a sale was stayed cannot subsequently appeal from the stay order even assuming such an order is otherwise appealable ²

Under this rule security for costs can be demanded either before or after the respondent is called upon to appear and answer.² Further, the security may be for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit or of both.³

An order for security for costs can be passed under the rule only against the appellant. No such order can be passed against the respondent.⁴ Nor can the Court demand even from the appellant, security for the entire decree amount. Thus the Court cannot while admitting an appeal under R 11 of this Order issue notice to the respondent conditional on payment by the appellant of the decretal amount plus a sum of Rs 500 as security for the costs of the respondent.⁵

2 To what appeals the Rule applies

This rule applies to appeals from decrees. By S 2, sub-S (2) an order determining any question under S 47 is also a decree. It follows that this rule will apply to appeals from orders under S 47.¹ By virtue of O 43, R 2 infra this rule will apply also to appeals from orders other than those falling under S 47.

3 Appeals in forma pauperis

There is a conflict of opinion as to the applicability of the rule to appeals in forma pauperis. According to the High Court of Madras¹ and Rangoon² and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur³ the rule applies to pauper appeals but the Court should not make an order for security except for very special reasons such as, the appeal being a speculative one and the pauper a mere puppet in the hands of persons well able to find security.⁴ The High Courts of Calcutta⁵ Bombay⁶ and Lahore⁷ have, on the other hand, held that O 41, R 10 does not apply to appeals by paupers.

4 Insolvency appeals

This Rule applies also to an appeal from an order passed by a Judge of the High Court exercising jurisdiction in insolvency under the Presidency

1 Registration of appeal

The registration of an appeal is a purely ministerial act The Court can reject an appeal after it has been registered ¹

A memorandum of appeal which has not been registered is not to be regarded as an appeal that is before the Court, but only as a memorandum of appeal presented to it Therefore the provisions of law as to how an appeal can be dealt with after admission do not apply at the stage before registration of the appeal ²

2 Ex parte admission of appeal—Power to dismiss appeal subsequently on ground of limitation

Where an appeal is presented after the expiry of the period of limitation along with an application to excuse the delay under S 5 of the Limitation Act, the question of excusing the delay ought to be determined at the stage of admission of the appeal after notice to the respondent ¹ Where, however ex parte order is made admitting such an appeal the Court can again go into the question of limitation at the hearing of the appeal and dismiss it if there is no sufficient ground for excusing the delay ² Where a District Judge admits such an appeal ex parte, and the appeal is thereafter transferred to a Subordinate Judge for disposal the latter has power to dismiss the appeal on the ground of limitation ³

3 Second appeal from order of rejection

An order refusing to admit an appeal under this rule and rejecting it is a decree and is open to appeal ¹ See Note 13 to S 2 Sub-S (2), ante

4 Withdrawal of appeal after registration

See also Note 3 to O 23, R 1 Where an appellant applies for leave to withdraw the appeal after notice of hearing has been served on the respondent, the respondent should be given notice of the application He is always entitled to his costs when leave is granted for withdrawal of the appeal ¹

1 Scope and object of the Rule

In Lekha v Bhauna, 1 L R 18 All 101, which was a case under S 549 of the old Code corresponding to this rule, Edge, C J, observed as follows —

The object of that section was to secure the respondent in an appeal from the risk of having to incur further costs which he might never succeed in getting out of the appellant. It was intended under the first paragraph that the Court should have entire discretion in all cases not coming under the second paragraph in making or refusing an order for security for costs. Under the second paragraph which is the proviso to the first, the Court is given no discretion in the matter. In cases falling within that proviso the Court has to follow the mandate of the statute and make an order for security for costs. An order for security for costs having been made under either the first paragraph or the second, it is by the third paragraph of the section enacted that if such security be not furnished within such time as the Court orders the Court shall reject the appeal. There again the Court is given no discretion in the matter.¹

Compare O 25, Rr 1 and 2

Under this rule security for costs can be demanded either before or after the respondent is called upon to appear and answer.² Further, the security may be for the costs of the appeal or of the original suit or of both.³

An order for security for costs can be passed under the rule only against the appellant. No such order can be passed against the respondent.⁴ Nor can the Court demand even from the appellant, security for the entire decree amount. Thus the Court cannot while admitting an appeal under R 11, of this Order issue notice to the respondent conditional on payment by the appellant of the decretal amount plus a sum of Rs 500 as security for the costs of the respondent.⁵

2 To what appeals the Rule applies

This rule applies to appeals from decrees. By S 2, sub-S (2) an order determining any question under S 47 is also a decree. It follows that this rule will apply to appeals from orders under S 47.¹ By virtue of O 43, R 2 infra this rule will apply also to appeals from orders other than those falling under S 47.

3 Appeals in forma pauperis

There is a conflict of opinion as to the applicability of the rule to appeals in forma pauperis. According to the High Court of Madras¹ and Rangoon² and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Nagpur³ the rule applies to pauper appeals but the Court should not make an order for security except for very special reasons such as, the appeal being a speculative one and the pauper, a mere puppet in the hands of persons well able to find security.⁴ The High Courts of Calcutta⁵ Bombay⁶ and Lahore⁷ have, on the other hand, held that O 41, R 10 does not apply to appeals by paupers.

5 Letters Patent Appeals

The rule applies to appeals under Cl 15 of the Letters Patent¹ unless the rules framed by the particular High Court are inconsistent therewith in which case the former will override the latter R 736 of the Bombay High Court which requires an appellant to deposit Rs 500 as security for costs in all cases is not inconsistent with this Rule and an appellant may be called upon under that Rule to furnish any additional security for costs that may be considered proper² Similarly R 354 framed by the Madras High Court is not inconsistent with this Rule³

6 Grounds for demanding security

As has been seen in Note 1 above the Court has in cases coming under the first paragraph of sub rule (1), a discretion in the matter of demanding security for costs But in view of the fact that the Rule tends to restrict a party's right of appeal, it should be applied with great caution¹ and very satisfactory grounds should be shown before making an order for security under this Rule² The discretion is not an arbitrary one but must be exercised in accordance with sound judicial principles³ The appellate Court may well be guided in exercise of such discretion by the provisions of O 25 R 1⁴ The following have been held not to be sufficient grounds for making an order for security under this Rule —

- (1) The mere fact that the appellant may lose and may not pay the costs of the appeal⁵ or that the appellant is an undischarged insolvent⁶ or is a poor man from whom, if the appeal fails it would be difficult to recover costs of the appeal⁷ It was never intended by the Legislature in enacting this rule to derogate from the right of appeal given by law to every person who is defeated in the Court of first instance⁸

- (2) The mere fact that a third person has incited the appeal⁹ or that the appellant has parted with a portion of his interest in the subject-matter of the suit for the purpose of obtaining funds for the carrying on of the litigation¹⁰ or that a relative of the appellant is assisting the appellant financially in the litigation¹¹ or that the appellant has rich relations who can afford to pay the decree amount¹²
- (3) The mere fact that the appellant has not paid the costs of the original suit¹³
- (4) The fact that one of the appellants is a female¹⁴

From the above cases it is clear that mere poverty is no ground for ordering security. But poverty along with other circumstances may justify an order under this Rule¹⁵. Thus where the appellant is proved to be a mere puppet in the hands of others who are promoting the litigation from behind the scenes¹⁶ or where there is evidence of facts which cast doubts on the honesty and bona fides of the appellant, or the appeal is vexatious,¹⁷ the appellant may be ordered to furnish security under this Rule. Where the parties have agreed that security for costs should be given, the Court should pass an order for security under this Rule¹⁸.

Although mere poverty of the appellant is no ground for ordering security for the costs of the appeal it is also on the other hand not a ground for dispensing with security where such security is necessary in the circumstances of the case¹⁹.

Security for costs should not be ordered where the consequences of such an order would be unduly penal²⁰.

costs in the appeal¹ Any delay on his part will be construed as a waiver by him of his right under this rule²

8 Notice to show cause

It is a fundamental principle of law that no order can be passed against a person without giving him an opportunity to be heard in defence Hence, an order for security for costs of an appeal cannot be passed against a person without giving him notice to show cause why such an order should not be made¹ A mere notice to show cause does not amount to a demand and if the order for security is passed in his absence, he cannot be held to have failed to comply with the order if it was not communicated to him²

9 Amount of security

An order under this Rule may direct specified amount to be paid into Court as security for costs¹ It is, however, not necessary in all cases to specify the sum for which security must be given It is enough if the order directs security to be given for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit or of both² A surety under this Rule is discharged as soon as the appeal is allowed, the liability is not revived merely because the appellate order is reversed by a higher Court³ The Taxing Officer's decision as to the amount for which security should be given is subject to revision by the High Court³

In Bombay, the practice is not to require security proportionate to the estimated costs of appeal but to require generally a security of only Rs 500⁴ See also the undermentioned case⁵

10 Extension of time for furnishing security

The Court may, in its discretion, enlarge the time allowed for furnishing the security ordered¹ and this may be done even though the period originally fixed has expired² (See S 148) But when once an appeal has been rejected for failure to give the security ordered, it is not thereafter open to the Court to extend the time for furnishing security³

As to the circumstances which would justify extension of time it is a matter purely in the discretion of the Court⁴ Thus, when the period fixed expires on a day on which the offices of the Court are closed for business, the security

11 Dismissal of appeal for failure to give security

On appellant's failure to give the security within the period fixed, the Court is bound under sub-R (2) to reject the appeal.¹ A special application by the respondent to have the appeal rejected is not necessary, and he can raise the objection at the hearing of the appeal.² Where the period fixed for giving security expired during the long vacation but the Court office was open during the vacation, it was held that it was not a compliance with the order if the security is given on the reopening day and that the appeal should be rejected.³ Where the security bond furnished was not drawn up in the terms of the Judge's order, it was held that there was a failure to give security and that the appeal should be rejected.⁴ But an appeal should not be rejected merely for a clerical error in the security bond and the error should be allowed to be corrected.⁵ In the undermentioned case⁶ where it was objected that the executant of the security bond had not been duly authorised to execute it on behalf of the appellant, the Privy Council held that the case should have been adjourned till a proper bond was executed and that the appeal should not have been summarily rejected. The appeal should not be rejected if the order for security has been passed without giving notice to the appellant.⁷ (See Note 8 supra) A mere notice to show cause does not amount to a demand for security and where an order for security is passed in the appellant's absence, the order must be communicated to him before he can be held to have failed to comply with it.⁸ Reasonable opportunity should be given to the appellant to furnish the security and where it is not given and the appeal is dismissed for the appellant's failure to comply with the order for security, the High Court can interfere in revision.⁹

Once an appeal is dismissed for failure to give security for costs, the Court cannot afterwards extend the time for giving security.¹⁰

in its discretion, restore an appeal which has been rejected for failure to give security for costs¹ But where the appellant's application for extension of time has been heard and dismissed, on the merits, an application for restoration of the appeal rejected for failure to furnish security will be barred² An order restoring an appeal rejected under sub-R (2) will not bind the respondent if it is made without notice to him³

13 Limitation for application for restoration

It has been held by the Madras High Court that Art 168 of the Limitation Act applies to an application for the restoration of an appeal dismissed for failure to furnish security under this rule¹ Even if Art 168 be held not to apply the application ought to be made within a reasonable time and ordinarily would be too late after thirty days from the date of dismissal²

14 Appeal

An order rejecting an appeal for failure to furnish security for costs is not appealable either as an order under S 104 or as a decree.¹ Nor is such an order covered by Ss 109 and 110 ante so as to be appealable to the Privy Council.² No appeal lies against an order restoring³ or refusing to restore⁴ an appeal rejected under sub-R (2) for failure to give security

Letters Patent Appeal—An order dismissing a petition asking the Court to receive a sum of money as security for the costs of an appeal is a judgment within the meaning of Cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable as such.⁵

15 Stamp and registration

See Arts 15 and 57, Sch I of the Stamp Act, 1899¹ and Art 6, Sch II of the Court Fees Act 1870. In cases where a security bond is compulsorily registrable, it is not necessary to register the bond until the security has been accepted.²

16 Practice

The usual procedure followed when ordering security for costs under this rule is that the respondent first obtains a rule nisi on affidavit as to the facts on which he relies. On the day fixed for hearing, the appellant shows cause and the respondent then replies. The respondent has a right of reply though the appellant has used no affidavit.² If neither party appears on the day fixed

1 Legislative changes

- 1 The words in sub-r (1) after sending for the record if it thinks fit so to do are new This makes it clear that the Court is not bound to send for the record in any case (See Note 3)
- 2 In sub-r (2) the words the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed have been substituted for the words the appeal shall be dismissed for default This makes it clear that when an appeal is dismissed under sub-r (2) the order is merely an order of dismissal for default and not a decree and hence is not appealable [See S 2 sub-s (2)]

2 Scope and object of the Rule

This rule refers to a stage after the memorandum of appeal has been admitted and the appeal has been registered under R 9, ante ¹ It applies also to Letters Patent Appeals where the rules of the High Court do not prohibit its application to them ² But the rule does not apply to the summary dismissal of an appeal under S 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code ³ An order of dismissal for the appellant's failure to make the necessary deposit for printing may be covered by this rule or R 16 ⁴ The procedure of the rule is not applicable to a case where notice of the appeal has been issued to the respondent ^{4a} The rule contemplates the dismissal of an appeal Hence pending an appeal by the defendant the summary dismissal by the appellate Court, of plaintiff's suit as not being properly stamped is irregular ⁵ The rule applies also to proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act III of 1926 but the Board is not bound under that Act to hear any party before rejecting an appeal summarily It applies also to appeals under the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 ⁶

3 After sending for the record

The words in sub-R (1) after sending for the record if it thinks fit so to do are new But even prior to the present Code it was held that it was not obligatory on the appellate Court to send for the record in every case in which it summarily dismissed the appeal ¹ But when the record has been lost and the appeal has been dismissed in consequence, the appeal should be retried when the record is found ²

4 May dismiss the appeal

The discretion given by this rule is a judicial discretion and not an arbitrary discretion ¹ It should be very sparingly used and only in exceptional cases ²

A pre-emption suit was decreed on condition of plaintiff paying the pre-emption money within a month from the decree The plaintiff appealed against the condition but the appeal was dismissed on the ground that the money had not been paid within one month It was held that the suit should not have been dismissed on that ground inasmuch as the condition of payment of money within one month was itself the subject of appeal ³ Where the High

Court in dismissing under this rule, an appeal from an order of remand, reframed a certain issue it was held that the procedure adopted, though irregular, was not ultra vires ⁴

If an appeal is severable, it is open to the judge hearing the appeal under this rule to dismiss it in part and admit it in part, just as at the final hearing the Court may dismiss the appeal in part and allow it in part ⁵. But it is not open to the Court to admit the appeal and at the same time to restrict the grounds on which the appeal should be heard. See Note 17 infra

5 Notice to appellant

An appeal should not be dismissed under this rule unless notice of the day of hearing has been given to the appellant or his pleader ¹. The mere fact that the appellant on the day of filing the appeal may say that he does not intend to appear at the preliminary hearing, is no justification for the failure to give notice ².

6 Judgment if should be written - See O 41, R 31 Note 9

7 Time barred appeal

An appeal cannot be rejected on the ground of limitation at the time of admission, without fixing a date for hearing the appellant. If the Judge thinks that the appeal is too late, he should admit the appeal if it is otherwise valid, and fix a date for hearing the appellant on the question of limitation under R 11 before issuing notice to the respondent ¹. The rejection of an appeal under R 11 as being time barred is equivalent to a dismissal thereof and such an order is appealable ².

8 Order of dismissal if a decree

The dismissal of an appeal under this rule is a decree ¹ and appealable as such ² even if a formal judgment is not written under the provisions of R 31, infra.

9 Effect of dismissal—Amendment of decree

The dismissal of an appeal under this rule amounts to a decree which supersedes the decree of the lower Court. Hence after the dismissal, the decree can be amended only by the appellate Court and not by the lower Court ¹. The Bombay High Court has, however, held that the dismissal of an appeal under this rule leaves untouched the decree appealed from and the lower Court alone

11 Dismissal for default under Sub R (2)

If the appellant or his pleader does not appear when the appeal is called on for hearing, the appeal may be dismissed for default¹ But when no notice of the date fixed for hearing has been given to the appellant the appeal cannot be dismissed for default under sub-R (2)² A dismissal for default implies the absence of the party or his pleader—so where the pleader of the appellant is present but is unable through a physical disability to argue the case, and the appeal is dismissed, such dismissal is not for default³ Where an appeal is dismissed for default, it is the lower Court's decree that is the executable decree in the case⁴

12 Re admission of appeal dismissed for default

Under R 19, infra, an appeal dismissed for default under this rule may be re admitted See R 19, infra

13 Review

The dismissal of an appeal under sub R 1 precludes the lower Court from entertaining an application for review of the decree because it cannot be said in such a case that no appeal was preferred within the meaning of S 114 and O 47, R 1¹

But it is open to the appellate Court to review its order dismissing an appeal under sub-R (1), and it is not necessary to send notice to the respondent before doing so² An order granting a review of such an order of dismissal without notice to the respondent cannot be questioned by a different bench from that which granted the review³ When the dismissal of an appeal is set aside on review, the hearing of the appeal cannot be restricted to the grounds on which review was asked for⁴ Conversely the grounds urged in the application for review which were not raised in the original memorandum of appeal, cannot be argued at the hearing of the appeal after its restoration on review⁵ The summary rejection of an appeal as being time barred without fixing a date for hearing the appellant is in contravention of the law and forms a good ground for review⁶

When a second appeal is dismissed under R 11 (1) no application is maintainable for review of the order on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter as the High Court in second appeal is bound by the

A Court cannot on admission of an appeal under R 11, restrict the grounds on which the appeal is to be heard finally and any such restrictive order is ultra vires ¹ Where an appeal summarily dismissed under R 11 is restored on review the appellant is not confined at the hearing of the appeal to the grounds taken by him in his application for review ²

The High Court has concurrent jurisdiction with the District Judge to grant leave to appeal under S 46 of the Insolvent Debtors Act (11 and 12 Vic C 21) and if the District Judge refuses leave to appeal the High Court may grant the same in which the appeal may be taken as admitted and there is no necessity to make a further application under O 41 ¹ There is nothing in the Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907) to interfere with any right of appeal to the Privy Council that might otherwise exist ²

1 Day for hearing appeal.

Care should be taken not only in fixing the original date for the hearing of a case, but in altering the date of hearing so that none of the parties is taken by surprise. But there is nothing illegal in a Judge taking up an appeal on any day he chooses to fix so long as the parties or their pleaders have sufficient notice and no prejudice is caused.¹ When fixing a date for the hearing of the appeal under this rule, the appellate Court is not entitled to restrict the appeal to one or more of the grounds specified in the memorandum of appeal.²

Synopsis

Day for hearing appeal

Note No 1

1 Day for hearing appeal.

Care should be taken not only in fixing the original date for the hearing of a case, but in altering the date of hearing so that none of the parties is taken by surprise. But there is nothing illegal in a Judge taking up an appeal on any day he chooses to fix so long as the parties or their pleaders have sufficient notice and no prejudice is caused.¹ When fixing a date for the hearing of the appeal under this rule, the appellate Court is not entitled to restrict the appeal to one or more of the grounds specified in the memorandum of appeal.²

2 Scope of the Rule

If any part of the record has not been sent up by the lower Court and the appellant wishes to bring it before the appellate Court, he should ask the appellate Court to send for it before the day of trial.¹ When a notice of appeal is sent by the High Court to the Court below with instructions to make a return within a specified time the appellant is entitled to the whole of the

1 Service of notice

An appeal cannot be heard and decided without fixing a date for such hearing or without giving the respondent due notice of such date¹ But failure to give notice to an unnecessary respondent does not vitiate the appeal² It is the duty of the appellant to give the correct address of the respondent The latter is not bound to communicate his address to the Court or to the appellant and his omission to do so is not an abuse of the provisions of the Code³

The service of notice on the respondent should be in the manner provided for the service of summons on a defendant⁴

2 Dismissal of appeal after return of notices as not served

Under O 9, R 5, if a summons is returned unserved and the plaintiff does not apply for fresh summons within three months thereafter, the suit must be dismissed unless within those three months, the plaintiff satisfies the Court that there is a sufficient cause for extending the period for applying for fresh summons. Thus Rule does not apply to appeals. Hence, although the appellant has applied neither for fresh notices nor for extension of time within the time allowable under O 9 R 5, the appeal need not be dismissed and the Court can excuse the delay and order fresh notices to issue¹. Conversely, the appellant cannot claim to be entitled, as of right, to apply for fresh notices within the period allowed under O 9, R 5. If the appellant fails to take out fresh notices within the time ordered by the Court, the appeal can be disposed of under O 17 R 3 notwithstanding that the period allowable under O 9, R 5 has not expired². If after the return of a notice of appeal as not served the appellant makes undue delay in applying for fresh notices the appellate Court may refuse to issue fresh notice³. Where an appeal against a decree for joint possession of land is dismissed as against some of the respondents for failure to serve notice of appeal on them, the appeal cannot proceed even as against the others⁴. See Note 5 to O 9 R 5.

1 Right to begin

The mere fact that the respondent challenges the right of the appellant

16, to appeal does not give the respondent the right to begin¹ In the Calcutta High Court when the appellant's right to appeal is challenged, the practice is to require the respondent at the outset to indicate briefly the grounds upon which his objection is based²

In every appeal the burden is on the appellant to show that the judgment of the lower Court is wrong³ and thus is so notwithstanding the fact that the records of the suit have been destroyed⁴

Where there is a slip in the order in an appeal heard ex parte, the error will be attributed to the appellant⁵ Where an appeal is heard ex parte, it is the duty of the counsel for the appellant to bring to the notice of the Court all the authorities on the point, adverse as well as favourable⁶

2 Respondent's failure to appear on day specified in notice of appeal

A respondent who had not appeared on a date fixed for hearing but on which the appeal was not heard is not precluded from appearing on any subsequent day to which the hearing may stand adjourned¹

3 Shall be heard

An appellant is not entitled to be heard on the merits, if the appeal is liable to be dismissed on a preliminary ground¹ The appellate Court is bound to hear the respondent before determining an appeal unless it dismisses the appeal at once²

The Rule does not compel the Court to permit written arguments to be filed³

4 Hearing counsel of one party in the absence of the other

The Court cannot having regard to the provision contained in sub-rule (2) hear the arguments of the respondent's pleader alone in the absence of the appellant or his pleader and proceed to judgment without giving the latter an opportunity to reply If the Court does so it acts illegally and the judgment is not valid¹

2 Dismissal for default of appearance

Under the old Code where the appellant did not appear when the appeal was called on for hearing the Court was bound to dismiss the appeal. Under the present Rule the Court is not bound to dismiss an appeal for default but may do so.¹ The Rule applies not only to the date originally fixed for hearing the appeal but also to any date to which the hearing may have been

An appeal cannot be dismissed for default, if the appellant is dead at the time because the Orders and Rules dealing with the case of the non-appearance of a suitor are not applicable to the situation which arises when the suitor is dead ²

Applicability of Rule to remanded appeal—The Rule applies also to a remanded appeal, and if the appellant fails to appear on the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal after remand, the appeal may be dismissed for default ³ But where the appellate Court remands a case for further enquiry and fixes a date for the return of the report, it cannot dismiss the appeal in default, before that date for non-appearance of the appellant in the lower Court on the date fixed for the enquiry ⁴ Where, however a case is remanded to the lower appellate Court for disposal that Court is entitled to dismiss the appeal for default if the appellant does not appear before it on the date fixed for the hearing ⁵

4 Dismissal on merits illegal

It was held under the former Code that the appellate Court had no power, in the absence of the appellant or his pleader, to dismiss the appeal on the merits but could only dismiss it for default ¹ In the present Rule, the words the Court may make an order that the appeal be *dismissed*² have been substituted for the words the appeal shall be dismissed for default which occurred in the corresponding section viz, S 556 of the former Code This change in the language of the Rule has given rise to a conflict of decisions as to the power of an appellate Court to dismiss an appeal on the merits, if the appellant does not appear at the time of hearing On the one hand it has

The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, held that the powers of an appellate Court under the present Rule as altered in the new Code are wide enough to include the power to dismiss the appeal on the merits if the appellate Court should think fit to do so.⁶

5 Compromise after dismissal for default

An appeal was dismissed for default of both the parties. Subsequently the appellant applied to the Court for restoring the appeal and pending the disposal of the application both the parties filed a petition of compromise praying for a decree in terms of the compromise. The Court subsequently rejected the application for restoring the appeal. It was held that in the circumstances of the case the Court ought to have restored the case and given effect to the petition of compromise filed.¹

6 Dismissal for default of prosecution

Where the materials essential for the progress of an appeal such as supplying translations of vernacular documents preparation of Bench copies, etc. are wanting owing to the appellant's default the Court can dismiss the appeal for default of prosecution.¹

In the undermentioned case² the High Court of Madras has held that under R 105 of the Madras Appellate Side Rules, the High Court can dismiss a second appeal for failure to translate and print the necessary records. Such an order of dismissal is not ultra vires and does not contravene the provisions of this order.

7 Dismissal for default if affects cross objections—See Notes under O 41 R 22

8 Dismissal for default of appeal from ex parte decree—Application to set aside ex parte decree

The dismissal of an appeal for default is not a decree and therefore, the decree of the Court of first instance is not superseded by or merged in the order of the appellate Court. Hence after an appeal from an ex parte decree has been dismissed for default the first Court can allow an application to set aside the ex parte decree.¹ See Note 11 to O 9, R 13, ante.

9 Effect of dismissal for default

An order dismissing an appeal for default is not a decree and hence the decree of the lower Court is not superseded by or merged in it.¹ See Note 16 to S 2 sub S (2). It will follow from this that the decree to be executed in such a case is the decree of the lower Court.² (see Note 5 to S 38)

It will also follow that an application for amendment of the decree must be made to the lower Court and not to the appellate Court.³ A contrary view has, however, been expressed by the High Court of Madras in the undermentioned case.⁴ It is submitted that the view is not correct. On the dismissal of an appeal for default a fresh appeal from the same decree may be entertained, provided the period of limitation has not expired.⁵

The decision of the lower Court operates as res judicata although the appeal against it has been dismissed, not on the merits, but for default.⁶

10 Notice of date for hearing appeal

The appellant must have due notice of the date of hearing.¹ Where no date has been fixed for the hearing of an appeal the appellate Court has no power to dismiss the appeal for default. (See R 12 infra).² Where an appeal has been remanded for hearing, it is the duty of the parties to apply to the Court to fix a date for the hearing of the appeal or to ascertain from the Court what date has been fixed therefor.³ An appeal may be taken up and disposed of before the appointed day if the pleaders of the parties are present and argue the case without objection.⁴ Notice of the date of hearing must be given to the respondent before the appeal can be decided ex parte. (See R 14 ante).⁵

11 Restoration of appeal dismissed for default See R 19 post

12 Re hearing of appeal decided ex parte—See R 21 below

13 Hearing of appeal ex parte—sub rule (2)

The absence of the respondent on the date fixed for hearing is not by itself a ground for deciding the appeal in appellant's favour. The Court must go into the merits of the case and record a judgment.¹

1 Dismissal for default in depositing cost of notice

This Rule enables the appellate Court to dismiss an appeal only when the process fees for service of notice on the respondent have not been deposited. But it does not warrant the dismissal of an appeal merely because the appellant has not filed the notice required to be filed by the circular orders in the Court for the purpose of issuing process ¹ An appeal is liable to be dismissed for default in depositing the cost of notice although the default was committed by an ignorant business agent of the appellant ²

An order of dismissal cannot be made under this Rule unless the appellate Court has fixed a date by which the cost of notice is to be paid ³

2 Appeal cannot be dismissed before day fixed for hearing

An order of dismissal cannot be made under the Rule before the day fixed for hearing, merely because the appellant has failed to deposit the cost of notice within the time fixed by the Court¹

3 Effect of dismissal of appeal against one of several respondents

Where a decree for joint possession is passed in favour of three respondents, and the appeal from the decree is dismissed as against one of them for failure to serve notice on him the appeal cannot proceed against the other two respondents the reason is that even if the decree is set aside in the appeal against them the entire decree which is a joint one, can be executed by the other respondent so as to nullify the decree of the appellate Court¹

4 Dismissal for failure to supply identifier

The default referred to in the Rule is default in paying the cost of notice before the time fixed. Hence an appeal cannot be dismissed under the Rule on account of the appellant's failure to supply an identifier for identifying the respondent to the process server¹

5 Re admission of appeal dismissed—See R 19 below6 Appeal

No appeal lies against an order under this Rule. The proper remedy is under R 19¹

7 Revision

Before an appellate Court can dismiss an appeal under this Rule it must fix a date by which the process-fees are to be paid. If it does not do so, its order of dismissal can be set aside in revision. Where, however, the appellant fails to pay the process-fees even on the date of the hearing of the appeal and also omits to plead that the non payment was due to the fact that he had not been directed to pay by any fixed date, the order of the appellate Court will not be interfered with in revision¹

1 Scope and applicability of Rule

This rule applies only where an appeal has been dismissed under any of the rules specified therein¹ O 41 R 17 does not apply when the arguments have been heard Hence the dismissal of an appeal in default when the arguments have been heard is not covered by Rule 17 and thus rule does not therefore apply to such a case²

2 Shall re admit the appeal

The expression used in the corresponding section of the former Code, viz S 558 was may re admit the appeal Nevertheless it was held by the Madras High Court under the old Code that the Court was bound to restore the appeal if sufficient cause was established¹ In the present rule legislative effect is given to this view²

3 Sufficient Cause—See Notes to O 9 R 9 ante

When an application is made to restore an appeal dismissed for default the Court should not reject the application summarily, but should give the applicant an opportunity to substantiate his allegations, as to sufficient cause A summary rejection without enquiry is improper¹

4 Court to which application for restoration is to be made

The application must be made to the Court which dismissed the appeal for default ¹

5 Notice

Order 9, R 9 lays down, that notice must be given to the defendant before a suit dismissed for default of plaintiff's appearance is restored. In the undermentioned case¹ it was held by the Allahabad High Court that even if O 9, R 9 be held to apply to appeals by force of S 107 sub-S (2), notice is not necessary for the restoration of an appeal dismissed for default owing to the absence of both the parties. But the propriety of an ex parte order setting aside an order of dismissal for default may be questioned at the hearing of the appeal ² The dismissal of an appeal for failure to pay the deficit Court-fee on the memorandum of appeal is not a dismissal for default. An application for restoration in such a case is not covered by this rule but is an application for review under O 47 and notice to the opposite party is necessary ³

6 Dismissal for failure to deposit cost of paper book or to pay Court fees

This Rule applies, as has been stated in Note 1 above only where the dismissal has been under any of the rules specified therein. Hence the Rule does not apply where an appeal has been dismissed under the High Court rules for failure to deposit the cost of preparing the paper book. The remedy in such a case is not by an application under this rule but an application for review.¹ Similarly, where an appeal is dismissed for failure to pay deficit Court-fees within the time allowed by the Court, the appeal cannot be restored under this rule.²

7 Inherent power to restore appeal dismissed for default — See S 151 Note 28 Other remedy

When an appeal is dismissed for default the applicant may present a fresh appeal provided the period of limitation for an appeal has not expired. He is not confined to his remedy under this rule.¹ An appellant whose appeal has been dismissed for default may also apply for review in a proper case. The Allahabad High Court has held that when the appellant has allowed his remedy under this rule to become time-barred, he cannot come by way of an application for review.² But the Punjab Chief Court has held a contrary view.³

In an application for restoration under this rule the only thing that the Court can consider is whether there was 'sufficient cause' for appellant's default. Questions as to the legality of the order of dismissal can only be raised in an application for review.⁴

An application for restoration of an appeal under this rule is governed by Art. 168 of the Limitation Act¹ and must be filed within 30 days from the date of the dismissal of the appeal.² The Court has no power to enlarge the said period.³ Proceedings taken on an application filed after the period of limitation are invalid.⁴ An application for re-admission made not under

Where the order of dismissal is ultra vires Art. 168 does not apply.⁶ Thus, an appeal cannot be dismissed for default where the appellant is dead. Where an appeal is dismissed for default under such circumstances, the appellant's legal representatives need not apply for restoration within the period of 30 days allowed under Art. 168. The order of dismissal is no bar to the application of the legal representatives to be brought on the record and such an application is governed by Art. 176 of the Limitation Act.⁷ The provisions of S 5 of the Limitation Act⁸ or of S 6 of that Act⁹ do not apply to an application under this rule.

See, however, the amendments of this Rule by the High Court of Madras.

The power to add parties under this rule is to be exercised at the hearing for, it is necessary that before acting under this rule the Court should have before it all the circumstances of the case.¹ The rule does not contemplate the addition of a party after the judgment has been pronounced.²

2. 'Any person who was a party to the suit'

The rule applies only when the proposed party respondent was a party to the suit in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred.¹ On the question whether, apart from R 20, the appellate Court has power to add as respondent to the appeal persons who were not parties to the suit in the Court below, there is a conflict of decisions. According to the High Courts of Calcutta² and Patna³ the appellate Court has such power independently of this Rule to add as respondents to the appeal persons who were not parties to the suit in the Court of first instance. The High Courts of Allahabad,⁴ Bombay⁵ and Lahore⁶ have, on the other hand, held that the appellate Court has no such power. The High Court of Rangoon also seems to be of the same view.⁷ It is submitted that the Calcutta and Patna view is correct. However, there is nothing to prevent the appellate Court, in a proper case, to remand the case to the lower Court with a direction to add the omitted parties.⁸ Further in a case where a person can be added as a respondent to an appeal by virtue of the provisions of O 22, R 10, there is no objection to his being so added though he was not a party to the suit in the lower Court.⁹ Persons who were parties to the suit in the lower Court originally but whose names were struck off before the passing of the decree are nevertheless parties to the suit within the meaning of R 20.¹⁰

The words "any person who was a party to the suit" include the representative of such a party.¹¹ (See also Note 12, below)

Before the Privy Council decision in *Chokalingam v Seethar*¹ there was a conflict of decisions as to the meaning of these words. One set of decisions proceeded upon the view that the fact that the presence of the proposed party respondent before the Court was necessary for the adequate disposal of the appeal or cross objections on the merits was enough for making him a respondent under this Rule. Thus, it was held that where the constitution of an appeal was impeached on the ground that the necessary parties had not been impleaded, the defect could be cured by their being added under this Rule.² Similarly, where in a suit filed by A against B and C, a decree was passed against B but was dismissed against C and B appealed from the decree making A alone a respondent, and the appellate Court finds that C and not B is liable to A, it was held that the appellate Court could make C a respondent to the appeal under this Rule and that, in allowing B's appeal, it can pass a decree against C.³ On the other hand it was held in another set of cases that the Rule was intended to protect parties to the suit who had not been made respondents in the appeal from being prejudiced by modifications made behind their backs in the decree under appeal, and that the party whom it was sought to bring on record must be shown to be interested in the result of the appeal before he is brought on the record. Hence where a defendant had been exonerated in the lower Court and no appeal was filed against him, it was held that he was not interested in the result of the appeal filed against other parties and could not be added as a respondent to such an appeal under this Rule unless it could be shown that the decree that might be passed in the appeal as framed might prejudice his interests in some way or other.⁴ According to this group of cases the mere fact that the presence of a party before the Court is necessary for the disposal of the appeal or cross objections on the merits was not sufficient justification for making him a party respondent under this Rule.

In this state of the authorities it was held by the Privy Council in (1909) 26 Cal 114 (121) Suit decreed in part against several defendants—

*Chokalingam v. Seithai*⁴ that where a defendant had been exonerated in the lower Court and no appeal had been filed against him within the period of limitation, he was not interested in the result of the appeal filed by the plaintiff against other defendants, and that in any event, it was for the plaintiff appellant who sought to make him a respondent to show what was the nature of the interest he had in the appeal. Their Lordships reached this view in spite of the fact that the presence of the proposed party respondent was necessary to enable the Court to decide on their merits certain questions that arose in the appeal. This shows that in their Lordships' view the test for the addition of a party respondent under this Rule was not, whether his presence before the Court was necessary for the adequate disposal of the appeal on its merits, but whether the proposed party is one whose interests are likely to be prejudiced by the determination of the appeal as framed. So interpreted, their Lordships' judgment accords with latter of the two views set forth above. Hence the other view viz., that it is enough for the application of this Rule that the addition of the proposed party is necessary for the adequate disposal of the appeal on the merits should be regarded as no longer good law. It may be noted in this connection that their Lordships' judgment confirmed the judgment of the Rangoon High Court in the undermentioned case⁵ and that in this judgment the Rangoon High Court followed the Madras decision in *Subramanya v. Veerabhadra*⁶ which contains the clearest exposition of the second view referred to above so that the Privy Council may be taken to have adopted this view in preference to the other view.⁷ Some decisions of the High Courts⁸ though pronounced subsequent to the above Privy Council case have adopted the view overruled by the Privy Council and hence must be regarded as not correct. The decisions in the undermentioned cases⁹ accord with the view approved by the Privy Council and may be taken as correctly representing the law on the subject now.

But where a person can be added as a respondent under any other provision of law, his not being interested in the result of the appeal within the meaning of this Rule is no objection to his being so added¹⁰ (See Note 8, infra).

to be exercised in view of all the circumstances of a case¹ Strong grounds are necessary to induce the Court to exercise its discretion in favour of an appellant who has failed to implead any party within the period of limitation.²

It will not be exercised in favour of an appellant where he has deliberately,³ or out of extreme negligence⁴ failed to implead any party. But where he has not been guilty of any neglect the appellate Court may very well exercise its power under this Rule in his favour.⁵

The power under this Rule cannot be exercised so as to negative the provisions of O 22. Hence, where a respondent has died and the appeal has abated as against him owing to his legal representatives not being brought on the record within the period of limitation, the legal representatives cannot be added under this Rule.⁶ Where, however, the legal representative was actually brought on the record in the suit, but was not impleaded in the appeal, he may be added under the provisions of this Rule.⁷ There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this Rule can be applied where a party who is necessary for the very constitution of the appeal is not impleaded in the appeal with the result that the period of limitation for an appeal against him has expired. According to the High Court of Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar the Court has no power to add the non-impleaded party, as a party to the appeal.⁸ The Lahore High Court has held that the Court has such power.⁹ The High

Court of Allahabad¹⁰ and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind¹¹ seem to be of the same view. Where, however, the only person that could be impleaded in the appeal is not impleaded, and there is consequently no valid appeal at all, this Rule will not apply.¹²

The power under the Rule may be exercised by the Court on its own motion or on the application of any party.¹³ If the Court finds the presence of any party not already joined necessary it may direct the appellant to apply for bringing him on the record and if he fails to do so may dismiss the appeal.¹⁴

5 Adding Appellant

The present Rule provides only for the addition of a party as a respondent. On the question whether an appellant can be added or substituted under O 1 R 10 read with S 107 see S 107 Note 16 and O 1 R 10, Note 11.

6 Adding Respondent

An appellate Court can add a person as respondent who in the trial Court, was arrayed on the same side as the appellant.¹

7 Adding party for the purpose of cross objections. See Note 22 to O 41 R 2²

8 Inherent power to add parties

The power of an appellate Court to add party respondent is not confined to cases falling under O 41 R 20. In cases to which this Rule does not apply the appellate Court can under O 1, R 10 read with S 107 or by virtue of its inherent power, add parties respondents to the appeal.¹ Thus where owing to a bona fide mistake caused by a similarity of names of two persons who were parties in the lower Court the names of those persons were left out in the appeal, it was held that the appellate Court had power to correct the mistake and have the memorandum of appeal amended by inserting the proper name.² But the inherent powers of the Court should be invoked only in exceptional circumstances.³

9 Power to pass decree against party—See R 4 ante and R 33 post

10 Effect of non joinder

The principle of O 1, R 9 applies to appeals. No appeal should be made to fail merely on the ground of the non joinder of any party¹ but the Court may deal with the matters in controversy so far as the parties actually 0, before it are concerned. In this connection, reference may be made to the difference between proper parties and necessary parties (Vide Notes under O 1, R 10). If the non-joinder is not of necessary parties, the appeal may proceed with reference to the parties actually before the Court.² But if necessary parties have not been joined, the effect of the non-joinder on the appeal is fatal to the appeal, because in such case there is no proper appeal before the Court at all.³ In such cases, the Court may in its discretion add the necessary parties under this Rule and then proceed with the appeal.⁴ (See Note 4, ante and O 1, R 10).

A person who is not joined as a party to an appeal is not bound by the decree passed in the appeal. But the assignee of a decree is, in the absence of fraud, bound by the decree of the appellate Court though he has not been made a party to the appeal against the decree.⁵

The power of the Court under this Rule is not subject to the provisions of the Limitation Act and a party who is interested in the result of the appeal may be added as a respondent under this Rule though the period of limitation for an appeal by or against him may have expired.¹ The Privy Council decision in *Chokalingam v. Seetha*² does not affect the correctness of this proposition which is accepted as settled Law by all the High Courts. But the powers under this Rule should be exercised very cautiously inasmuch as a person in whose favour the lower Court has passed a decree against which an appeal is not filed within the period of limitation has a substantive right of a valuable kind which should not be lightly treated.³ Where a respondent is added, not under R 20, but under O 1, R 10 read with S 107, the provisions of Limitation Act will apply.⁴ But where a party is added in the exercise of the Court's inherent power to preserve the ends of justice from being defeated, it seems, no limita-

12 Addition of parties in second appeal

The Rule requires that the proposed party respondent must have been a party in the suit in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred. Suppose a person was a party to the suit in the Court of first instance but was not a party in the first appellate Court, has the High Court in second appeal power to make him a respondent? On this question there is a conflict of decisions the Allahabad High Court holding that he cannot be added as a respondent¹ and the High Courts of Calcutta² Lahore,³ Madras⁴ and Patna⁵ the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh⁶ and the Chief Court of Lower Burma holding a contrary view.⁷ It is submitted the Allahabad view is not correct (See Notes 2 and 8 supra and also Note 11 to O 1, R 10).

The High Court in second appeal can remand the case to the lower Court with a direction to it to add fresh parties.⁸

11 Appeal.

An appeal lies under O 43 R 1 (e) from an order refusing an application for re hearing under this rule. 1 Legislative changes

This Rule corresponds to S. 561 of the Code of 1882. The chief changes introduced are—

- 1 The words upon the hearing which occurred after the word may and before the words not only support the decree in sub rule (1) have been omitted. See Note 17 infra
- 2 The words the party who may be affected by such objection have been substituted for the words the appellant in sub rule (3). See Note 13 infra
- 3 Sub-R. (4) is new. See Note 17 infra.

1a Applicability of the Rule

The provisions of this Rule apply also to appeals under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act VI of 1908 from the decisions of the Deputy Commissioner or of a Revenue Officer. As regards the applicability of sub rule (1) to proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act III of 1926, see List II No 16 of the Second Schedule of that Act.

2 Respondent may support decree without filing cross objections

A respondent may support the decree appealed from, not only on any of the grounds decided in his favour¹ but also on grounds decided against him, and for this purpose, it is not necessary for him to file any cross objections.^{1a} There is a conflict of views as to whether this Rule will enable a res-pendent to attack any portion of the decree passed against him so long as he does not ask for a variation of the decree. According to the High Courts of Calcutta,⁷ Madras³ Lahore,⁴ and Rangoon^{4a} and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Nagpur^{4b} the respondent cannot do so. Thus the respondent cannot make out a case for a decree for the same amount by attacking the decree in respect of a right decided against him. The High Court of Patna⁵ and the Judicial Commissioners Court of Oudh⁶ have, on the other hand held, that the expression 'support the decree' does not merely mean support the decision but permits the respondent to show by reference to a ground decided against him, that the appellant has at least secured by the decree as much as, if not more than he is entitled to.

A point taken in the lower Court but not decided by it may be urged in support of the decree under appeal.⁷ But as a general rule a respondent cannot take a point not taken by him in the lower Court.⁸ Similarly, the rule does not apply to a finding which does not affect the point at issue as the respondent cannot support the decree with reference to such a finding.⁹ An appellate Court will not of itself raise a point which the respondent does not raise.^{4c}

3 What objections can be raised by way of cross objections and when

The test to determine whether any particular objection can be taken by way of cross objections under this rule is to see whether if the respondent had appealed against that portion of the decree which is against him he could have raised such objection in his memorandum of appeal. If he could,

As has been seen in Note 3 ante this rule provides that any respondent may take any cross objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal It follows that a person cannot file cross-objections unless he is a respondent to the appeal¹ and unless he could have taken such an objection by way of an appeal²

Does the mere fact that a respondent has filed an appeal against the same decree, preclude him from taking cross-objections against it in the appeal filed by the opposite party? The answer to the question depends upon the further question whether the appeal so filed by the respondent had been

If it had been decided, then he cannot be heard on his cross-objections under this rule.³ He would, in fact, be barred by the principle of res judicata.^{3a} But where his appeal had not been decided on the date of the hearing of the cross-objections, he is entitled to be heard on his objections.⁴ In this view, the decision of the Lahore High Court in the undermentioned case⁵ where it was held broadly that a respondent who has preferred an appeal cannot file cross objections under R 22 seems to state the proposition too widely.

12 Cross objections by pauper respondent

Sub-Rule (5) expressly provides for the filing of cross-objections in forma pauperis.¹ This supersedes the following decisions under the previous Codes.²

13 Against whom cross objections may be filed

The principle that no decree can be passed against a person who is not a party to the proceedings applies to cross objections also and hence cross-objections cannot be allowed against a person who is not a party to the appeal.¹ But in the undermentioned case² where it was impossible to give relief against the appellant without giving relief against the absent party also the Bombay High Court held that the decision on the respondent's cross-objections bound the non-party also as, otherwise in all such cases coming under O 41 R 4 one of several defeated parties can appeal on behalf of all and defeat the respondent's rights under this rule. It is submitted that this decision is not correct. The respondent could have preferred an appeal against all if he was dissatisfied with the decree. Further the appellate Court has power to add parties to the appeal under R 20 above, whenever it considers it necessary to do so, and the difficulty mentioned by the Bombay High Court can thus be obviated (See O 41 R 20 and the notes thereunder and also O 1, R 10 and S 151).

22, 14 Cross objections against co respondent

1 It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad,¹ Bombay,² Calcutta³ and Patna⁴ and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Upper Burma⁵ that as a general rule the right of a respondent to urge cross-objections should be limited to his urging them against the appellants, and it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge cross-objections as against the other respondents, the exception holding good among other cases, in those in which the appeal of some of the parties opens out questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents. Thus when the questions raised by the cross-objections are common both to the appellant and co-respondent the cross-objections may be entertained as against both.⁶ P sues Q and R for Rs 10,000 alleged to be his share of the profits of certain lands. A decree is passed against Q and R for Rs 7,000. Q appeals from the decree making P and R respondents. In such a case, P may prefer cross-objections not only against Q but also against R with reference to the Rs 3,000 in respect of which his claim was dismissed by the lower Court.⁷ Similarly in suits for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, accounts are taken as between all the partners and not as between the plaintiff on the one hand and the defendants on the other. Hence the appeal of one of the partners opens out the whole case and cross-objections can be urged not only against the appellant but also against co-respondents.⁸ According to the High Court of Madras cross-objections may be allowed to be taken against co-respondents in all cases.⁹ Opinion is divided in Lahore, Nagpur and Oudh, some cases favouring the view first mentioned above¹⁰ and others

following the Madras view ¹¹

15 Omission to file cross objections

A party in whose favour a decree has been passed has a substantive right of a valuable kind which should not be lightly interfered with ¹ Hence, as an ordinary rule, in the absence of a cross-appeal or cross-objections by a respondent, the appellate Court has no power to disturb the decree of the lower Court as far as it is in the appellant's favour ² and cannot grant any relief to the respondent except in so far as such relief is incidental to the relief granted to the appellant ³ This Rule, however, is only a general rule and the power of the appellate Court to pass any order or decree that may be necessary in the interests of justice is now expressly saved by O 41, R 33⁴ and was recognised by the following decisions⁵ under the former Code. The general rule mentioned above applies also in cases where the decree of the lower Court is such that a demand by the appellate Court is necessary ^{5a} It follows from 22, what has been said above that the appellate Court cannot as a general rule dispose of the appeal on a point not raised by either party⁶ (See however O 41, R 2) Where, however, the case is such that the respondent could not have filed an appeal or cross-objections, the appellate Court can grant him the necessary relief without any cross-objections. Thus where the suit in first Court was for either of two reliefs in the alternative and the first Court passed a decree granting him one of the reliefs, the plaintiff having got what he asked for, can neither appeal nor file cross-objections. But if on the appeal of the opposite party the appellate Court considers that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief granted by the decree it may, while setting aside the decree of the lower Court, pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff granting him the other relief⁷. Similarly, where the trial Court has not dealt with the respondent's claim to set off at all the absence of cross-objections by the respondent is no bar to the entertainment of the point in appeal⁸.

16 Grounds not raised in cross objections not to be raised at the hearing

The respondent cannot urge at the hearing of the appeal, grounds not set forth in the memorandum of objections, except with the permission of the Court¹ (See O 41, R 2)

17 Effect on cross objections of withdrawal of appeal or its dismissal for default.

S 561 of the former Code provided that a respondent may upon the hearing, take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal if he had filed cross-objections. Hence, it was held that if the appeal was withdrawn before the hearing, the respondent could not prosecute his cross-objections¹ but that once the hearing had commenced the appellant could not withdraw the appeal so as to prevent the respondent from urging his cross-objections². Similarly it was held that if the appeal was dismissed for default the cross-objections could not be heard³. Under the present Rule the words 'upon the hearing' in sub-R 1 have been omitted and sub-R (4) has been added, making it clear that the withdrawal of an appeal⁴ or the dismissal of an appeal for default⁵ does not affect the hearing of the respondent on his cross-objections.

Dismissal of appeal as time-barred—Under the former Code it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the entertainment of the cross-objections was contingent and dependent upon the hearing of the appeal and when the appeal was dismissed as being time-barred the cross objections could not be heard.⁶ The same view has been held under the present Code also by the High Courts of Lahore⁷ and Madras⁸ notwithstanding the omission in sub R (1) of the words upon the hearing which occurred in the former section.

Dismissal of appeal for failure to pay Court fees—Effect—Under the former Code where an appeal was dismissed for failure to pay Court-fees it was held that there being no hearing of the appeal the cross objections could not be heard.⁹ Even under the present Code it has been held by the Lahore¹⁰ and Rangoon¹¹ High Courts and the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court¹ that s. 22 (4) should be interpreted strictly and that on the dismissal of an appeal without a hearing on account of the appellant's failure to pay the requisite Court fees, the cross-objection cannot be heard. But it has been held by the High Court of Madras¹³ that the dismissal of an appeal for failure to pay Court fees is only a dismissal for default and does not affect the maintainability of the cross objections.

Dismissal of appeal for failure to pay Court fees—Effect—Under the former Code it was held by the Patna High Court that the dismissal of an appeal for failure to furnish security for costs is a dismissal for default and the respondent is entitled to have his cross objections heard and disposed of on the merits notwithstanding such dismissal.¹⁴ But the Oudh Court has taken a contrary view.¹⁵

Dismissal of appeal after hearing does not affect cross objections—The respondent is entitled to have his cross-objections heard and disposed of on the merits notwithstanding that the appeal is rejected on the ground that no appeal lies, because in such a case the appeal does not fail for an extraneous reason but fails after hearing.¹⁶ Similarly where an appeal is dismissed for failure to join the necessary parties, after hearing the appeal on the question of non joinder the cross objections may be heard.¹⁷

18 Effect on cross objections of abatement of appeal

Cross-objections cannot be heard when the appeal has abated.¹ The reason is that there is no dismissal for default or withdrawal of the appeal in such a case.

2. 19 Limitation for cross objections

Cross-objections must be filed within one month from the date of the service of notice of the date fixed for hearing the appeal¹ Otherwise they cannot be heard² The appellate Court has no power to hear the appeal before the expiry of this period of one month so as to deprive the respondent of his right of filing cross objections³ Where a respondent in a High Court appeal was merely served with a notice of the appeal in the usual form fixing a period of 25 days for appearance but was not served with any notice fixing the date of hearing, a memorandum of cross objections though filed long after one month from the receipt of the former notice, is not out of time⁴ A transferee from a respondent is bound by the same period of limitation as would have applied to his transferor and cannot file any cross-objections after the expiry of that period⁵ It has been held that the notice referred to in the Rule means only the notice of the original day fixed, and the fact that a subsequent notice is given of a postponed date does not give the respondent a fresh opportunity of filing a memorandum of cross objections⁶

When the period of one month expires on a holiday the cross-objections may be filed on the re-opening day⁷ (See S 4 of the Limitation Act) The appellate Court may, in its discretion, extend the period within which the cross-objections are to be filed,⁸ and this may be done even after the objections have been filed⁹ The extension of time may also be implied from the circumstances of the case¹⁰

Sub-R (1) of this Rule prescribes the period of limitation only for filing cross objections Limitation for filing a cross-appeal is governed by the Limitation Act¹¹

20 Appeal filed out of time may be treated as cross objections

An appeal filed beyond the period of limitation may be treated as cross-objections under this Rule¹

21 Court fee on cross objections

Under S 16 of the Court-fees Act the Court fee payable on a memorandum of cross-objections was the difference between the fee paid on the memorandum of appeal and that payable on it if it included the subject-matter of the cross objections¹ A memorandum of cross objections is now chargeable with Court-fee under Art 1 Sch I of the Court fees Act² That section has now been repealed and even where the appeal wherein the cross-objections are filed falls within the scope of Sch II Art 17 it is only Art 1 Sch 1 that applies to the cross-objections inasmuch as Sch II Art 17 refers only to suits and memoranda of appeals In such cases the valuation placed by the respondent on his cross-objections must be accepted if not unreasonable³

Where the decree is entirely in respondent's favour and he files objections against the findings but supporting the decree the objections are not cross objections and are not liable to stamp duty under Sch I Art 1⁴

Cross-objections as to costs—In *Kamal Kumare v Rangpur Bank*⁵ the Calcutta High Court has held that a memorandum of cross-objections as to costs alone requires to be stamped only as a petition under Sch 2 Art 1 and not ad valorem under Art 1 Sch 1 the reason given being that costs do not form the subject-matter of dispute within the meaning of Art 1 of Sch 1. The Patna High Court has, on the other hand, held that even if the cross-objections are as to costs only an ad valorem Court-fee should be paid⁶

Under the repealed S 16 of the Court-fees Act it was enough if the Court-fee on cross-objections was paid at any time *before the hearing*⁷ But now S 6 of the Court-fees Act applies to the case and the Court fees should be paid at the time of filing the cross objections

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that S 12 of the Court Fees Act does not apply to cross-objections⁸

22. 22 Adding party for purposes of cross objections

It has been seen in the Notes under O 41, R 20 that since the Privy Council decision in Chokkalingam v Seethai, 1927 P C 252, the mere fact that the presence of a party before the Court is necessary for the complete disposal of the appeal or cross-objections is not enough to make him interested in the result of the appeal within the meaning of R 20 unless he stands to be prejudiced by the determination of the appeal as framed behind his back. Hence a party cannot be added as a respondent to an appeal under R 20 merely for the purpose of filing cross-objections against him.¹ As to the Court's power to add parties to an appeal apart from the provisions of R 20 see Notes under R 20. Assuming such power exists, the Court will not direct the addition of a party who is an unnecessary party for the appeal merely for the purpose of enabling a respondent to file cross objections against him.²

23 Second appeal

A decree of an appellate Court disallowing the cross objections of a respondent is a decree passed in appeal within the meaning of S 100 and a second appeal lies therefrom.³ But where the cross-objections are rejected *in limine*² as for instance, on the ground of the respondent's failure to pay the deficit Court-fees within the time ordered,³ the order does not amount to a decree and hence is not subject to a second appeal.

R. 23. [S 562] Where the Court from whose decree an appeal is preferred has disposed of the suit¹ upon a preliminary point² and the decree is reversed⁷ in appeal the Appellate Court may, if it thinks fit by order remand the case,⁸ and may further direct what issue or issues shall be tried in the case⁹ so remanded and shall send a copy of its judgment and order to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, with directions to re-admit the suit under its original number in the register of civil suits, and proceed to determine the suit; and the evidence (if any) recorded during the original trial shall, subject to all just exceptions be evidence during the trial after remand

1 Legislative changes

The words "and the evidence remanded at the end of the Rule" are new. Section 562 was amended by Act VII of 1888 the section only applied where the lower Court had disposed of the suit on a preliminary point so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appears to the appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties. The words were omitted by Act VII of 1888 which also substituted the words "to determine the suit on the merits" for the words "investigate the suit on the merits" which occurred originally.

2 Distinction between Rules 23 and 25

This rule empowers the appellate Court to remand the case only when the lower Court has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point. If the trial Court decides the suit on the merits, it is not open to the appellate Court to order a remand under this rule. It may, however, act under Rr 24 or 25 infra ¹

The following are the points of distinction between Rr 23 and 25,

- (1) Where an order of remand is made under this rule, the whole case goes back for decision to the lower Court (except on the point on which the appellate Court has reversed the finding of the lower Court) Whereas in the case of an order under R 25, the case is retained on the file of the appellate Court and only issues are remitted to the lower Court for findings ^{1a}
- (2) An order of remand under this rule is appealable but not an order under Rule 25
- (3) An order of remand under this rule is a final order which cannot be re-considered by the Court which passed it except on review whereas an order under R 25 is an interlocutory order which it is open to the Court to re consider ²

3 Preliminary point meaning of

A point can be said to be a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule, only where it is such that the decision thereon in a particular way is sufficient to dispose of the whole suit, without the necessity for a decision on the other points in the case ¹ The point may be one of fact or of law ^{1a} Thus a suit will be held to be disposed of on a preliminary point if it is disposed of on any of the following grounds —

- (1) That the suit is barred by res judicata ²
- (2) that the suit is barred by limitation³ or by any other rule of law,⁴
- (3) that the document on which the suit is based is inadmissible in evidence ⁵
- (4) that the plaintiff is estopped from proving his case ⁶

- (5) that the plaintiff has no cause of action,⁷
- (6) that the suit is bad for defect in the description of the defendant,⁸
- (7) that the matter is concluded by a valid award,⁹
- (8) that the case raised at the hearing is different from that raised in the plaint,¹⁰
- (9) that the suit has abated.¹¹

There is a conflict of opinion, however, as to whether the point should be one not relating to the merits of the case. It has been held in one class of cases that a point is not a preliminary point where it relates to the merits of the case, although its decision may dispense with the necessity for a decision on the other points in the case.¹² Thus according to this view a suit cannot be said to have been disposed of on a preliminary point in the following cases —

- (1) Where in a suit for ejectment and damages, the Court finds that the plaintiff has failed to establish the title alleged by him and dismisses the suit ¹³
- (2) Where in a suit for mesne profits, the Court finds that the defendant was not in possession during the period in question and dismisses the suit ¹⁴
- (3) See also the undermentioned cases ¹⁵

According to another class of cases a point may be a preliminary point although it relates to the merits of the case. Thus, according to these decisions a preliminary point means some point either collateral to the merits which precluded their determination altogether, or some particular question which, though relating to the merits, precluded their general determination.¹⁰ Thus, cording to this view, in a suit for damages for breach of contract, the question as to the factum of contract is a preliminary point although it relates to the merit of the case.¹⁷ Similarly, in a suit based on an award, the question of the validity of the award has been held to be a preliminary point.¹⁸ So also the question of the validity of the contract on which the suit is based.¹⁹ See also the following cases for other instances.²⁰

The question whether a point is a preliminary one does not depend on the degree of importance which it may assume during the hearing of the case.¹ Nor is it necessary that the suit should have been dismissed as a result of the finding on the preliminary point. A suit may also be decreed on a preliminary point. Thus where a decree is passed, not after trial on all the issues but on the basis of an award²² or on the consent of the parties²³ or on the basis of a commissioner's report,²⁴ the suit may be said to be disposed of on a preliminary point. See also the undermentioned cases.²⁵

Where the points left undecided in a suit are such that they would have arisen only after the suit is disposed of, it cannot be said to have been decided on a preliminary point.²⁶ Thus in a suit for possession and mesne

23, decided⁴ Hence, where the appellate Court allows an amendment of the plaint⁵ or directs the addition of certain parties⁶ and remands the suit, the remand is not under this rule.

But the mere fact that the Court has recorded evidence on all the issues does not make its decision other than a disposal on a preliminary point if it has, in fact, decided the suit with reference to its finding on a preliminary issue without deciding the other issues in the case⁷

5 Entire suit must have been disposed of on a preliminary point

In order to attract the application of this Rule the entire suit must have been disposed of on a preliminary point and not only a portion of it¹ A sues B for an injunction restraining B from interfering with A's enjoyment of his lands and for a declaration of his right of easement over B's land. The Court decrees the claim for injunction but dismisses the suit so far as the claim for easement is concerned on the ground that, on the face of the plaint, the statement of the easement claimed is so inadequate and unsatisfactory that it is impossible to enter into the question thereby raised. In such a case, only a portion of the suit having been disposed of on a preliminary point, this rule does not apply² Similarly where several questions have been raised and decided, the suit cannot be said to be disposed of on a preliminary point merely because one or more of the issues have not been decided on the merits but have been disposed of on a preliminary point³ Thus in a suit for recovery of arrears of rent and for ejectment from certain plots of lands, one of the questions was as to the amount payable by the plaintiff as the value of improvements effected by the defendant on the plaintiff's land. The trial Court held that the plaintiff should pay Rs 10,000 as decided in a prior litigation between the parties. On appeal the appellate Court held that the prior decision was not res judicata and remanded the case to assess the then value of the improvements. Held that this rule did not apply to the case as the decision of only one of the issues in the case and not of the whole suit was based on a preliminary point.⁴ In this view the undermentioned decision⁵ of the Patna High Court, seems to be open to question. In that case, the lower Court had superseded an award on the ground that it was submitted too late and had disposed of the suit on the merits. In appeal it was held that the suit had been disposed of on a preliminary point, because the result of the lower Court's decision had been that the award had not been considered on the merits.

Where a suit has not been disposed of on a preliminary point in the sense described above, no remand can be made under this rule.⁶ Thus no remand can be made under this rule merely because —

- (1) The lower Court has omitted to decide one or more issues or the appellate Court requires certain additional issues to be tried.⁷
- (2) The lower Court has wrongly rejected certain evidence⁸ or the taking of additional evidence is found to be necessary.⁹
- (3) The lower Court has not recorded the evidence properly.¹⁰

6 Order returning or rejecting plaint whether disposal on preliminary point

It has been held in some cases that an order returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court under O 7, R 10 is not a disposal of the suit on a preliminary point within the meaning of O 41, R 23.¹ Similarly it has been held in some cases that the rejection of a plaint under O 7, R 11 does not amount to a disposal of the suit on a preliminary point.² The rationale of these cases would seem to be that a suit cannot be said to be disposed of when the decision in no way affects the rights of the parties.³ (See S 2 (2) Notes 6 and 13) But in the cases cited below⁴ it has been held that even when a plaint is rejected the suit can be said to be disposed of on a preliminary point. These cases proceed on the ground that as the rejection of the plaint precludes the Court from deciding the point arising in the case, the suit may be regarded as disposed of on a preliminary point.

7 Decision of lower Court must be reversed

No remand can be ordered under this Rule unless the decision of the lower Court on the preliminary point is reversed in appeal.¹ The decision of the lower Court must be definitely reversed. Where such is not the case it is not a good ground for ordering a remand under this Rule that the lower Court has decided the issue on a wrong view as to the burden of proof² or that the appellate Court is not able, on the materials before it, to agree with the findings of the lower Court³ or that the appellate Court considers that the lower Court's finding is not supportable on the ground given by that Court but might be supported on another ground which requires investigation.⁴ But where the finding of the lower Court on a preliminary point is definitely reversed by the appellate Court, the suit may be remanded under this Rule notwithstanding that the decision of the appellate Court is made subject to a finding of fact which is left to be determined by the lower Court.⁵ Where the intention to reverse the decree is clear, the remand is not vitiated by the mere absence of a formal order setting aside the decree.⁶ Where the lower Court has decided the suit on several preliminary points, the appellate Court should reverse the decision on all of them before remanding under this Rule.⁷

Under this Rule it is not competent to the appellate Court to affirm the decision of the lower Court regarding one part of the suit and remand the suit regarding the other part, because, otherwise there would be two final judgments in the same case—a thing opposed to the provisions of the Code and because there is only a partial reversal of the lower Court's decree.⁸ The Rule contemplates that the whole case except as to the preliminary point, is remanded to the lower Court. Hence where the appellate Court not only reverses the decision of the lower Court on the preliminary point but also gives its findings on the other issues in the case excepting one, it should not remand the case under this Rule for the decision of that single issue but may remit it to the lower Court for a finding under R. 25.⁹

8 The appellate Court may, if it thinks fit by order remand the case

These words show that the appellate Court is not bound to remand a suit under R. 23 merely because the circumstances of a case fall within the provisions of the Rule: it may either do so or proceed under R. 24 or R. 25.¹ The question is one of discretion.² The appellate Court should not, however, rashly and without sufficient cause, order a retrial in any case in which this can possibly be avoided, a remand should not thus be made under this Rule in a case which could efficiently be dealt with under R. 25.³

9 And may direct what issue or issues shall be tried in the case

This Rule does not enable the appellate Court, while remanding the suit for trial de novo to direct that one of the essential issues in the case should be omitted ¹ for the Rule contemplates that the whole suit except with reference to the preliminary point should be remanded to the lower Court. But if any limits are imposed by the appellate Court in remanding a case, the lower Court has no power to travel beyond those limits. (See note 30, Point 4.) In an old case decided under the Code of 1859 it was held that an appellate Court cannot remand a case for retrial with instructions to frame new issues ² See also Note 27.

Where the appellate Court set aside the order of the trial Court and re-Court that in cases not falling within the scope of O 41, R 23 an appellate Court to take additional evidence on the issue, it was held that the order was illegal and not one under this Rule ³.

10 Inherent power of remand

It is now settled law in all the High Courts except the Allahabad High Court that in cases not falling within the scope of O 41, R 23 an appellate Court has an inherent power ex debito justitiae to remand a case for retrial ¹ In the Allahabad High Court, the point is unsettled ² Under the previous Code

c / when plaint is ordered to be amended or when new parties are added — But there is no power ex debito justitiae to order remand [See now the amendment by the Allahabad High Court to O 43 R 1 (u)]

there was a sect on, 1/2, S 564 which prohibited the appellate Court from making a remand except as provided by S 562 (O 41, R 23)³ This section was found to be extremely embarrassing in practice as for instance, when the appellate Court felt a remand to be urgently needed in view of the amendment of the plaint or the addition of new parties. The repeal of this section in the present Code leaves the way open for remand in such cases,⁴ although the Legislature has thought it safer not to formally enact that the appellate Court has power, in cases not covered by R 23 to remand⁵

But the inherent power of remand should not be exercised except when it is clearly necessary for the ends of justice to do so⁶ When there is any specific provision of the Code which would meet the necessities of the case⁷ or when the circumstances are such that the appellate Court can itself dispose of the case⁸ (See O 41 Rr 24 to 29) no remand should be ordered. A remand should not generally speaking be ordered when the defect in the proceedings has been due to the negligence or default of the party who asks for remand⁹

23, 11 Grounds of remand

Subject to the general principles stated in Note 10 supra Courts have an inherent power to remand in the following, among other cases:—

- (1) When the appellate Court directs an amendment of the plaint,¹ or the addition of fresh parties.²
- (2) When the appellate Court finds that the suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action. In such a case the appellate Court may remand the case and direct the lower Court to return the plaint for amendment.³
- (3) When the lower Court has dismissed a suit on the ground that the suit has been brought in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff⁴ or defendant.⁵
- (4) When the lower Court has misunderstood the whole case⁶ and when the suit has been disposed of on an erroneous issue.⁷
- (5) When the lower Court has failed to determine material issues in the case.⁸
- (6) Where a suit has been dismissed for default instead of being tried on the merits as it ought to have been.⁹

For other instances, see the following cases¹⁰

12 Wrong onus of proof

Where the trial Court has thrown the burden of proof on the wrong party, the appellate Court may if necessary, remand the case for re-trial¹ But where the error in casting the burden of proof has not affected the evidence produced on either side and both parties have given all the evidence that they had, the question of burden of proof becomes immaterial and no remand can be ordered merely because the lower Court has wrongly cast the onus of proof²

13 Exclusion of evidence

An erroneous exclusion of evidence by the lower Court may be a good ground for remand under the inherent power of the Court¹ Similarly the failure to give a party an opportunity to produce evidence will be a good ground for remand² So also, where the appellate Court is unable, on the materials before it, to decide the case, it may remand the case for re-trial after taking fresh evidence³

14 Basing decision on inadmissible evidence

Where the lower Court's judgment is vitiated by the admission of inadmissible evidence, the case may be remanded for re-trial under the inherent power of the Court¹ But a remand is not necessary if the finding of the lower Court is amply supported by the other evidence in the case²

15 New plea is not a ground of remand

As a general rule, a remand cannot be ordered to enable a new plea raised for the first time in appeal, to be tried¹ (See Notes under O 41, R1 1 and 2) But this may be done in exceptional cases²

was therefore not gone into by the lower Court, the appellate Court, on reversing the decision of the lower Court on the preliminary point, can remand only the application to set aside the ex parte decree and cannot remand the suit itself for re-trial¹ But where the lower Court has refused an application to set aside an ex parte decree on the merits, there is no disposal on a preliminary point and the appellate Court cannot remand the application to the lower Court²

The appellate Court in an appeal from an order rejecting an application for setting aside an ex parte order can treat the appeal as one from the ex parte decree itself and decide the whole case finally³

19 Remand by consent

A case may be remanded with the consent of parties though a remand may not be permissible otherwise¹ Thus a case may be remanded on the agreement of parties for trial on issues not raised in the memorandum of appeal²

20 Remand in second appeal

O 41, R 23 applies also to second appeals (See S 108 and O 42, R 1) Hence, where a first appeal has been disposed of on a preliminary point the High Court may, in second appeal, remand the case if it reverses the decision on the preliminary point¹ or it may itself dispose of the appeal² But even if a case has not been disposed of on a preliminary point the High Court in second appeal may remand the case in the exercise of its inherent power to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated³ (See Note 10,

3. supra) But generally speaking, a case will not be remanded for re-hearing on an issue raised for the first time in second appeal.⁴ Further, unless it is absolutely necessary in the interests of justice, to remand a case, a remand will not be ordered under the inherent power of the Court.⁵ (See Note 10 supra)

Moreover, the powers of the High Court in second appeal are circumscribed by the provisions of S 100, and hence the High Court cannot in second appeal reverse a finding of fact of the lower appellate Court, however erroneous it may be, and cannot remand a case on the basis of such reversal, unless the finding is vitiated by any such illegality or defect as is mentioned in S 100.⁶ It should also be noted that the power of the High Court to decide questions of fact from the materials on record have been considerably extended by S 103 and the amendments to that section made by Act VI of 1926, and the High Court may itself decide such questions where it is in a position to do so satisfactorily from the materials on the record. 21 Appeal against an order of remand under this Rule.

O 43, R 1 (a) gives a right of appeal against an order of remand under this rule if an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court¹. An appeal will, therefore, lie from an order of remand only in those cases in which an appeal would lie against the decree, if the appellate Court, instead of making an order of remand, passed a decree on the strength of the adjudication on which the order of remand was based. The test is whether, in the circumstances, an appeal would lie if the order of remand were itself treated as a decree and not a mere order². Thus no appeal lies against an order of remand in a suit of a small cause nature whose value does not exceed Rs 500,³ as a second appeal would be barred by S 102 if the order of remand were treated as a decree. Similarly, an appeal against an order of remand is only maintainable on a question of law⁴.

Can an order of remand be appealed from after it has been carried out and the lower Court has decided the suit on the merits in accordance with the order of remand? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. The High Courts of Allahabad⁶ and Rangoon,^{6a} the Chief Court of Punjab⁷ and the Judicial Commissioners' Courts of Nagpur⁸ and Oudh⁹ have held that an appeal is not barred under such circumstances and that if the order of remand is set aside in appeal the proceedings based on the order of remand fall to the ground. This view proceeds on the ground that there is nothing in the Code to limit the right of appeal against an order of remand under such circumstances. On the other hand, the Calcutta High Court has held that an appeal against an order of remand must be filed before the lower Court has decided the suit on the merits in accordance with the order of remand.¹⁰ The reason

22 Appeal from order of remand under inherent power

O 43, R 1 (u) gives a right of appeal only against an order of remand under O 41, R 23. Hence, there is no right of appeal against an order of remand under the inherent power of the Court.¹ But the right of appeal under O 43, R 1 (u) is not confined to cases which properly come within the scope of O 41, R 23 but extends also to cases in which the order of remand purports to be under Rule 23 although in reality the circumstances under which the order is passed may not fall within the purview of that rule.²

One of the tests usually relied on for determining whether the order of remand was intended to be made under R 23 is to

One of the tests usually relied on for determining whether the order of remand was intended to be made under R 23 is to

25 Powers of High Court in appeal from order of remand

In an appeal from an order of remand under this rule the High Court may not only consider whether the lower appellate Court's order satisfies the requirements of this rule but may also enter into the merits of the decision of the first Court on the preliminary point¹ and if possible, may dispose of the case itself^{1a}. Similarly, in an appeal from an order of remand purporting to be under Rule 23 (though that rule did not apply to the case), the High Court may enter into the merits of the lower Court's decision in respect of which the order of remand was made² and may either dispose of the case itself or remand it to the lower appellate Court according to the necessities of the case³. But the High Court has no power in an appeal from an order of remand, to go into any questions unconnected with the correctness of the order of remand⁴.

26 To what Court remand could be made

Ordinarily the case should be remanded to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred and to no other Court.¹ But if the appellate Court has power to transfer a case from one Court to another there is nothing illegal in remanding the case to a Court to which the case could have been transferred². But a remand cannot be made to a person who has no jurisdiction to decide the case³ (See also Note 30, infra and S. 24, ante).

28 Effect of improper order of remand

Where an order of remand is passed in circumstances which do not warrant it, the defect involved in the order is one of procedure and not of substantive law and comes within the purview of S 99 of the Code. But the question arises whether such an order is one affecting the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of S 99. On this question there is a conflict of opinion. According to the High Courts of Bombay¹ and Calcutta² such an order is not one passed without jurisdiction and hence, does not, in itself, affect the jurisdiction of the Court and neither the order of remand nor the subsequent proceedings based thereon can be interfered with unless the decision of the case on the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court in any other respect has been affected. But according to the High Courts of Allahabad,³ Madras⁴ and Patna^{4a} such an order of remand is one made without jurisdiction, the term 'jurisdiction' being understood not in the sense of the power to deal with a certain matter but in the sense of the power to pass a given kind of order in such matter, and therefore the order of remand and the subsequent proceedings based thereon may be set aside although the decision of the case on the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court in any other respect has not been affected.

If an appellate Court passes an order of remand in a matter over which it has no jurisdiction, the order is *ultra vires*⁵

As to the effect of setting aside an order of remand, see the following cases⁶

29 Matters decided by order of remand finally of

Section 105, sub section (2) of the present Code provides that if the party aggrieved by an order of remand from which an appeal lies does not appeal therefrom he cannot subsequently question the correctness of the order of remand (See S 105, Note 8 and the following cases¹) But even apart

28 Effect of improper order of remand

Where an order of remand is passed in circumstances which do not warrant it, the defect involved in the order is one of procedure and not of substantive law and comes within the purview of S 99 of the Code. But the question arises whether such an order is one affecting the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of S 99. On this question there is a conflict of opinion. According to the High Courts of Bombay¹ and Calcutta² such an order is not one passed without jurisdiction and hence, does not, in itself, affect the jurisdiction of the Court and neither the order of remand nor the subsequent proceedings based thereon can be interfered with unless the decision of the case on the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court in any other respect has been affected. But according to the High Courts of Allahabad,³ Madras⁴ and Patna⁵ such an order of remand is one made without jurisdiction, the term 'jurisdiction' being understood not in the sense of the power to deal with a certain matter but in the sense of the power to pass a given kind of order in such matter and therefore the order of remand and the subsequent proceedings based thereon may be set aside although the decision of the case on the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court in any other respect has not been affected.

If an appellate Court passes an order of remand in a matter over which it has no jurisdiction the order is *ultra vires*⁵

As to the effect of setting aside an order of remand see the following cases⁶

29 Matters decided by order of remand finality of

Section 105 sub section (2) of the present Code provides that if the party aggrieved by an order of remand from which an appeal lies does not appeal therefrom he cannot subsequently question the correctness of the order of remand (See S 105, Note 8 and the following cases¹) But even apart from the said provisions an order of remand under this Rule as contrasted with an order remitting issues for findings under R 25, is, as regards the Court passing the order, conclusive on all points decided thereby and they cannot be re-opened in that Court before the same judge or his successor, in appeal from the decision of the lower Court on remand² Nor can the Court to which the case is remanded go behind the order of remand³

The High Court of Allahabad has, however, held in the undermentioned case^{3a} that notwithstanding the fact that an order of remand if not appealed against, the Court is bound to take notice of a subsequent event which renders the order of remand nugatory. Thus where a Revenue Court dismisses the suit on the ground that the plaintiff has no title to the property and the District Judge remands the suit in appeal under this Rule, and the trial Court, after remand, decrees the suit but before the hearing of the appeal after remand, the defendant obtains a declaration from the civil Court that he was the owner, it has been held, that the Court is bound to take notice of the Civil Court's decree and act accordingly.

Remand under inherent power—An order of remand under the inherent power of the Court is not appealable. Hence the question arises whether such an order is revisable under S 115. On this question there is a conflict of opinion. According to some decisions a revision does not lie in such case.³ But according to other decisions a revision is maintainable.⁴

A revision will lie in the following cases—

- (a) Where an appellate Court entertains an appeal from an unappealable order and remands the case.⁵
- (b) Where an appellate Court remands a case to a Court which is not competent to try it.⁶
- (c) Where an appellate Court remands a case to the lower Court directing it to return the plaint under O 7, R 10 in a case where the lower Court has jurisdiction to try the suit.⁷

1 Scope of the Rule

This Rule enables the appellate Court to dispose of a case finally without a remand if the evidence on the record is sufficient for the purpose¹ notwithstanding that the appellate Court proceeds on a ground entirely different from that on which the lower Court proceeded. Prior to Act, VII of 1888 the word 'shall' occurred after the words "the appellate Court" and so it was held that the appellate Court was bound to decide the case itself in the circumstances mentioned in the Rule.² The word 'shall' has now been replaced by the word "may" and the appellate Court may now, if necessary, remand a case under the present Code notwithstanding that the decision of the lower Court has not resulted in the exclusion of any material evidence.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether an appellate Court can, under this Rule, decide a case without a remand on an issue not raised in the Court below. According to the High Court of Calcutta, the framing of a new issue is not a 'resettling' of the issues, and the appellate Court cannot, under this Rule frame such issue and decide it.³ The High Court of Bombay, has on the other hand, held that though the point was raised for the first time in appeal, a remand was not necessary where it could be decided on the evidence on the record.⁴ It is submitted that the latter view is correct. There is no reason why the framing of a new issue should be regarded as necessarily different from 'resettling' issues within the meaning of this Rule. The true view appears to be that when a new case is pleaded in the appellate Court, it will not act under this Rule unless the case arises on the facts stated in the pleadings and the opposite party is not taken by surprise.⁵

In an appeal against an order returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the appellate Court, cannot decide the suit on the merits under this Rule: the reason is that such a decision would be outside the scope of the appeal the same not being against the decree in the suit.⁶

This Rule enables the appellate Court to dispose of a case finally without a remand if the evidence on the record is sufficient for the purpose¹ notwithstanding that the appellate Court proceeds on a ground entirely different from that on which the lower Court proceeded. Prior to Act, VII of 1888 the word 'shall' occurred after the words 'the appellate Court' and so it was held that the appellate Court was bound to decide the case itself in the circumstances mentioned in the Rule². The word 'shall' has now been replaced by the word 'may' and the appellate Court may now, if necessary, remand a case under the present Code notwithstanding that the decision of the lower Court has not resulted³ in the exclusion of any material evidence.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether an appellate Court can, under this Rule, decide a case without a remand on an issue not raised in the Court below. According to the High Court of Calcutta, the framing of a new issue is not a resettling of the issues, and the appellate Court cannot, under this Rule, frame such issue and decide it⁴. The High Court of Bombay, has on the other hand, held that though the point was raised for the first time in appeal, a remand was not necessary where it could be decided on the evidence on the record⁵. It is submitted that the latter view is correct. There is no reason why the framing of a new issue should be regarded as necessarily different from 'resettling' issues within the meaning of this Rule. The true view appears to be that when a new case is pleaded in the appellate Court, it will not act under this Rule unless the case arises on the facts stated in the pleadings and the opposite party is not taken by surprise⁶.

In an appeal against an order returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the appellate Court, cannot decide the suit on the merits under this Rule: the reason is that such a decision would be outside the scope of the appeal: the same not being against the decree in the suit⁶.

Where the lower Court has not disposed of the suit on a preliminary point within the meaning of Rule 23 but at the same time has omitted to try any material issues or to determine any material questions of fact it is not competent to the appellate Court to remand the whole case under Rule 23, but it may, if necessary, remit issues for findings under this Rule keeping the case on its own file.² The appellate Court is not precluded from passing an order of remand under the present rule merely because it would have been competent to the Court under the circumstances to remand the case under Rule 23.³

In an appeal from an order under O 7, R 10 returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the appellate Court has no power to remand issues which would have arisen if the lower Court had entertained the suit.⁴

5, to try any issue or to determine any question of fact Hence where the lower Court has not omitted to decide any issue or any question of fact a remand cannot be ordered under this Rule¹ merely for the purpose of enabling a party to produce evidence which ought to have been given in the lower Court² It has however, been held that a remand can be made under this rule where the lower Court has not arrived at its findings after a full and proper trial, inasmuch as, in such a case, the issue cannot be regarded as having been tried by the lower Court³

The omission by a plaintiff to press a certain point is, generally speaking, no ground for refusing to remit an issue on the point, if the lower Court has omitted to frame or try the same⁴

4 Distinction between this Rule and Rule 23—See R 23, Note 2

5 May if necessary frame issues

The appellate Court is not bound to remand issues under this Rule in every case in which the lower Court has failed to frame or decide any issue¹ The question is one for the exercise of the discretion of the Court in each case² Thus, where, in spite of there being no formal issue on a point, it has been tried by the lower Court after giving the parties full opportunity to produce their evidence and present their case on it, a remand under this rule is not necessary,³ especially where the point⁴

Where the lower Court has not disposed of the suit on a preliminary point within the meaning of Rule 23 but at the same time has omitted to try any material issues or to determine any material questions of fact it is not competent to the appellate Court to remand the whole case under Rule 23 but it may, if necessary, remit as lies for findings under this Rule keeping the case on its own file.² The appellate Court is not precluded from passing an order of remand under the present rule merely because it would have been competent to the Court under the circumstances to remand the case under Rule 23.³

In an appeal from an order under O. 7, R. 10 returning a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the appellate Court has no power to remand issues which would have arisen if the lower Court had entertained the suit.⁴

In the undermentioned case⁴ the Court of first instance omitted to try a certain issue. The case went up in appeal before a Court which had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal. The appellate Court, however entertained the appeal and remanded an issue under this rule to the Court of first instance. On the return of the findings, the appeal was returned for presentation to the proper Court. The appeal then came before the proper Court. It was held that though the order of remand was made by a Court which had no jurisdiction to deal with the case, this was not a fatal objection to the result of the enquiry made in pursuance of the order and that the appellate Court which subsequently dealt with the case could take it into consideration^{4a}. It has also been held in the case cited below that where an additional District Judge has remanded the case to a subordinate Judge, the District Judge has power to transfer the proceedings to another subordinate Judge^{4b}. See also the undermentioned case⁵.

8 Powers and duties of Court to which issues are remitted

A Court to which issues are remitted under this rule can only try the issues and has no power to decide the *suit itself*¹ which continues to be pending in the appellate Court². Hence it has no power to refer the case to arbitration³. Nor can such Court delegate its function of deciding the remanded issues to any other Court⁴. But where the High Court has remanded issues to the lower appellate Court for findings the latter can under O 41, R 28 direct the Court of first instance to take further evidence⁵ or appoint a commissioner to examine witnesses under S 75 of the Code⁶.

Re

The Court to which issues are remitted must give its findings on all the issues remitted. It is not open to it to decide only some of the issue and to say that in the view of the law its recording a finding on the other issues is not necessary.⁷ Where it is asked to submit a finding on an issue after recording such evidence as may be produced by the parties it is bound to give an opportunity to both the parties to produce their evidence.⁸ Where the Court to which issues are remitted records its findings ex parte without giving any party such an opportunity to produce his evidence, it may restore the case and allow him to produce his evidence.⁹

After a case is remanded under this rule the lower Court cannot add new parties to the suit¹⁰ but it can bring on record the legal representatives of a deceased appellant.¹¹

As to the interpretation of a remand order see the undermentioned case¹²

9 Remand if open for re consideration by appellate Court after return of findings — See R 26 Note 4 infra

10 New issues raised before the appellate Court

As a general rule a new point not based on the case pleaded or set up by the parties in the lower Court, cannot be raised for the first time in the appellate Court, and a remand cannot be ordered for the decision of such point.¹ But the bar is not an absolute one and the appellate Court can in a proper case, remand issues under this rule, even on points not arising on the pleadings as framed.² But this can be done only in exceptional circumstances, for good cause shown, and on payment of all costs thrown away.³

A remand can be ordered on a point not raised in the memorandum of appeal.⁴

11 Remand in second appeal

The High Court in second appeal can remit issues to the lower Court under this rule.¹ (See also S 103)

Findings and evidence to be put on record Objections to finding

R. 26. [S. 567.] (1) Such evidence and findings shall form part of the record in the suit; and either party may, within a time to be fixed by the Appellate Court,¹ present a memorandum of objections² to any finding.

(2) After the expiration of the period so fixed for presenting such memorandum the Appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal.³

1 Appellate Court to fix time for presenting memo of objections

The appellate Court must fix a time within which objections to the findings returned by the lower Court should be filed¹ But the failure to fix a time is a mere technical irregularity and may be ignored if it does not in any way prejudice the party complaining of the same² Where no time is fixed for filing objections they may be filed at any time before the hearing³ The period for filing objections may be fixed at the time of remitting the issues. It is not necessary that it should be fixed only after the return of the findings⁴

2 Effect of not filing objections

Where no objections to the findings are filed within the time fixed the Court may in its discretion allow or decline to allow the objections to be taken afterwards¹ But this does not mean that the appellate Court can treat the findings received from the lower Court as final and binding merely because objections are not filed in time. The appellate Court must examine the findings on their merits inasmuch as the rule says that after the expiration of the period fixed for filing the objections the appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal² (See O 41 R 31)

Where objections to findings were not taken in the lower appellate Court which remitted the issues, they cannot be raised for the first time as grounds of second appeal³

3 Shall proceed to determine the appeal

At the hearing after the remand, the appellate Court is to determine the appeal on the whole of the material on the record, including the evidence and findings returned by the lower Court under the remand order¹ It is not open to the appellate Court to consider only the findings returned by the lower Court under the remand, and simply confirm the other findings without examining them on the merits² The appellate Court must take into consideration any objections to the findings returned by the lower Court that may be duly filed³ But the absence of any objections is no justification for the appellate Court not examining the findings on their merits (See Note 2 supra)

It has been held in cases under the old Code that the Court which passed the order of remand under this Rule has no power to transfer the case to any other Court for disposal whether before⁴ or after⁵ the return of the findings. It is submitted that under the present Code S 24 is wide enough to enable such transfers to be made

Where the lower Court makes its return without giving its findings on any of the issues the appellate Court can remit the issues again for a proper finding being given⁶

It has been held by the Punjab Chief Court⁷ that before the return of findings by the lower Court the appellate Court has no jurisdiction to dismiss the appeal for default (See also Note 4, infra)

4 Unnecessary remission

Is it open to the appellate Court when the appeal comes on for hearing after the receipt of fresh findings from the lower Court to reconsider the views expressed by it before the remand and to hold that the remand was improper or unnecessary? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. According to the great majority of cases¹ there is no final decision on any matter when an appellate Court remits issues under R 25 and the entire appeal including matters on which the Court may have expressed its views before the order of remand, is open for consideration at the hearing after the remand. Under this view it is open to the appellate Court to hold that the order of remand previously made was unnecessary or improper and to disregard the findings returned by the lower Court. Thus it may dismiss the appeal, after the findings are received on the ground that the appeal as originally filed was itself incompetent² It has also been held that when a single Judge of the High Court makes an order of remand under R 25 and the case subsequently comes on for final disposal before a Bench of two Judges, the latter can go back upon the order of remand and the views expressed therein³ But it has been held by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case⁴ that an order of remand under R 25 is an interlocutory order which, under the principle laid down by the Privy Council in *Administrator General of Bengal v Hook*⁵ and *Ram Kirpal v Rup Kumar*⁶ will operate as res judicata and is binding on the Court which passed it, until it is set aside in appropriate proceedings

An appellate Court is not bound to reconsider the views expressed in the remand order⁷

Where the appellate Court has heard arguments on some of the issues and expressed its views thereon and remanded other issues under R 25 it is not bound on the return of the findings to hear the case de novo but may confine counsel to arguments on the findings returned⁸ It has been held that a party is not entitled to raise new issues for the first time at the hearing after the remand⁹

5 Second appeal

The findings of lower appellate Court upon issues remanded by the High Court in second appeal cannot be challenged upon the evidence as in the case of first appeal but objections to such findings must be restricted to the limits within which the original pleas in second appeal are confined¹

6 Court fee

No Court fee is chargeable on a memorandum of objections filed under this Rule²

1 Scope and object of the Rule

The general principle is that the appellate Court should not travel outside the record of the lower Court and cannot take any evidence in appeal. This rule elucidates the provisions of S 107, Cl (d) of the Code¹ and is an exception to the general rule stated above in that it enables the appellate Court to take additional evidence in the circumstances mentioned therein². Therefore, the appellate Court is entitled to call for fresh evidence only when the conditions laid down in this rule are found to exist³. On the other hand, the Court is not bound under the circumstances mentioned in the rule, to allow additional evidence and the parties are not entitled, as of right, to the admission of such evidence, the matter is entirely in the discretion of the Court⁴. It has, however, been held in some cases that apart from this rule, an appellate Court can, under general principles of law⁵ or under its inherent power⁶ admit additional evidence. But these decisions cannot be accepted as correct in view of the decision of the Privy Council in *Kesowji Issur v G I P Rj*⁷ which lays down clearly that this rule can alone be looked to for taking additional evidence and that the Court has no jurisdiction to admit such evidence in cases where this rule does not apply. This rule does not apply so as to prohibit the appellate Court from doing any of the following things —

- (a) To take into consideration admissions by the parties before the appellate Court⁸
- (b) To issue a commission for local investigation⁹ or to examine and adjust accounts¹⁰
- (c) To refer to books on history, etc., which may have a bearing on the facts of the case¹¹ (See Evidence Act, S 57)
- (d) To send for papers from its own records or from the records of any other Court and inspect the same¹² (See O 13 R 10)
- (e) To examine parties present in Court^{12a} (O 10, R 2) See also the undermentioned case¹³

Additional evidence may be admitted even in an appeal against an ex parte decree¹⁴. The rule is made applicable so far as may be to second appeals by O 42, R 1^{14a}. But the rule must be applied to second appeals subject to the conditions under which a second appeal is maintainable. Hence the High Court has no power, in second appeal, to admit additional evidence for the purpose of entering into questions of fact^{14b}. But the High Court may, under its inherent powers, remand a case for retrial with a direction to take additional evidence^{14c}. The rule applies also to appeals in income-tax proceedings,¹⁵ but does not apply to proceedings under S 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code¹⁶.

4 If the appellate Court requires etc¹

Under Cl 1 (b) of the rule, it is only when the Court requires it (i.e., finds it needful) that additional evidence can be admitted¹ it may be required (a) to enable the Court to pronounce judgment, or (b) for any other substantial cause but in either case it must be the Court that requires it upon its appreciation of the evidence as it stands² The legitimate occasion, therefore, for the exercise of the discretion under this rule, is not, whenever before the appeal is heard a party applies to adduce evidence but when, on examining the evidence as it stands some inherent lacuna or defect becomes apparent to the Court³ It follows that additional evidence cannot be admitted under this rule on a preliminary objection before the hearing of the appeal^{3a}. It is, however, open to the party to point out the defect or to move the Court to supply the defect⁴.

It was held in the undermentioned cases⁵ relying upon certain observations of the Privy Council in *Infrant v Amar Singh*⁶ that additional evidence could be admitted in appeal for reasons independent of the existence of any lacuna or defect. These decisions are no longer good law since the decision of the Privy Council in *Parsoum Thakur v Lal Mohar Thakur*⁷ in which the said view has been definitely repudiated.

5 The appellate Court requires any document to be produced⁸

Where a Court permits documentary evidence to be produced under this rule it should also permit oral evidence to be adduced in order to prove the documents.

For meaning of the word 'requires' see Note 4 above.

6 Where appellate Court requires any witness to be examined

The appellate Court should not take additional evidence which impugns the testimony of a witness who was called in the Court below unless that witness is given an opportunity to clear up the mistake. Otherwise, no witness, whatever his standing, would be safe from adverse judicial comment¹.

7 To enable it to pronounce judgment

When the appellate Court finds itself unable to pronounce judgment owing to a lacuna or defect in the evidence as it stands, it may, as has been seen in Note 4 above admit additional evidence¹. The ability to pronounce a judgment refers not to the ability to pronounce any judgment but to the ability to pronounce a judgment satisfactory to the mind of the Court deliver-

8 Or for any other substantial cause

The words for any other substantial cause must be read with the word requires in the beginning of the sentence So that it is only where for any other substantial cause, the appellate Court requires additional evidence that this rule will apply ¹ The words or for any other substantial cause need not be construed in the narrow sense suggested by the doctrine ejusdem generis ² and power to allow additional evidence may be exercised when any point is required to be cleared up in the interest of justice ³ But at the same time it should be remembered that it is a power to be exercised cautiously and sparingly ⁴ and only in exceptional cases ⁵ Further, the new evidence should have a direct and important bearing on a main issue in the case ⁶ Subject to these general rules, additional evidence may be admitted in the following cases —

evidence so discovered, it should not be admitted unless it is shown that the party had exercised due diligence ⁴ O

10 Record of reasons

Whenever the appellate Court admits additional evidence it should record its reason for doing so ¹ It is a salutary provision which operates as a check against a too easy reception of evidence at a late stage of litigation and the statement of reasons may inspire confidence and disarm objection ^{1a} But this provision is only directory and not mandatory ² and the failure to record reasons does not make the evidence inadmissible ³ A contrary view has, however, been expressed in the undermentioned cases ⁴ It is submitted that it is opposed to the decision of the Privy Council in Ganga Gobind Mundal's case ^{4a} where it is laid down that the provision as to the record of reasons is not a condition precedent to the reception of the evidence, and cannot, therefore, be accepted as correct

The reasons need not be recorded in a separate order provided they are embodied in the judgment of the appellate Court ⁵ A mere reference to the 'peculiar circumstances of the case' ⁶ or a mere statement that the evidence is necessary to pronounce judgment ⁷ is not enough compliance with the requirement as to recording of reasons The issue by the appellate Court of a commission for local investigation is not the same thing as the admission of additional evidence, and no reasons need be recorded for issuing such commission ⁸

11. Additional evidence by consent of parties

27, your an order for the admission of additional evidence is made, cannot subsequently attack it² Similarly, a party who has taken advantage of the order for the admission of additional evidence and lets in such evidence cannot himself subsequently question the order³

12 Procedure to be adopted under this Rule

The formalities as regards the admission and recording of evidence in the original Court apply to additional evidence taken in the appellate Court¹ The appellate Court is not authorised merely to send a document to the thumb impression bureau and act upon their report² The issue of a general commission to try an issue is not warranted by this Rule If additional evidence is required, it should be taken by the appellate Court itself or the appellate Court should direct it to be taken by the lower Court³

There is nothing illegal in an appellate Court first ordering additional evidence and then cancelling the order and remanding the case for re trial, for, there is no decision of finality in the exercise of the discretionary power conferred by the Rule⁴

13 Application to put in evidence

The Rule does not require an application for the admission of additional evidence But such an application is not prohibited, for, although the test of admissibility of additional evidence under this Rule is the requirement of the appellate Court on an appreciation of the evidence as it stands, it is open to a party to point out to the Court any defects in the evidence on the record (See Note 4) In fact the existence or otherwise of such an application seems to have been regarded as an indication of whether the Court required the additional evidence¹

14 Opportunity to opposite party to contest admissibility of or rebut the fresh evidence

When additional evidence is sought to be admitted in the appeal, the opposite party should be given an opportunity to contest the admissibility of the evidence¹ and to adduce rebutting evidence² But failure to give such opportunity does not vitiate the proceedings if it has not caused any prejudice to the opposite party³

15 Remand for trial de novo

The Rule contemplates a disposal of the case on the merits by the appellate Court itself¹ Where the appellate Court desires to take further evidence the proper course is to follow the procedure laid down in Rr 27 and 28 and not to remand the whole case² But in exceptional cases the appellate Court has an inherent power to remand the case for taking additional evidence³

16 Court if can take notice of subsequent events

As a general rule a Court of appeal in considering the correctness of the judgment of the Court below will confine itself to the state of the case at the time such judgment was rendered and will not take notice of any facts which may have arisen subsequently but in exceptional cases the Court will depart from this Rule specially where by so doing it can shorten litigation and best attain the ends of justice¹ See also Note 4 to O 7 R 7 ante and Note 4 to R 33 infra

17 Party on whom onus is shifted by appellate Court if entitled to let in additional evidence

Such a party is not entitled to let in additional evidence if he is not taken by surprise by the action of the appellate Court¹

18 Second appeal

An order of an appellate Court admitting or rejecting additional evidence is neither a decree nor an appealable order and hence no appeal lies therefrom¹ But the order can be questioned in the appeal from the appellate decree (S 105) As regards the grounds on which such an order can be attacked, the High Court will not ordinarily interfere with the discretion of the lower appellate Court² in admitting³ or refusing to admit⁴ additional evidence But

Additional evidence admitted in contravention of this Rule should be disregarded as inadmissible⁷ But the decree should not be reversed or varied on that ground unless the decision, on the merits, has been affected thereby⁸ (See C P C, S 99 and Evidence Act, S 167)

Where the lower appellate Court has admitted additional evidence the second appeal cannot, on that account, be treated as a first appeal so as to enable questions of fact to be gone into⁹

19 Privy Council

There is no restriction on the powers of the Privy Council to admit additional evidence in appeals before it¹ The rejection of an application for the admission of additional evidence does not involve any substantial question of law within S 110 so as to give a right of appeal to the Privy Council²

20 Revision

Where an appellate Court admits additional evidence which it is not competent to receive in accordance with the provisions of the Code, the defect in its order amounts only to an error of law, and not a want of jurisdiction and hence, no revision lies from such an order.¹

Synopsis

Mode of taking additional evidence Note No 1

1 Mode of taking additional evidence

This Rule permits the appellate Court to either take the additional evidence itself or direct the lower Court to take it¹ The lower Court taking evidence under this Rule acts in a ministerial capacity The parties may object to the admissibility of the evidence before the appellate Court, though they may not have taken any such objection before the lower Court²

Where pending proceedings for taking additional evidence before the lower Court (directed by the appellate Court) one of the parties to the appeal dies, the application for substitution of legal representatives can be entertained only by the appellate Court and not by the lower Court³ The appellate Court may under this Rule send the case back to the first Court to have a local enquiry made⁴ (Cf O 41, R 27 Note 1)

1 After hearing the parties or their pleaders¹

Compare O 20, R 1 ante

The Rule authorises a judgment to be pronounced only after hearing the parties or their pleaders¹ A judgment pronounced without hearing them is unauthorised by the Code Hence where before the hearing of an appeal a party to the appeal dies and it is heard and disposed of without his legal representatives being brought on the record the decree is a nullity whether it is adverse to the deceased^{1a} or is in his favour²

Where a party dies after the hearing but before the judgment is pronounced, it is not vitiated by the absence of his legal representatives on the record See O 22 R 6

2 In open Court etc

Where the provisions of this Rule as to the judgment being pronounced in open Court and after notice to the parties were not complied with it was held that an appeal filed within 90 days of the appellant coming to know of the decision against him was within time and that in any case there was sufficient cause for the delay within the meaning of S 5 of the Limitation Act¹ The judgment may be given at once after the hearing is over or on some future day² (See also Notes on O 20 R 1)

1 Object and applicability of Rule

The objects of requiring an appellate Court to record in its judgment the particulars mentioned in this Rule are two fold, namely (a) to afford the parties an opportunity of knowing and understanding the grounds of the decision with a view to enable them to exercise, if they see fit and are so advised the right of second appeal conferred by S 100¹ and (b) to enable the High Court in second appeal to Judge whether the lower appellate Court has properly appreciated the case and has decided it after applying its mind to it and considering the evidence² See also Note 3 to O 20, R. 3.

The provisions of this rule as also R 30 supra apply also to proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act, III of 1926, but a judgment of the Board need not be dated, signed or pronounced in open Court See List II, Sch 2 of that Act

2 Contents of judgment of appellate Court—General

A judgment of the first appellate Court must be complete and self-contained¹ and must state the points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision² Compare O 20, R 3

1. 3 Judgment of affirmance

The Rule makes no distinction between affirming judgments and reversing judgments, and in either case it is obligatory upon the appellate Court to comply with the requirements of the Rule. Hence, where an appellate Court affirms the decision of the trial Court, a mere general expression of concurrence with the trial Court's judgment without giving any reasons, is not a sufficient judgment under the law.¹ But an affirming judgment need not enter into detailed reasons to the same extent as a judgment of reversal.² Further, where the case is comparatively a simple one, and a trial Court has dealt with it fully and accurately, and it is evident from the appellate Court's judgment, that it has appreciated the case properly and has decided it after considering the evidence, the mere fact that it has not repeated the reasons given by the trial Court which it approves of, does not vitiate the judgment.³ See also Note 10, infra

4 Judgment of reversal

It is specially important that an appellate judgment reversing the judgment of the lower Court should be adequate and satisfactory.¹ It must contain definite findings on the questions involved,² and must give reasons for reversing the decision of the trial Court.³ It must come into close quarters with the judgment appealed from⁴ and must express an opinion on all the points on which the lower Court has based its conclusions.⁵ It has, however, been held in the cases cited below⁶ that it is not necessary for an appellate Court when reversing the decision of the trial Court, to meet the reasons given by such Court, and that it is enough if the appellate Court gives its own reasons for its own decision.

5 Points for determination

This rule requires the appellate Court to state in its judgment the points that arise for determination.¹ These points must cover all the important questions involved in the case² and must not be general and vague.³ The object of the legislature in making it incumbent on an appellate Court to raise points certain evidence is the best evidence,⁵ or that the arguments of plaintiff's counsel represent the correct view of the case,⁶ or that a point is absurd, or ridiculous, or worthless,⁷ is not a proper judgment. Nor should the judgment be based on mere conjectures and presumptions⁸ or on evidence not legally admitted.⁹

But the whole evidence on the record need not be reviewed. It is enough if the evidence discussed is reasonably adequate for a proper decision of the case.¹⁰ Nor is it necessary to discuss a document not brought to the notice of the appellate Court.¹¹

In the undermentioned case¹² it was remarked by Markby, J., that reasons in S. 359 of the Code of 1859 (now O. 41, R. 31) meant not the reasons for any conclusion of fact, but reasons showing the point of fact or of law upon which the decision runs. Having regard to the foregoing discussion this view seems to be wrong.

Where a judgment does not discuss a document of obvious importance, it may be presumed that the Court has not considered it.¹³

8 Where the decree appealed from is reversed etc. CI (d)

Where an appellate Court reverses or modifies the decree appealed from it must specify in its judgment the relief to which the appellant is entitled. It is not enough merely to say, that the appeal is decreed, or that the decree is reversed.¹ Where the conclusions in the appellate judgment differ in important points from those of the trial Court, the appellate Court must specify in its decree the modifications necessitated by its conclusions.²

9 Summary dismissal of appeal under O. 41 R. 11

There is a conflict of decisions as to the applicability of this rule to cases of summary dismissal of an appeal under R. 11 ante. On the one hand it has been held by High Courts of Calcutta,¹ Madras,² Allahabad,³ Rangoon,⁴ the Chief Court of Punjab⁵ and the Judicial Commissioners' Court of Oudh⁶

1, that the Rule applies to such cases and the appellate Court is not exempt from writing a judgment in the manner prescribed by R 31. In the special circumstances of any case, however, a short judgment merely expressing concurrence with the views of the lower Court without entering into reasons may be held sufficient.⁶ On the other hand, it has been held by the High Court of Patna^{6a} and the Judicial Commissioners Courts of Nagpur⁷ and Sind⁸ that the Rule does not apply and that the appellate Court is not bound to write a formal judgment in such cases. The Bombay High Court inclines to the latter view⁹ but holds that under Civil Circular No 51 of 1890 of that Court issued under the Indian High Courts Act, appellate Courts are bound to comply with the requirements of Rule 31 even in cases falling under Rule 11.¹⁰

10 Non compliance with Rule—Effect—General

This Rule is imperative and a judgment which is not in accordance with it, is not one according to law.¹ But a substantial compliance with the rule is enough. What is substantial compliance depends on the facts and circumstances of each case.² The important point is that it must be evident from the judgment of the appellate Court that it has properly appreciated the case, has applied its mind to it and has decided it after considering the evidence on the record.³ If the judgment satisfies this requirement, the appellate Court will be deemed to have substantially complied with the Rule, and its judgment will not be interfered with merely because it does not strictly fulfil the formalities laid down therein.⁴

11 Second appeal—Maintainability of on ground of non compliance

A second appeal will lie on the ground that the judgment of the lower appellate Court does not substantially comply with this Rule, and is therefore for a judgment according to law¹ A contrary view has, however been taken in some cases, on the ground, that the non compliance with this rule cannot be considered to be an irregularity which may possibly have affected the decision on the merits within § 100 Cl (c)² This view is against the general trend of opinion Further at least some of the cases laying down the view³ are cases in which the non-compliance with the rule was not of a substantial nature

12 Non compliance with the rule by lower appellate Court—Procedure of High Court

Where the lower appellate Court has not substantially complied with this Rule the High Court may reverse the decree and remand the case for disposal according to law¹ It has however been held in the cases cited below²

- 1, that the High Court cannot do so but can only require the Judge in the lower Court, if he is still in service and in the same district, to state his reasons for his conclusions. This view is against the general trend of opinion. Further some of the cases expressing such a view³ will on examination, be found to be not cases of substantial non-compliance with the Rule.

The High Court may instead of remanding the whole case call for fresh findings from the lower appellate Court⁴.

13 Appeal in proceedings under S 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code

The judgment in an appeal in proceedings under S 476 Criminal Procedure Code must, according to the general rule, give reasons for the decision¹.

14 Applicability of rule to High Court

In the undermentioned case¹ the High Court confirmed the decree of the lower Court but failed to give in its judgment any reasons for its decision. An application was made to the High Court for leave to appeal to the Privy Council on the ground that the requirements of the present rule were not complied with. On this application, Edge C J, said that the present Rule was not intended to apply to cases where the High Court, after hearing the judgment of the lower Court and the arguments thereon comes to the conclusion that both the judgment and reasons given by the lower Court for its decision are complete and satisfactory. The learned Chief Justice gives no reason for his view, and it is not clear why the present rule or at least the principle thereof should not apply to the High Court². On the other hand the Privy Council itself has held that the High Court must give reasons for its decision in its judgments³. See also Cl 42 Letters Patent. But under O 49 R 2 where at the commencement of the present Code there were, in force, any Rules for the recording of judgments by Chartered High Courts, the present rule cannot in any way, affect the operation of such Rules⁴.

- 2 R. 32. [S 577] The judgment may be for confirming, varying or reversing the decree from which the appeal is preferred, or, if the parties to the appeal agree as to the form which the decree in appeal shall take, or as to the order to be made in appeal, the Appellate Court may pass a decree or make an order accordingly [1877—S 577; 1859—S 350]

1 Confirming varying or reversing decree

Under this Rule an appellate Court has no power to dismiss an appeal. The judgment must be one for confirming varying or reversing the decree appealed from. But an appeal may be dismissed under R 11 ante or as being incompetent as where it is time barred or is barred under S 102¹

2 Compromise decree in appeal

Where an agreement set up by one party is denied by the other there was a conflict of decisions under the Old Code as to whether the Court had the power to determine the question as to the factum and validity of the alleged agreement and pass a decree if it finds such agreement to have been validly made. In O 23 R 3 of the present Code (corresponding to S 375 of the former Code) the Legislature has given effect to the view that the Court has such a power. This view has been applied to compromises entered into during the pendency of appeals¹ as well as those entered into in the lower Court. See O 23, R 3 Note 6

R. 33. [New] The Appellate Court shall have power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made and to pass or make such further or other decree or order as the case may require³ and this power may be exercised by the Court notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree and may be exercised in favour of all or any of the respondents or parties, although such respondents or parties may not have filed any appeal or objections⁶

[Provided that the Appellate Court shall not make any order under section 35-A, in pursuance of any objection on which the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted or refused to make such order¹²]

Illustration

A decree is set aside as to part only of the decree and a decree is passed against both parties. The appellant appeals against the decree and the respondent appeals against the decree. The appellate Court decides in favour of the appellant. It has power to pass a decree against the respondent.

1 Scope object and applicability of Rule

Thus Rule is new and is based on O 58, R 4 of the Rules of the supreme Court in England. It is wider than O 41, R 4. Its object is to enable the appellate Court to do complete justice between the parties¹ and to avoid contradictory and inconsistent decisions on the same questions in the same suit² For this purpose a discretionary³ power is conferred on the appellate Court to pass such decree or order as ought to have been passed or as the nature of the case may require notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree or that the party in whose favour the power is proposed to be exercised has not filed any appeal or cross-objection. The discretion conferred is wide⁴ and in a proper case, the appellate Court should not hesitate to exercise it^{4a} But as the power is in derogation of the general principle that a party cannot avoid a decree against him without filing any appeal or cross-objection it must be exercised with care and caution⁵ No hard and fast rule can however be laid down as to the circumstances under which the power may or may not be exercised and each case must depend on its own facts ⁶ (See also Note 6)

There is no restriction as to the class of suits to which the Rule applies ⁷ The principle of the Rule applies also to applications for revision ⁸ It also applies to a suit to set aside a decree Thus, where a decree is passed against several defendants, some of whom sue to have the decree set aside, the decree may be set aside as against all ⁹ See also the following cases ¹⁰

3 'Such further or other decree or order as the nature of the case may require'

The appellate Court has power to pass not only any decree or order which ought to have been passed but also such further or other decree or order as the nature of the case may require. Accordingly the appellate Court has power to deal with the case in any way that may seem equitable to all the parties concerned.¹

- 1 A property, the subject of two mortgages, one in favour of S and the other in favour of B, is sold for arrears of revenue and purchased by T. S sues for the enforcement of his mortgage against the surplus sale proceeds and makes B, a defendant to the suit claiming priority over him. The suit is decreed. B appeals against the decree. In the meanwhile there is a suit by B for setting aside the revenue sale and this suit is also decreed. T, (the purchaser at the revenue sale) appeals against this decree. Both appeals are heard together and are dismissed. The appellate Court can in dismissing the appeals, direct that S's rights should be enforced against the property instead of against the sale proceeds.²
- 2 A suit is erroneously dismissed on the merits instead of for default. An appeal is filed by the plaintiff. The appellate Court can not only pass the order which the lower Court ought to have passed viz., an order of dismissal for default, but also a further order that the suit do stand restored and that the lower Court do proceed to try the suit according to law.³
- 3 Where on an application to set aside an execution sale on the ground of the price being less than that payable under certain Rules, the lower Court refuses to set aside the sale, and on appeal, the appellate Court considers that the sale should be set aside, it has power to accept the purchaser's offer of a higher price, and to leave the sale undisturbed.⁴ See also the undermentioned cases.⁵

4 Power of appellate Court to take cognisance of subsequent events

See also Note 4 to O 7 R 7 and Note 16 to O 41, R 27 for a full discussion. As a general rule a Court of appeal, in considering the correctness of the judgment of the Court below, will confine itself to the state of the case at the time such judgment was rendered and will not take notice of any facts which may have arisen subsequently¹. But the Court will in exceptional cases, depart from this rule, especially where, by so doing, it can shorten litigation and best attain the ends of justice. In such cases it is not only competent to a Court of appeal, but it may be its duty to take notice of events which have happened subsequently to the passing of the decree or order appealed against².

5 Power may be exercised notwithstanding that appeal is as to part only of the decree

This rule expressly empowers the appellate Court on an appeal from one part of the decree to reverse or modify the other part¹.

But where there are several suits and a separate decree is passed in each of them the appellate Court has no jurisdiction in an appeal against one of them to set aside the other decrees².

6 Power may be exercised in favour of respondents or parties who have not filed appeal or cross objections

The general principle is that a decree is binding on the parties to it, until it is set aside in appropriate proceedings¹. A party who wishes to have a decree against him modified or reversed, must comply with certain requirements as to filing of appeals, objections and so forth². Hence as an ordinary rule, an appellate Court must not reverse or vary a decree in favour of a party who has not preferred any appeal or cross objection against it, and this general rule holds good notwithstanding the enactment of R 33³. But in exceptional cases the rule enables an appellate Court to pass such decree as ought to have been passed, or as the nature of the case may require, even if such decree would be in favour of parties who have not filed any appeal or cross-objections against the lower Court's decree⁴. Ordinarily the power con-

- (i) A is the vendee of certain lands from B. B fails to deliver possession of the lands to A. A sues B for possession or in the alternative for the return of the purchase money. The trial Court awards A a decree for possession. B appeals. The appellate Court considers that A is not entitled to sue for possession, but is entitled to the return of the purchase money. The appellate Court can vary the decree accordingly.⁷
- (c) A an auction purchaser sues B the judgment debtor for possession or in alternative C the decree holder for refund of the purchase money. The trial Court decrees possession. B appeals making A and C respondents. The appellate Court comes to the conclusion that A is not entitled to recover possession from B but is entitled to the refund of the purchase money from C. A decree may be passed to this effect.⁸
- (j) A and B sue C for recovery of certain property. The trial Court passes a decree in A's favour but dismisses B's suit. C appeals. Neither appeals nor prefers cross objection. The appellate Court holds that B and not A is the person entitled. It can pass a decree in B's favour.¹⁰ See also Note 8.

The cases given in the above illustrations were cases in which there was interference by the appellate Court in appellant's favour. Suppose there is no interference in appellant's favour in a certain case, can the appellate Court reverse or modify the decree in favour of parties who have not filed any appeal or cross-objection? For instance A sues B for Rs. 1000. A decree is passed in A's favour for Rs. 400 only. A appeals from the decree. B files neither an appeal nor prefers cross-objections against the decree. The appellate Court finds that A is not entitled to any amount. Can it dismiss his suit in toto or can it merely dismiss his appeal leaving untouched the decree for Rs. 400 in his favour? Similarly in the above case, B (the defendant) appeals and A (the plaintiff) neither appeals nor files any cross-objection. The appellate

- (3) The cases cited under (b) do not say that the appellate Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree in B's favour in such circumstances

In exercising the power under this rule, the Court should not lose sight of the other provisions of law such as the Court-fees Act or the Limitation Act which are likely to be infringed by the exercise of such power¹⁶ Care and judicial discretion must, therefore, be exercised in view of all the circumstances of the case¹⁷ The following conditions should be satisfied before such power is exercised in favour of a party —

- (a) The Court must be satisfied that there are good reasons for such party not having filed any appeal or cross objection¹⁸
 (b) Interference in favour of such party must be rendered necessary by the conclusions to which the appellate Court comes in deciding the appeal¹⁹

which the judgment of the trial Court proceeds, the appellate Court considers that the decree should be modified in order to do justice to all the parties concerned including such as have not set the law in motion. If these remarks were intended to lay down that under this rule an appellate Court has no power to vary a decree in favour of a respondent who has not filed an appeal or cross-objection if it has upset the grounds upon which the lower Court's judgment is based, it is submitted that the view is incorrect.^{22a}

The appellate Court can interfere in favour of a party or a respondent, who has filed an appeal or cross objection and failed therein.²³

The appellate Court can exercise its power under this rule in favour of parties to the suit who were not impleaded as parties to the appeal¹. A contrary view has however been taken in the undermentioned cases². It is submitted that this view is not correct as it is inconsistent with the express provisions of the rule which uses the words respondents or parties³. See also Notes to R. 4 ante.

11 Illustration to the Rule

The illustration to the Rule indicates a type of cases for which provision is intended to be made ¹ But it is not exhaustive of the classes of cases to which the Rule applies, and does not restrict the scope of the Rule ² Thus though the illustration contemplates that the person in whose favour the appellate Court interferences is a party to the appeal and that there is interference in favour of the appellant, these two conditions are not essential for the applicability of the Rule See Notes 6 and 7

12 Proviso

The proviso to the Rule was added by Act IX of 1922 Its effect is that the appellate Court cannot make an order for compensatory costs under S 35-A where the trial Court has refused to do so See also Note 3 to S 35-A, ante

13 Limitation

A sues B for Rs 1 000 The claim is decreed for Rs 600 A appeals from the dismissal of his suit for the balance It is competent to the appellate Court to dismiss his whole suit if it comes to the conclusion that it is time barred ¹ But it has been held that if the appellate Court is not in a position to reject the whole claim, as for instance, where the defendant has confessed judgment as to a part of the claim, the appellate Court should not dismiss even that part of the claim which is the subject-matter of appeal ² The reason given is that the obligation to dismiss a suit as time-barred under S 3 of the Limitation Act arises only when the appellate Court is in a position to dismiss the whole claim ³

When a suit is decreed partially and the plaintiff appeals against the disallowance of the balance of his claim, the entire decree is imperilled because the appellate Court can in such appeal dismiss the whole suit and hence limitation for execution of the decree runs from the date of the appellate decree ⁴ When a decree imposes a separate liability on each of the several defendants, and one of them appeals against that portion of the decree which affects him, is limitation postponed under Art 182 Cl (2), even for the execution of the decrees against the other defendant? On this question there is a conflict of decisions some cases holding that time runs from the appellate decree ⁵ and others holding that time runs from the lower Court's decree ⁶ peals the liability of a non appealing defendant respondent may be enhanced under this Rule as a result of the appeal]

33, 14 Res Judicata

A sues B and C in the alternative for a certain sum of money. The suit is decreed against B and dismissed against C. B appeals making A and C respondents. The appellate Court sets aside the decree against B. It can at the same time pass a decree against C. But its failure to do so does not operate as res judicata under S 11 Explanation 5 because it was not obligatory but only discretionary on the part of the appellate Court to grant relief to A¹ (See S 11 Note 25). Similarly the failure of A to ask for relief being granted to him under R 33 does not operate as res judicata under S 11, Explanation 4².

Where a defendant appeals as to a part of the decree against him it has been held by the Madras High Court in the undermentioned case³ that he is precluded by res judicata from urging in support of his appeal a point which goes to the root of the whole decree including the portion of it from which he has not appealed. It is submitted that this decision is inconsistent with the Full Bench decision of the same High Court in *Panchanada v Vythinatha*⁴ and other cases cited in S 11 Note 29 Foot-Note 10. Further the decision seems to overlook the provisions of the present Rule which enable the appellate Court to reverse the whole decree though the appeal is as to a part of the decree alone. (See Note 5)

A sues B and C. The suit is decreed against B but dismissed against C. B appeals from the decree but A does not file any appeal or cross objections. B's appeal is allowed and A's entire suit is therefore dismissed. A files a second appeal impleading B and C as respondents. He is not entitled to file a second appeal against C because to allow him to do so would be to allow him to prefer an appeal directly to the High Court from the decision of the trial Court¹. The decisions to the contrary² are not good law in view of the Privy Council case mentioned below³.

A sues for Rs 1000. The trial Court passes a decree for Rs 600. The defendant appeals but A does not file any appeal or cross objection. The defendant's appeal is allowed and A's suit is dismissed in its entirety. A files a second appeal. He cannot contend in the second appeal that his whole suit should be decreed. The utmost he can claim is the restoration of the trial Court's decree⁴. The authorities to the contrary⁵ are not good law as they are opposed to the Privy Council decision in *Nobinchandra v Chandra Madhab*⁶. But where the omission to grant a relief is due to a mere slip of the pen it can be decreed on further appeal, though no appeal was preferred against the decree of the first Court ⁷

The mere fact that a decree might have been passed in favour of a party to the suit who was not impleaded as a party to the appeal does not make him constructively a party to the appeal so as to enable him to file a second appeal against the decree in the appeal ⁸ No second appeal lies against an order of remand passed not under R 223 ante, but under the present Rule ⁹ The refusal to take action under R 33 in the exercise of its discretion by a lower appellate Court is not an error of law within S 100 so as to sustain a second appeal ¹⁰

17 Privy Council Appeal

A sues B and C. The claim is decreed against B dismissed against C. B appeals to the High Court but A does not file any appeal or cross objections. B's appeal is allowed. A appeals to the Privy Council impleading both B and C. His appeal against C is not maintainable because it amounts to a direct appeal to the Privy Council from the decree of the trial Court which is not allowed under the law ¹

18 Revision

Where an appellate Court refuses to interfere in favour of a respondent on the ground that it has no jurisdiction to do so in the absence of cross objections it fails to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law within S 115 ¹ It has been held that no revision lies against an order refusing to add certain persons as parties to the appeal, as such an order is interlocutory in its nature ²

1 Date of decree

Under this Rule, the date which the appellate decree shall bear is the date on which the judgment was delivered. Hence, the date of the decree for purposes of limitation for filing a second appeal is the date on which the judgment is delivered¹ Compare O 20, R. 7, ante.

2 Specification of Relief

The Rule requires that the appellate decree must contain a clear specification of the relief granted. But where the decree did not specify the sum due to the appellant except by reference to the judgment and decree of the lower Court, it was held, that though the decree was informal, as the amount due to the decree-holder was ascertainable from the record, it was capable of execution and execution should be allowed as a matter of equity, the defect in the decree being due to the mistake of the officers of the Court². As to the construction of the appellate decrees, see the undermentioned cases²

3 Costs

See generally S 35 and the notes thereon The appellate decree must provide for costs of the appeal as well as of the suit¹ As regards the costs of the appeal, the appellate decree must state the amount of costs incurred by either party in the appellate Court. A party cannot recover any sum as costs of the appeal if it is not entered in the decree² But the amount³ or particulars⁴ of the costs incurred in the lower Court need not be specified in the appellate decree and the same may be ascertained from the lower Court's decree⁵

The appellate Court must finally determine by which of the parties the costs are to be paid. It cannot declare that the costs shall be borne by the party who will be unsuccessful in a suit to be hereafter brought⁶

The appellate Court can deprive a successful party of his costs for sufficient reasons. Thus where a decree is confirmed on grounds wholly different from those on which it was based by the lower Court the appeal may be dismissed without costs.

4 Decree in appeal supersedes that of the lower Court

*See S 38 Note 5 and S 148, Note 9 and the undermentioned case*¹

5 Court fee

S 33 of the Code provides, that after judgment a decree shall follow. In the undermentioned case¹ it was held by Oldfield, J., that even after the disposal of the appeal and pending the preparation of a decree, a Court had power to direct the plaintiff-appellant to correct the valuation and to pay additional Court-fee. The reason given was that the collection of Court-fees was no part of a Judge's functions in the trial of a suit which can be said to Appeals to the High Court from Original Decrees of Subordinate Courts.

1 The rules contained in O 41 shall apply to appeals in the High Court of Judicature at Madras with the modifications contained in this Order

2. (1) The memorandum of appeal shall be accompanied by the prescribed fees for service of notice of appeal and the receipt of the accountant of the Court for the sum prescribed by the rules of Court

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in R 22 of O 41 the period prescribed for entry of appearance by the respondent and filing by him of memorandum of cross objections, if any, shall unless otherwise ordered be thirty days from the service of notice upon him

3 (1) If the respondent intends to appear and defend the appeal he shall within the period specified in the notice of appeal enter an appearance by filing in Court a memorandum of appearance

(2) If a respondent fails to enter an appearance within the time and in the manner provided by the sub rule above he shall not be allowed to translate or print any part of the record

Provided that a respondent may apply by petition for further time, and the Court may thereupon make such order as it thinks fit, the application shall be supported by evidence to be given on affidavit as to the reason for the applicant's default, and notice thereof shall be given to the appellant and all parties who have entered an appearance Unless otherwise ordered the applicant shall pay the costs of all parties appearing on the application

4 (1) The memorandum of appeal and the memorandum of appearance shall state an address for service within the City of Madras at which service of any notice order or process may be made on the party filing such memorandum

(2) If a party appears in person, the address for service may be within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred

Provided that if such party subsequently appears by a pleader he shall state in the vakalat an address for service within the City of Madras, and shall give notice thereof to each party who has appeared

(3) If a party appears by a pleader, his address for service shall be that of his pleader, and all notices to the party shall be served on his pleader at that address

5 The Court may direct that service of a notice of appeal or other notice or process shall be made by sending the same in a registered cover prepaid for acknowledgment and addressed to the address for service of the party to be served which has been filed by him in the lower Court Provided that, after a party has given notice of an address for service in accordance with Rule 4 service of any notice or process shall be made at such address

6. All notices and process, other than a notice of appeal, shall be sufficiently served if left by a party or his pleader, or by a person employed by the pleader, or by an officer of the Court between the hours of 11 a m and 5 p m at the address for service of the party to be served

7 Notices which may be served by a party or his pleader under Rule 6, or which are sent from the office of the Registrar may, unless the Court otherwise directs, be sent by registered post, and the time at which the notice so posted would be delivered in the ordinary course of post shall be considered as the time of service thereof and the posting thereof shall be a sufficient service

8 If there are several respondents, and all do not appear by the same pleader, they shall give notice of appearance to each of the other respondents as appear separately.

9 A list of all cases in which notice is to be issued to the respondent shall be affixed to the Court notice board after the case has been registered

10 (1) If upon a case being called on for hearing by the Court, it appears that the record has not been translated and printed in accordance with the rules of the Court the Court may hear the appeal or dismiss it, or may adjourn the hearing and direct the party in default to pay costs, or may make such order as it thinks fit

(2) If the Court proceeds to hear the appeal, it may refuse to read or refer to any part of the record which is not included in the printed papers

11 When costs are awarded unless the Court otherwise orders the costs of a party appealing upon any application before the Registrar or the Court shall be Rs 10 and the cost of appearing when the appeal is in the daily cause list for final hearing and is adjourned shall be Rs 30 At the request of any party the Registrar shall cause the order to be drawn up and the said cost to be inserted therein

Memorandums of objections

12 (1) If the acknowledgment mentioned in R 22 (3) of O 41 is not filed the respondent shall together with the memorandum of objections file so many copies thereof as there are parties affected thereby

(2) The prescribed fees for service shall be presented together with the memorandum to the Registrar

13 If any party or the pleader of any party to whom a memorandum of objections has been tendered has refused or neglected for three days from the date of tender to give the acknowledgment mentioned in R 22 (3) of O 41, the respondent may file an affidavit stating the facts and the Registrar may dispense with service of the copies mentioned in R 12 (1)

14 Rule 31 of O 41 shall not apply to the High Court If judgment is given orally a shorthand note thereof shall be taken by an officer of the Court and a transcript made by him shall be signed or initialled by the Judge or by the Judges concurring therein after making such corrections as may be considered necessary

1 The words 'under the Code or any other' after the words 'Any person entitled'

2 The words "including the presentation of such application" so as to override the decision in I.L.R. 26 Mad 369 (See Note G, infra) This order does not apply to appeals under the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) and the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1903)

2. 'Who is unable to pay the fee required'—See Notes to O 33 R 1 ante

3 Application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal

Unlike the plaint in a pauper suit which forms an integral portion of the pauper application itself the application for leave to appeal as a pauper is a distinct document from the memorandum of appeal accompanying the application. The memorandum of appeal itself cannot be treated as an application for leave to appeal as a pauper¹

4 Subject to the provision relating to suits by paupers

The granting of leave to appeal as a pauper is subject to the provisions relating to suits by paupers as provided in O 33. Thus if the appellant has entered into an agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the appeal¹ or has not stated with the utmost good faith, in his application, the whole of his assets² then his application for leave to appeal is liable to be rejected.

The application for leave to appeal as a pauper should be verified at its foot as required by O 33 R 2³. But though it is not so verified if it is accompanied by an affidavit in which the statements contained in the application are stated to be true and there is no falsehood or concealment in the application the Rule will be deemed to have been sufficiently complied with⁴. It has been held that the presentation of an application under this Rule without a list of properties as required by R 2 is not invalid and the same could be supplied after the limitation period⁵.

5 In all matters including the presentation of such application

In the absence of these words in the corresponding section of the old Code it was held by the High Court of Madras¹ that the Rule as to presentation in person by a pauper applicant now contained in O 33 R 3 did not apply to pauper appellants. It is now clear that the application should be presented in the same manner as the case of a person suing in forma pauperis et c., in person. But a pardanashin lady is however exempted from personal appearance under S 132 of the Code and therefore she need not present the application to appeal in forma pauperis in person². It has been held by the Chief Court of Oudh that the memorandum of appeal need not be presented in person³.

6 Proviso to the Rule

The proviso is mandatory¹. In Sakhu Bai v Ganpat, I L R 28 Bom 451, Jenkins C J, observed as follows—within the proviso

(1932) 1932 All 712 (712) Applicant entitled to be heard only if Judge after reading judgments thinks it to be wrong

That proviso is a very necessary safeguard introduced by the legislature for the benefit of litigants who find themselves opposed by paupers and in our opinion the Court should be careful to see that the proviso is satisfied. It is to be noticed that the Court must come to its conclusion upon a perusal only of application, the judgment and the decree. This proviso is apt to be overlooked, but it would provide a safeguard against this, if the Judge or Bench admitting a pauper appeal were to express and record very briefly the reasons for granting leave so that the Bench before whom the appeal ultimately comes may have an assurance that the leave was properly given."

A party cannot therefore be allowed to appeal as pauper unless the decree appealed from appears to be contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust.² But unlike R 11 of O 41 which empowers the Court to call for the records, the Court is restricted under this proviso to a perusal of the judgment and decree appealed against and has no discretionary power to go into the record.³ The High Courts of Allahabad,⁴ Patna⁵ and Lahore⁶ have held that a mere issue of a notice to the respondent under App G, Form No 11 is no ground for holding that the Court is satisfied as to the conditions laid down in the proviso, and that the respondent appearing in answer to the notice is entitled to urge that the application should be rejected on the ground that the conditions of the proviso have not been satisfied. The High Court of Madras⁷ has, on the other hand, held that a notice issued to the respondent under Form No 11 is only to state the objections of the respondent in respect of the pauperism of the applicant, and that the respondent has no locus standi to urge at that stage that the proviso is not satisfied.

12 Privy Council Appeal

This rule contemplates the appellate Court perusing the judgment of a subordinate Court, and not the Court where judgment is appealed from perusing its own judgment¹ O 44 does not therefore apply to appeals to His Majesty in Council and the High Court has no jurisdiction to grant leave to appeal in forma pauperis to the Privy Council² But the petitioner may apply in England for such leave in accordance with the rules that govern such applications³

13 Limitation

Under Art 170 Schedule I of the Limitation Act the period of limitation for presenting an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis is 30 days from the date of the decree appealed against¹

14 Revision

See Note 26 to S 115 and the undermentioned cases¹

- 2 R. 2. [S 593] The inquiry into the pauperism of the applicant may be made either by the Appellate Court or under the orders of the Appellate Court by the Court from whose decision the appeal is preferred

Inquiry into pauperism

Provided that, if the applicant was allowed to sue or appeal as a pauper in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, no further inquiry in respect of his pauperism shall be necessary, unless the Appellate Court sees cause to direct such inquiry

1 Inquiry into pauperism

If the pauper applicant-appellant had been allowed in the trial Court to sue as a pauper no fresh inquiry as regards his pauperism is necessary unless the appellate Court sees reason to require it Otherwise enquiry into his pauperism is necessary and such enquiry may be made by the appellate Court itself or under its direction, by the trial Court In the latter case, the report of the trial Court as regards pauperism does not operate as a final disposal of the application, and does not affect the power of the appellate Court to consider and decide whether leave should or should not be granted¹

1 Scope of the Rule

A party desirous of appealing to His Majesty in Council should apply by a petition to the Court whose decree is complained of Where there are two appeals from two decrees although they are decided by a common judgment two separate applications are necessary even though both the decrees were based on one common judgment¹

Where A appeals to the High Court making B a party to the appeal and succeeds in the appeal B is entitled to present a petition for leave to appeal

2 Appeals in forma pauperis

See Note 13 to O 44, R 1

An order for leave to appeal in forma pauperis takes effect from its date and has no effect whatever on costs incurred before that date¹

3 Limitation

An application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council must be filed within 90 days of the date of decree or order appealed from, under Art 179 of the Limitation Act, 1908. Where the decree is modified on review, the time will begin to run from the date of the decree passed on review¹

Where the Court is closed on the last day prescribed for the application it may be presented on the next re opening day². In calculating the period of limitation on the day on which the decree or order appealed from is pronounced or dated should be excluded³. S 12 sub-S (2) of the Limitation Act of 1877 was restricted to applications for leave to appeal as a pauper and hence it was held that the time spent in getting a copy of the decree could not be excluded in computing the period of limitation⁴. Under the present S 12, sub S (2) of the Limitation Act 1908 such time can be clearly excluded in computing the period of limitation for an application for leave to appeal under this Rule⁵. Sub-S (3) of S 12 of that Act is however not applicable to applications for leave to appeal and therefore the time spent in obtaining a copy of the judgment cannot be excluded⁶.

S 6 of the Limitation Act 1908 does not apply to applications for leave to appeal⁷

See also Note 8 to S 109 and the undermentioned cases⁸

R. 3. [S. 600] (1) Every petition shall state the grounds of appeal and pray for a certificate either that, as regards amount or value and nature, the case fulfils the requirements of S. 110, or that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council.

(2) Upon receipt of such petition, the Court shall direct notice to be served on the opposite party to show cause why the said certificate should not be granted.

2 Scope of the Rule

This Rule must be read with S 109 Cl (c) and S 110. A party wishing to file an appeal to His Majesty in Council should file a petition to the High Court under this Rule for the issue of a certificate that the case fulfils the requirements of S 110 or is otherwise fit for appeal¹

This Rule does not restrict the power or prerogative of the Judicial Committee to grant special leave to appeal See Notes under S 112 ante and the following cases² In Motichand v Ganga Prasad^{2a} Lord Davey in delivering the judgment of the Board observed as follows — Where a party in an Indian case comes to this Board and asks for special leave to appeal the matter being under the appealable value their Lordships think that he should first apply to the Court below for a certificate under the second part of S 600 namely that it is otherwise a fit one for appeal to Her Majesty in Council

such certificate, which the Judicial Committee will consider and act upon and unless the certificate upon which leave to appeal is based is in such a form as to justify that leave, it will be held not to have been properly given¹ In *Radhakrishna Ayyar v Swamunatha Ayyar*² their Lordships of the Judicial Committee pointed out that where an appeal is certified to be otherwise fit it is of the utmost importance that the certificate should on the face of it show clearly the grounds upon which it is based There should be an indication of the nature of the question that is involved in the appeal and that the discretion conferred by S 109, Cl (c) was invoked or was exercised Their Lordships think it should be brought to the attention of the Indian Courts that these certificates are of great consequence, that they seriously affect the rights of litigant parties, and that they ought to be given in such a form that it is impossible to mistake their meaning upon their face Even if the High Court refuses a certificate it is desirable that the reasons for such refusal should be stated³

The respondent can raise a preliminary objection before the Judicial Committee on the ground that the order granting leave is ultra vires and that hence the appeal is not maintainable⁴ But objection as to valuation, should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity⁵ The Privy Council will not interfere with any question of valuation unless it can be shown that some one has improperly been made the subject of valuation, or excluded therefrom, or that there is some fundamental principle affecting the valuation which renders it unsound⁶

Certificate if can be granted after final adjudication by the Judicial Committee—The certificate under this Rule cannot be granted after there has been a final adjudication in the matter by the Judicial Committee In *Vekt v Chejju Ram*⁷ the plaintiff's suit which was decreed in the trial Court was reversed by the High Court The plaintiff then filed a petition for leave to appeal to the Judicial Committee as also an application for review The latter application was granted and the High Court reversed its original judgment The defendant took the matter in appeal to the Privy Council which held that the application for review was not maintainable and dismissed the suit restoring the first judgment of the High Court Subsequently the plaintiff pressed his original petition for leave to appeal and the High Court granted leave holding that the petition was still alive, and not disposed of The Privy Council reversed the order granting leave holding that there was no suit existing after the decision of the Judicial Committee and that no leave could therefore be granted

1 Consolidation of suits

There was no provision under the old Code corresponding to this rule and there was a conflict of opinion as to whether, and when two suits could be consolidated together for the purpose of reaching the pecuniary limit necessary for an appeal to the Privy Council According to the High Court of Allahabad suits though decided by separate judgments could be consolidated provided the questions involved in them were substantially the same, and the property affected by the suits were also the same¹ According to the High Court of Calcutta such consolidation was not permissible unless the suits had been decided by the same judgment² The present rule gives effect to the latter view

4, and no consolidation is permissible under the present Code unless the suits have been decided by the same judgment. The object of the rule is that where there are appeals from one judgment involving substantially the same question for determination before the Privy Council, they may be consolidated if, in the aggregate, the value of the appeals amount to the appealable minimum.³ But in interpreting the words "same judgment," the spirit of the rule should be observed and a narrow interpretation should not be given to it.⁴ Where the judgment in one suit is merely a copy of the other⁵ or where the judgment in one suit merely refers to the judgment in the other, and, adopting its reasons, passes a decree accordingly,⁶ the suits must for the purposes of this rule be regarded as having been decided by the same judgment. Where the evidence in the two suits was, at the request of the parties considered as a whole, and the Court came to a decision on the whole of the evidence in favour of a party, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad that it was a proper case to which the procedure sanctioned by this rule should be applied.⁷ But the rule allows consolidation only for the purpose of making good a defect in pecuniary valuation, and not a defect of any other kind. In the case cited below the same judgment affirmed the lower Court's judgment in part relating to one defendant and modified it in part relating to another defendant. In regard to the former part, there was no substantial question of law involved and in regard to the latter part the appealable value was less than Rs. 10,000. Both defendants applied jointly for leave to appeal. It was held that leave should be refused.⁸

The rule applies only to appeals to the King in Council and not to appeals to the High Court.⁹

2 Inherent power to consolidate

The rule does not limit the inherent power of the High Court to consolidate appeals to the Privy Council for the purpose of security for the costs and for *saving expenses*¹ though such power cannot be exercised for settling pecuniary valuation when the rule forbids it in cases governed by different judgments.²

3 Judgment meaning of

The word judgment refers to the judgment appealed against and not the judgment of the Court below.¹ The fact that there was a common judgment in two suits in the trial Court is no ground for consolidating the suits under this rule unless there is a common judgment in the High Court also.²

4 Costs

The effect of an order of consolidation of several appeals under this rule is to make them a single appeal, and if costs are awarded against the respondent

R 5 [New] In the event of any dispute arising between the parties as to the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance, or as to the amount or value of the subject matter in dispute on appeal to His Majesty in Council the Court to which a petition for a certificate is made under Rule 2 may, if it thinks fit, refer such dispute for report to the Court of first instance, which last mentioned Court shall proceed to determine such amount or value and shall return its report together with the evidence to the Court by which the reference was made

1 Remission of dispute as to amount or value of the subject matter

This rule gives effect to the practice followed under the old Code a practice sanctioned by the Judicial Committee of ascertaining by evidence and enquiry as to the true value of the subject matter in appeal when there is a dispute regarding the same¹

A remand under this Rule is unnecessary and should not be made when an issue as to valuation was raised and decided in the trial Court and the parties acquiesced in the finding on that issue²

Where there is a remand under this rule the Court to which the remand is made should itself carry out the investigation and cannot remit it to some other officer³ But it has power to hold a local enquiry for the purpose of determining the value of the subject matter⁴ See also the undermentioned case⁵

Where a question of the value of the subject matter of the suit has been raised in the High Court and a report with reference to value has been made under this rule it is desirable that full information with reference to these proceedings be included in the record to be sent to the Privy Council⁶

The following alterations have been introduced by the Amending Act XLVI of 1920 —

- (1) The words Ninety days or such further period not exceeding sixty days as the Court may, upon cause shown, allow have been substituted for the words six months
- (2) The words in cash or in Government securities after the word security have been newly added
- (3) The proviso to sub-R (1) is new

2 Scope of the Rule

The Rule prescribes the course to be followed by the applicant (appellant) after the issue of a certificate as to fitness of appeal. He should furnish security for the costs of the respondent and also deposit the expenses for translating, transcribing, indexing and transmitting the records within the time fixed by clause (1).¹ The Rule does not according to the Chief Court of Oudh apply to cases where special leave to appeal is granted by the Privy Council under S. 112, and the High Court has no jurisdiction to call upon the appellant to deposit security without any order of the Privy Council.² The High Court of Calcutta² on the other hand, has held, in a case arising under the old Code, that it has been the practice of that Court to

3 Date of the decree meaning of

The words 'date of the decree' mean the date on which the decree is pronounced and not the date on which it is signed by the Judge¹

4 Security and deposit

The appellant should furnish security for the costs of the respondent¹ The security should after the amendment of the section by Act XXVI of 1920 be in cash or in Government securities unless the Court acting under the proviso² orders that some other form of security may be furnished Where Government securities are furnished as security, the market value thereof at the time of deposit should be taken into consideration² Solicitors for the respondent in England can claim payment of their bill of costs from the money deposited as security³ A Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad⁴ has held that it is open to the decree holder by way of caution to attach the security deposited by the judgment-debtor so as to prevent him from dealing with it any further.

5 Security in case of consolidated appeal

When two appeals are consolidated for valuation, security has to be furnished in respect of each of the appeals It is not enough if security is given in one appeal alone¹

6 Form of security—Proviso

If an appellant to the Privy Council wishes to furnish a security in any other form than in cash or in Government bonds, he must apply for a special order to that effect and obtain it simultaneously with the order granting the certificate It cannot be applied for or granted afterwards¹

7 Extension of time

Prior to Act XXVI of 1920 the security or the deposit had to be furnished or made within six months from the date of the decree complained of or within six weeks from the date of the grant of the certificate, whichever was the later date. The period of six months has, under the Rule as now amended, been reduced to 90 days; but the Court may extend the said period by a further period of sixty days "on cause shown." Under the Rule, as it originally stood, it had been held by the Privy Council and by the High Courts that the period of six months could be extended by the High Court for "cogent reasons."¹ It was held that the misapprehension of the appellant as to the date of the re-opening of the High Court could not be considered to be a "cogent reason" justifying an extension of time.² As to whether the poverty of the appellant was a "cogent reason," it was held by the High Court of Madras and the Chief Court of Lower Burma that it was not;³ while the Chief Court of Punjab held that it was a sufficient ground for extending time.⁴ Even under the present Rule, the High Courts of Madras and Rangoon have followed their earlier view on the point.⁵

Can the period of six weeks or the period of sixty days be extended by the High Court? It has been held that the period of six weeks cannot be extended by the High Court.⁶ There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the period of sixty days could be enlarged by the High Court. According to the High Court of Bombay, the High Court has by virtue of R. 9 of the Privy Council rules, such power,⁷ while according to the High Courts of Allahabad,⁸ Lahore,⁹ Madras,⁹ Patna,¹⁰ Rangoon¹¹ and the Chief Court of Oudh¹² the High Court has no such power and cannot extend the time beyond that which is provided in this Rule.

material to the appeal should be printed and transmitted to the Privy Council.² It has been held in the undermentioned cases³ that where there is an appeal against the regular decree such proceedings as application for review of the judgment and orders thereon ought not to form part of the record to be transmitted to England.

The Registrar of the High Court should determine in the first instance what papers should be included in the paper book.⁴

9 Delay

Where there was a great delay of three years in the preparation of the records, the office was called on to report the reason for the delay so that if the delay was due to inaction on the part of the appellant, the appeal may be certified as not being effectually prosecuted by the appellant.¹ If there is great delay, the Judicial Committee will peremptorily order the Courts in India to transmit the records at once.²

10 Appeal

An order refusing to extend the time for furnishing security is not a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is not appealable as such.¹

1 Fails to comply —See Notes to R 7 above

R. 12. [S 607] When the copy of the record, except as aforesaid has been transmitted to His Majesty in Council, the appellant may obtain a refund of the balance (if any) of the amount which he has deposited under Rule 7

R. 13. [S 608] (1) Notwithstanding the grant of a certificate³ for the admission of any appeal, the decree appealed from shall be unconditionally executed unless the Court² otherwise directs

(2) The Court may if it thinks fit, on special cause shown by any party interested in the suit, or otherwise appearing to the Court,—

(a) impound any moveable property in dispute or any part thereof, or

(b) allow the decree appealed from to be executed, taking such security from the respondent⁴ as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of any order which His Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or

(c) stay the execution of the decree appealed from, taking such security from the appellant⁵ as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of the decree appealed from, or of any order which His Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or

(d) place any party seeking the assistance of the Court under such conditions or give such other direction¹⁰ respecting the subject-matter of the appeal, as it thinks fit, by the appointment of a receiver¹¹ or otherwise

2 Court

The word Court in this rule means the High Court and not the Subordinate Court of original jurisdiction. A subordinate Judge or a District Judge has no jurisdiction to stay execution of a decree of the High Court. The provisions of this Rule are meant entirely to govern all questions regarding the execution of the decree under appeal before the Privy Council and the provisions of O 41 R 6 do not apply thereto¹

3 Stay of execution if can be ordered before the granting of certificate

In cases decided under the old Code it was held by the High Courts of Allahabad¹ Calcutta² and Madras³ that an application for stay of execution could not be granted before the appeal to the Privy Council was finally admitted. The reason for such a view was the wording of para 1 of the corresponding S 608 of the old Code which referred to the Court admitting the appeal. The High Court of Bombay⁴ on the other hand held that the words admitting the appeal had no reference to the time when the Court was to give directions but merely descriptive of the Court which was to give them and that the High Court could stay execution of its decree although the appeal had not yet been admitted. The words admitting the appeal have now been omitted in this rule but the omission has been held not to affect the construction of the rule and that even now no stay can be ordered under this rule before the certificate is granted⁵. It has been held in the cases cited below⁶ that the High Court has inherent power to stay execution in appropriate cases even before the certificate is granted.

4 Taking such security from the respondent

Under Cl (b) of the rule the Court may allow execution of the decree directing the respondent to furnish security for the due performance of any order which the Judicial Committee may make on appeal¹. The object of the security is to indemnify the appellant for any loss that may be occasioned by the execution being taken out².

holder furnishing security and the latter does not do so the order operates in fact as a stay of execution. The failure on the part of the respondent decree-holder to give security will not therefore deprive him of the benefit of S. 15 of the Limitation Act so as to bar a fresh application for execution after the Privy Council appeal is dismissed.³

5 Stay of execution on taking security from the appellant Cl (c)

The grant of an order for stay of the execution of the decree pending appeal is in the discretion of the Court and the appellant should show special cause for the exercise of the discretion in his favour. As a general rule execution ought not to be stayed unless it would so upset things that in the event of the appeal being successful the status quo ante could not be restored or could be restored only with great difficulty.¹ The principle underlying the granting of stay of execution is that the successful party in litigation is the ultimate successful party is to reap the fruits of that litigation and not obtain merely a barren success.

Proceedings between a preliminary decree and the final decree as for instance in partition suits are proceedings in the suit and not in execution. The High Court has therefore no power to stay such proceedings under this rule.² The Privy Council which has seisin of the appeal can alone stay such proceedings.³ Similarly proceedings in a Revenue Court to eject the defendant instituted after obtaining possession in execution of the decree of the High Court are not proceedings in execution of the decree within the meaning of this rule.⁴

When the Court orders security to be furnished it is advisable to specify definitely the time within which the security must be tendered and to give such further directions as may be necessary to ensure the intention of the Court being carried out.⁵

6 Stay of execution in view of application for special leave

The High Court of Calcutta¹ has held that it has inherent power to order stay of execution of its decree in view of an application for special leave to appeal to the Judicial Committee.

7 Stay of execution after special leave to appeal is granted by the Privy Council

It has been held by the Privy Council in *Nityamani v. Madhusudan Sen*¹ that the High Court has power to stay execution of a decree although an appeal against that decree has been admitted by special leave of the Privy Council. Their Lordships observed: "The learned Judges of the High Court are

The High Court has therefore no power to stay such proceedings under this rule. The Privy Council which has sum of the appeal can alone stay such proceedings.² Similarly proceedings in a Revenue Court to eject the defendant instituted after obtaining possession in execution of the decree of the High Court are not proceedings in execution of the decree within the meaning of this rule.⁴

When the Court orders security to be furnished it is advisable to specify definitely the time within which the security must be tendered and to give such further directions as may be necessary to ensure the intention of the Court being carried out.⁵

The High Court of Calcutta¹ has held that it has inherent power to order stay of execution of its decree in view of an application for special leave to appeal to the Judicial Committee.

7 Stay of execution after special leave to appeal is granted by the Privy Council

It has been held by the Privy Council in *Nityamani v Madhusudan Sen*¹ that the High Court has power to stay execution of a decree although an appeal against that decree has been admitted by special leave of the Privy Council. Their Lordships observed: The learned Judges of the High Court are in a much better position than the members of the Board to determine in any particular case whether execution ought to be stayed and if so upon what terms and conditions and to what extent stay of execution ought to be granted.

The contrary view taken in the earlier decisions^{1a} are no longer good law

8 Stay of execution by Privy Council

As a general rule, in appeals pending before the Privy Council an application to stay proceedings in execution ought always to be made in the first instance to the High Court which has ample power to deal with the matter according to the circumstances of the particular case, and has knowledge of the details which the Judicial Committee cannot possess on an interlocutory application¹ But if the High Court refuses to grant stay, the Privy Council may if it thinks fit, either order stay itself² or direct the appellant to apply again to the High Court with its opinion as to the advisability of granting stay³

9 Security after execution

The High Court can under sub-R (1) direct the respondent to furnish security for the due performance of any order which may be made by His Majesty in Council, even in cases where the decree has been executed¹ But the party seeking to obtain such security must show special cause such as waste or improper dealing with the property on the part of the respondent²

10 To give such other directions

Where a mortgage suit decreed ex parte was directed by the High Court to be re heard and during the pendency of an appeal to the Privy Council against that order one of the parties applied for stay, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that it had power under this rule as well as under its inherent powers to stay further proceedings in the suit¹

11 By the appointment of a Receiver

Under Cl (d) of the rule the Court has power to appoint a Receiver to safeguard the interests of the appellant But the principles on which a Receiver should be appointed are the same as those contained in O 40 In the absence of any allegation of waste or risk of loss, no Receiver ought to be appointed under this rule¹ The High Court has power to appoint a Receiver even in cases where special leave to appeal is granted by the Judicial Committee² and Lahore² the decree can be amended even after leave to appeal is granted and Lahore the records are transmitted to the Privy Council. The High Court of Allahabad³ on the other hand seems to hold a contrary view, namely that it cannot amend the decree which is the subject of an appeal to His Majesty in Council. See Note 9 to S 152 under the heading Amendment pending appeal against decree.

Power to add parties—The High Court has no power to direct the addition of parties after leave to appeal to the Privy Council is granted.⁴ (Compare also Note 32 to O 1, R 10)

Power to implead legal representatives or to order abatement—Where legal representatives have to be brought on record on the death of a party pending appeal to the Privy Council, the practice of the Judicial Committee is that, on an application, the High Court will make an enquiry, take evidence and transmit the same to the Privy Council with its own opinion as to the substitution of parties.⁵ The same rule of practice would appear to hold in the case of abatement.⁶

Power to stay proceedings—This rule has no application where the party applies for stay of proceedings in the Court below as distinct from the stay of the execution of a decree.⁷ See also points 3 and 4 in Note 5 ante.

Power to record compromise—Where after the certificate has been granted and the appeal declared to have been admitted, the parties compromise the suit and apply to the High Court to pass a decree in accordance therewith, it has been held by the Court of Bombay that it has no power to do so.⁸ The reason is that the Court having once made a decree cannot even by consent make a second one superseding the first.

13 Appeal

An order refusing to stay execution in the exercise of the discretion under this rule is not a "judgment" under Cl (15) of the Letters Patent and is not appealable.¹

(2) In default of such further security being furnished as required by the Court,—

- (a) if the original security was furnished by the appellant, the Court may, on the application of the respondent, execute the decree appealed from as if the appellant had furnished no such security,
- (b) if the original security was furnished by the respondent the Court shall, so far as may be practicable, stay the further execution of the decree, and restore the parties to the position in which they respectively were when the security which appears inadequate was furnished, or give such direction respecting the subject matter of the appeal as it thinks fit

(2) Such Court shall transmit the order of His Majesty in Council to the Court⁸ which passed the first decree appealed from or to such other Court as His Majesty in Council by such order may direct and shall (upon the application of either party) give such directions⁶ as may be required for the execution of the same, and the Court to which the said order is so transmitted shall execute it accordingly, in the manner and according to the provisions applicable to the execution of its original decrees

(3) When any monies expressed to be payable in British currency are payable in India under such order, the amount so payable shall be estimated according to the rate of exchange⁷ for the time being fixed at the date of the making of the order by the Secretary of State for India in Council with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Imperial and the Indian Governments

(4) Unless His Majesty in Council is pleased otherwise to direct no order of His Majesty in Council shall be inoperative on the ground that no notice has been served on or given to the legal representative of any deceased opposite party or deceased respondent in a case where such opposite party or respondent did not appear either at the hearing in the Court whose decree was complained of or at any proceedings subsequent to the

1 The provision contained in Paragraphs 3 and 1 of the corresponding section in the old Code which related to the enforcement of the liability of the surety for costs have been omitted under the present Rule in view of S 14a of the Code

2 Paragraph 4 has been newly introduced by Act XVI of 1920

2 Whoever desires to obtain execution

It is not necessary in all cases that each person interested in the execution of a particular order of His Majesty in Council should obtain a separate transmission of the order when it has been already transmitted to the lower Court at the instance of one of the successful parties¹ Under O 21, R 15 it is open to some of the decree holders who have obtained permission, to execute the Privy Council decree on behalf of all the decree-holders² But where the decree is in favour of several persons declaring that each is entitled to a separate and distinct share each plaintiff is bound to apply separately for execution and an order of transmission obtained by some of the plaintiffs alone cannot be taken advantage of by the others³ Where a party having obtained an order in council delays or refuses to lodge the order, the opposite party can apply under this rule asking for a summary order against that party

15. to lodge the order so that execution might follow in terms of the judgment of the Board ⁴

3 Shall apply by petition

The provisions of the rule are mandatory and an execution application filed without having filed a petition for transmission under this rule is incompetent. But where no such objection was taken in previous execution proceedings it cannot be allowed at a later stage of the proceedings ¹

4 Accompanied by a certified copy

A certified copy of the decree sought to be executed should be filed along with the petition ¹ A production of a copy of the judgment is not enough ² But the object of the requirement of a certified copy of the decree is only to ensure that proper intimation upon the subject of any order in council should be supplied to the Courts in India. The rule should not be construed as restricting the only possible evidence of the decree or order to the certified copy ³ Where, therefore, along with an application for the execution of the decree of the Privy Council a plain print copy of the decree was filed with an affidavit showing that it was the decree of the Privy Council, it was held that it must be held to be a true copy of the decree within the meaning of this rule ⁴

The practice in regard to Privy Council decrees is that the original decree is given to the successful party or to one of the successful parties and it is the duty of that person to file that original decree in the High Court ⁵

5 To the Court from which the appeal to His Majesty was preferred

The application under sub-R (1) should be made to the Court from whose decree the appeal was preferred to the Privy Council. An application made to any other Court is not competent ¹

6 Jurisdiction of Patna High Court

The High Court of Patna has no jurisdiction to execute an order in Council passed in an appeal from the Calcutta High Court. The proper Court to which an application for execution should be made is the High Court of Calcutta ¹

7 Functions under the Rule merely ministerial

The duties of the High Court in receiving and transmitting orders of His Majesty in Council under this rule are purely ministerial ¹ It is thus not competent for the High Court to consider and discuss the effect or propriety of the order in Council and disallow costs or interest ² or to hold that the decree of the Privy Council is void and incapable of execution on the ground that one of the appellants died during the pendency of the appeal³ If a party feels aggrieved by the order, the proper course for him is to apply to the Privy Council for redress.⁴

8 To what Court order should be transmitted

The High Court should transmit the order for execution to the Court which passed the decree. Where however, such Court ceases to have territorial jurisdiction over the matter the order can be transmitted to the Court which has jurisdiction to execute it¹

8a. Shall give such directions etc

Under Sub R (2) of the Rule it is the High Court that can give necessary directions in regard to execution¹ But it has been held that neither the High Court nor the Subordinate Court has power to stay execution or adjourn an application for execution on the ground that an application for review of the decree was pending before the Privy Council²

9 Application by assignee of order in Council

Where an order of the Privy Council is transmitted under this rule to the District Court as the Court which passed the first decree the latter Court has jurisdiction to entertain an application made by an assignee of the decree under O 21 R 16 to recognise the assignment and to allow him to execute the decree¹

10 Liability of surety

The liability of the surety can be enforced under S 145 of the Code. But the surety is not precluded from questioning the validity of the security bond in execution proceedings¹ Where the surety bond amounts to a mortgage it should be enforced by a separate suit and not by way of execution²

11 Restitution

Where during the pendency of an appeal to the Privy Council certain property which had been decreed to the plaintiff and which had been delivered to him was attached and sold away in Court auction in execution of another decree against the plaintiff and subsequently the Privy Council allows the appeal of the defendant and dismisses the suit the defendant is entitled to recover back the property by way of restitution. His right to restitution is not affected by the fact that the auction purchaser is not a party to the Privy Council appeal¹ The fact that the party applying for restitution is not a party

16 Letters Patent Appeal.

An appeal lies from an order of a single Judge of the High Court refusing to transmit for execution the order of His Majesty in council. Such an order is a 'judgment' within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent¹

17. Dismissal for want of prosecution

Where an appeal preferred against the decree of the High Court is dismissed by the Judicial Committee for want of prosecution, the order is not a judicial determination at all and limitation for execution of the High Court's decree runs from the date of the decree of the High Court¹

18 Limitation

An application to execute the decree or order of the Privy Council under this Rule is governed by Article 183 of the Limitation Act¹

R. 16. [S. 611.] The orders made by the Court which executes the order of His Majesty in Council, relating to such execution, shall be appealable in the same manner and subject to the same rules as the orders of such Court relating to the execution of its own decrees.

Reference by Court without jurisdiction

1 Legislative changes

1 The word final which occurred in the old section has now been substituted by the words not subject to appeal (See Note 4)

2 The words or the construction of a document . . . merits have been omitted

2 Scope of the Rule

A right of reference is fundamentally distinct from the right of appeal the former vests in the Court and the latter vests in the *sutor*¹ The object of the provision for reference is to enable the subordinate Courts to obtain, in non appealable cases, the opinion of the High Court in advance on a question of law and thereby avoid the commission of an error which could not be remedied later on² But the right of reference is subject to the conditions prescribed by this Rule and unless they are fulfilled, the High Court cannot entertain a reference from a subordinate tribunal³ The Rule requires the following conditions to be satisfied to enable a subordinate Court to make a reference —

(1) There must be a pending suit or appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal or a pending proceeding in execution of such decree (See Note 3)

(2) A question of law or usage having the force of law must arise in the course of such suit, appeal or proceeding, and

(3) The Court trying the suit or appeal or executing the decree must entertain a reasonable doubt on such question (See Note 7)

The provisions of this Order are made applicable to proceedings under the special or local Acts mentioned hereunder⁴

3 Reference lies only where question arises in suit appeal or execution of decree

A reference can be made only in a suit or appeal or in *execution of a decree*¹ and only on a matter about which the parties are litigating that is on a matter wherein the Court is called on to adjudicate on the opposite *contentions of the parties*² Thus no reference can be made under this Rule in the following cases —

- (1) In a proceeding against a pleader under the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879³
- (2) In a proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894⁴
- (3) In an application for review⁵
- (4) In an application for a new trial⁶
- (5) In an application for sanction to prosecute⁷
- (6) In an enquiry as to the proper Court-fee payable on a memorandum of appeal⁸
- (7) In an enquiry in an application under S 15 of the Calcutta Rent Act^{8a} or in any proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act^{8b} or in an application under S 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act⁸

The question on which a reference can be made must have arisen before or at the hearing of a suit or an appeal or in a pending proceeding in execution of a decree. A question arising subsequent to the hearing of a suit or appeal cannot be the subject of a reference under this Rule unless it arises in execution of the decree⁹.

The question must also be one which actually arises for decision in the proceedings before the Court. The Rule is not intended to provide for suppositious cases which do not actually arise for decision¹⁰.

The right of reference is analogous to a right of appeal in that it is not a mere matter of procedure, and, consequently, cannot be exercised in proceedings other than those referred to in the section by the application of S 141 of the Code which only makes the procedure of the Code in respect of suits applicable to miscellaneous proceedings¹¹ (See Note 7 S 141).

4 Decree not subject to appeal

No reference can be made in a suit or appeal unless the decree that might be passed therein is one against which *no appeal lies*¹. Similarly no reference can be made in a proceeding in execution of a decree unless the decree is a non-appealable one². The reason is that in appealable cases a remedy to correct possible errors is provided by the appeal³.

1. 5 Court, meaning of

The word Court in this Rule means a Court of Civil Judicature. Thus a Collector executing a decree transferred to him under S 68 of the Code² or a Rent Controller enquiring into an application under S 15 of the Calcutta Rent Act³ or a Registrar acting under the Indian Registration Act⁴ is not a Court and cannot make a reference under this Rule. Where a Court refuses to entertain an appeal on the ground that it has no jurisdiction to do so it has no power to make a reference on that matter under this Rule⁵ (See also Note 1 to S 114, ante)

6 No reference on question of fact

A reference is allowed only on a question of law or usage having the force of law. No reference can be made on a question of fact¹

7 Reasonable doubt

A reference can be made on a question of law only if the Judge entertains a reasonable doubt about it¹. There cannot ordinarily be a reasonable doubt on a question clearly decided by the rulings of the High Court to which the Judge making the reference is subordinate unless the authority of those rulings can be questioned in view of a more recent decision of the Privy Council². Where however, the ruling of a High Court is doubted in a later decision of the same Court and has been dissented from by the other High Courts, there may be room for a reasonable doubt sufficient to enable a subordinate Court to make a reference on the question². But even in such a case the referring Court must entertain a reasonable doubt about the question and the mere fact that there are conflicting rulings is not by itself sufficient³. Similarly the Court cannot make a reference on a question on which it entertains no doubt merely because the partes apply for it⁴.

A reference is not bad merely because the question arises out of the action of a third person not a party to the suit⁵.

8 Statement of facts and Court's opinion

In making the reference the Court should draw up a statement of the facts of the case, formulate the precise question of law or usage having the force of law on which opinion is sought for and must also give its opinion on the question¹.

9 Reference by Presidency Small Cause Courts

See S. 69 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882) as amended by Act IV of 1906 and the undermentioned cases¹

R. 2. [S. 618] The Court may either stay the proceedings or proceed in the case notwithstanding such reference, and may pass a decree or make an order contingent upon the decision of the High Court on the point referred;

Court may pass decree contingent upon decision of High Court but no decree or order shall be executed in any case in which such reference is made until the receipt of a copy of the judgment of the High Court upon the reference.

[1877—S. 619, 1861—S. 29.]

R. 3. [S. 619] The High Court, after hearing the parties if they appear and desire to be heard, shall decide the point so referred, and shall transmit a copy of its judgment, under the signature of the Registrar, to the Court by which the reference was made, and such Court shall, on the receipt thereof, proceed to dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court

Judgment of High Court to be transmitted and case disposed of accordingly

[1877—S. 619, 1861—Ss. 32 and 33]

1 Dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court

Upon receipt of the decision of the High Court, it is the duty of the referring Court to dispose of the case in conformity therewith. Thus, where a Small Cause Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs, contingent on the opinion of the High Court and the High Court gave the opinion that the plaintiffs could not recover, it is not open to the referring Court after the receipt of the opinion to allow the suit to be withdrawn by the plaintiff, judgment should be entered for the defendant¹. The judgment by the High Court on a reference under this rule is not, by itself, a decree but simply a statement of the grounds in conformity with which the referring Court is to dispose of the case as provided by this rule. Therefore the High Court cannot review its judgment passed on a reference made to it².

Costs of reference to High Court

R. 4. [S 620] The costs (if any) consequent on a reference for the decision of the High Court shall be costs in the case

[1877—S 620, 1861—S 34]

1 Costs of reference

The costs of reference to the High Court cannot be dealt with separately but must be dealt with when awarding the costs of the suit¹ The High Court of Calcutta is however, of opinion that the award of the costs of the reference is in the discretion of the Court² This does not seem to be correct on principle The rule requires that the costs of reference shall be costs in the case and S 35 which gives the Court a discretion to award costs is expressly made subject to the conditions and limitations prescribed by the rules of the first schedule

R. 5. [S 621] Where a case is referred to the High Court under Rule 1, the High Court may return the case for amendment, and may alter, cancel or set aside any decree or order which the Court making the reference has passed on made in the case out of which the reference arose, and make such order as it thinks fit

[1877—S 621]

1 Scope of the Rule

Where the lower Court has not complied with the conditions laid down in R 1 of this order the High Court has power under this rule to return the case for amendment in proper form¹ The rule is also wide enough to enable the High Court to quash the order of reference itself made by the lower Court²

R. 6. [S 646 A] (1) Where at any time before judgment a Court in which a suit has been instituted doubts whether the suit is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or is not so cognizable it may submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for the doubt as to the nature of the suit

(2) On receiving the record and statement, the High Court may order the Court either to proceed with the suit or to return the plaint for presentation to such other Court as it may in its order declare to be competent to take cognizance of the suit

1 At any time before judgment

No reference could be made under this rule after the passing of the judgment in the case.¹ The rule refers only to such questions as arise during the trial of the suit and not to questions arising on an application for sanction to prosecute which cannot be considered as a trial of the suit.²

R. 7. [S 616-B] (1) Where it appears to a District Court that a Court subordinate thereto has, by reason of erroneously holding a suit to be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or not to be so cognizable failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law or exercised a jurisdiction not so vested, the District Court may, and if required by a party shall, submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous.

(2) On receiving the record and statement the High Court may make such order in the case as it thinks fit.

(3) With respect to any proceedings subsequent to decree in any case submitted to the High Court under this Rule, the High Court may make such order as in the circumstance appears to it to be just and proper.

(4) A Court subordinate to a District Court shall comply with any requisition which the District Court may make for any record or information for the purposes of this Rule.

1 Scope of the Rule

S. 16 of the Prov. Small Cause Courts Act, 1897 provides that a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable. Where an ordinary Court entertains a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes it exercises a jurisdiction not vested in it and if it refuses to entertain an original suit on the ground that it is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, it refuses to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it. A reference under this rule is limited to those cases where the District Court is of the opinion that the Subordinate Court has held

7, that it has no jurisdiction over the suit, and that such order is erroneous.¹

The rule is only an enabling one and does not in any way cut down the jurisdiction of the appellate Court.² But a District Judge has power under this Rule to make a reference whether the case is, or is not, pending in appeal before him.³ Where a District Munsif returned a plaint as being cognisable only by a Court of Small Causes and the latter Court, however, returned it back as being cognisable only by the Munsif's Court, it was held that the correct procedure was either to proceed under R. 6 of this order itself or send the case to the District Judge for making a reference under this rule.⁴

2 Court subordinate thereto¹

The Court of Small Causes is a Court subordinate to the District Judge and O. 46, R. 7 contemplates and allows a reference to be made by the District Judge in cases tried by the Court of Small Causes.¹

3 If required by a party shall

Before a reference could be made under this rule it is a necessary condition that it must appear to the District Court that the subordinate Court has erroneously held upon the point of jurisdiction.¹ Where it does so appear and a party requires the District Court to make a reference, it is bound to do so.²

4 District Court should state its reasons

A District Court when making a reference under this rule should state its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court to be erroneous.¹

5 Powers of the High Court under this Rule

Where a suit which is cognisable only by a Court of Small Causes is tried as an original suit by a District Munsif and the decree is reversed by the Subordinate Judge on appeal there are two remedies open to the aggrieved party.

(1) A revision under S. 115 of the Code

(2) A reference under this rule

Where a revision is preferred to the High Court the latter is bound to set aside the decree of appellate Court as being passed in an appeal which was incompetent and therefore without jurisdiction.¹ It can also set aside the decree of both the Courts and return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court.²

1 Legislative changes

Section 623 of the old Code provided that an application for review could be made to the Court which passed the decree or made the order, or to the Court (if any) to which the business of the former Court has been transferred. These latter words have been omitted in the present section in view of s 140 of the Code newly introduced

2 Scope of the Rule

It has been seen in Note 2 to S 96 ante, that a right of appeal does not exist and cannot be assumed unless expressly given by statute or by rules having the force of statute. The same principle applies to a right of review also. Such a right does not therefore exist unless granted by statute¹ S 114 of the Code and this order expressly gave such a right in certain cases the former being the substantive section containing a brief statement of the Court's general power of review and the latter providing the details of procedure². These provisions constitute an exception to the general rule that when once a judgment is signed and pronounced it cannot afterwards be altered or added to (see O 20 R 3), and as such a right of review is exercisable only in the circumstances where it is distinctly provided by the statute³.

This rule is in itself definitive of the limits within which a review is permitted by the Code⁴ and it follows from what has been stated above that where a case falls within the class of cases contemplated by this rule the Court cannot have an inherent power of review apart from the provisions of the rule⁵. Where however a case falls outside the class of such cases the Courts have of course inherent power to review their orders for the ends of justice or to prevent an abuse of the process of the Court⁶.

The existence of a right of review does not bar a suit for the same relief⁷. Nor does the fact that an appeal can be filed against the decree afford any ground for refusing a review. The reason is that where there are two remedies open to a party, they should not as a rule be construed so as to operate in derogation of each other⁸. But the availability of an appeal as an obvious remedy will be a ground for refusing in the exercise of the Court's discretion, an application for review⁹.

3 Review and appeal—Distinction

A review is not the same thing as or a substitute for an appeal¹. The two proceedings differ in very many particulars.

- (1) The primary intention of a review is the reconsideration of the subject of the suit by the same Judge under certain conditions while an appeal is a rehearing by another tribunal².

- (2) A point which may be a good ground of an appeal may not be a good ground for an application for review³ Thus an erroneous view of evidence or of law is no ground for a review though it may be a good ground for an appeal⁴
- (3) A review does not, of necessity, re open questions already decided between the parties. The matter in issue is only re opened when the application for review is accepted, while in the case of an appeal the matter is re opened as soon as an appeal is admitted⁵

4 Review and amendment—Distinction

A review and an amendment differ in the following particulars —

- (1) In the case of a review the correctness of the judgment and the decree is questioned, while in the case of an amendment of a decree the correctness of the judgment is assumed but the jurisdiction to amend arises from the fact that the decree is not in accordance with the judgment¹
- (2) Where an application for an amendment is allowed there is no need for a re hearing of a suit, while if an application for review is allowed, a re hearing of the suit becomes necessary²
- (3) Where an application for review is granted the result is a new decree superseding the original decree and not merely some amendment thereof³

5 Person considering himself to be aggrieved⁴

It is only a person aggrieved⁵ by a decree or order that can apply for a review. A person aggrieved means a person who has suffered a legal grievance a man against whom a decision has been pronounced which has wrongfully deprived him of something or wrongfully affected his title to some thing, it is not sufficient that he has lost something which he would have obtained if another order had been made¹ A decree or order against a person not a party thereto, is on general principles of law, not binding on him. Such a person therefore cannot have a legal grievance against the decree or order, and, consequently cannot apply, for a review of the decree or order under this rule² The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has however, held that where an order has been made in a proceeding against a company which was not properly a party to the proceeding, a director of the company can file an application for review of the order.³

A minor, who is aggrieved by a decree or order passed against him may apply for a review under the same circumstances as an adult.⁴ Similarly, the legal representatives of a deceased party who are materially affected by the decree are also entitled to apply under this rule.⁵ Where sanction was granted to the Public Prosecutor to prosecute an attorney and an order was made granting leave to the attorney to appeal to the Privy Council it was held that the Public Prosecutor was a person aggrieved by the order granting leave to appeal and was entitled to apply for a review thereof.⁶

6 Decree or order from which no appeal has been preferred

If before the making of an application for review, an appeal from the decree sought to be reviewed has already been filed and is pending the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for review.¹ Where, however, the application for review is made first and thereafter an appeal is filed against the decree the jurisdiction to deal with the application is not affected by the pendency of the appeal. But where before the application is heard such appeal is disposed of on the merits² or under O 41 R 11⁴ the appellate decree supersedes the decree or order appealed from and the result of allowing the application would be to interfere with the decree of the appellate Court. Consequently the Court which passed the decree or order cannot proceed with the application for review. Compare Note 12 to S 96 ante and Notes 10 and 11 to O 9 R 13.

- (2) A point which may be a good ground of an appeal may not be a good ground for an application for review.³ Thus an erroneous view of evidence or of law is no ground for a review, though it may be a good ground for an appeal.⁴
- (3) A review does not, of necessity, re-open questions already decided between the parties. The matter in issue is only re-opened when the application for review is accepted, while in the course of an appeal, the matter is re-opened as soon as an appeal is admitted.⁵

A review and an amendment differ in the following particulars—

- (1) In the case of a review the correctness of the judgment or the decree is questioned, while in the case of an amendment of a decree the correctness of the judgment is assumed but jurisdiction to amend arises from the fact that the decree is not in accordance with the judgment.¹
- (2) Where an application for an amendment is allowed there is no need for a re-hearing of a suit, while if an application for review is allowed, a re-hearing of the suit becomes necessary.
- (3) Where an application for review is granted the result is a new decree superseding the original decree and not merely an amendment thereof.²

5 Person considering himself to be aggrieved

It is only a person aggrieved by a decree or order that can apply for a review. A person aggrieved means a person who has suffered a legal grievance—a man against whom a decision has been pronounced which has wrongfully deprived him of something or wrongfully affected his title to something, it is not sufficient that he has lost something which he would have obtained if another order had been made.¹ A decree or order against a person not a party thereto, is on general principles of law, not binding on him. Such a person therefore cannot have a legal grievance against the decree or order, and, consequently, cannot apply, for a review of the decree or order under the rule.² The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur, has however held that where an order has been made in a proceeding against a company which was not properly a party to the proceeding, a director of the company can file an application for review of the order.³

A minor, who is aggrieved by a decree or order passed against him may apply for a review under the same circumstances as an adult.⁴ Similarly, the legal representatives of a deceased party who are materially affected by the decree are also entitled to apply under this rule.⁵ Where sanction was granted to the Public Prosecutor to prosecute an attorney and an order was made granting leave to the attorney to appeal to the Privy Council it was held that the Public Prosecutor was a person aggrieved by the order granting leave to appeal and was entitled to apply for a review thereof.⁶

6 Decree or order from which no appeal has been preferred

If before the making of an application for review, an appeal from the decree sought to be reviewed has already been filed and is pending, the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for review.¹ Where however, the application for review is made first and thereafter an appeal is filed against the decree, the jurisdiction to deal with the application is not affected by the pendency of the appeal. But where before the application is heard, such appeal is disposed of on the merits² or under O 41 R 11⁴ the appellate decree supersedes the decree or order appealed from and the result of allowing the application would be to interfere with the decree of the appellate Court; consequently the Court which passed the decree or order cannot proceed with the application for review. 7 Filing of appeal pending application for review

As has been seen in Note 6, ante the subsequent filing of an appeal against the decree sought to be reviewed does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to deal with the application for review but such jurisdiction ought in such cases to be exercised with the greatest care and only in a very strong case.¹ The fact that application for review of a judgment is pending will not however, preclude the appellate Court from granting in appeal the relief claimed in the application.²

8 Decree or order from which no appeal is allowed—Clause (b)

Any decree or order from which no appeal is allowed is open to review.¹

9 Decision on reference from Court of Small Causes—Clause (c)

Under the Code of 1859 no application lay for review of judgment by the High Court on a reference from a Court of Small Causes.¹ Even under this rule, the High Court has no power to review a judgment passed by it on a reference from a Subordinate Judge with Small Cause Court powers. The rule allows a review of judgment on a reference only from a Court of Small Causes.²

10 Discovery of new and important matter or evidence

Where a litigant has obtained a judgment in a Court of justice he is by law, entitled not to be deprived of that judgment without solid grounds. Where therefore a review of a judgment is asked for by a party, the greatest care ought to be exercised by the Court in granting a review especially where the ground of review is the discovery of fresh evidence. It is so easy to the party who has lost his case to see what the weak part of his case was, and the temptation to lay and procure evidence which will strengthen that weak part and put a different complexion upon that part of the case must be very strong.¹ The rule that permits a new trial to be granted on account of the discovery of new evidence has, therefore, been fenced round with many limitations.

remissness on his part in adducing all possible evidence at the trial² Further, the new evidence must be such as is presumably to be believed and such that, if adduced, it would practically be conclusive, i. e., evidence of such a class as to render it probable almost beyond doubt that the judgment would be *different*³ Where it is very doubtful whether the evidence if produced, would have had any effect on the judgment, there is no ground for review⁴ In *Mahabir Prasad v Collector of Allahabad*⁵ where a suit was dismissed on two grounds namely, want of notice as required by law and the plaintiff being illegitimate and a review was applied for on the ground of discovery of new evidence tending to establish the legitimacy of the plaintiff, it was held that a review should not be granted inasmuch as the suit would still have to be dismissed on the question of notice But the case would be different where the effect of the evidence if adduced, would be to alter or cancel the decree Thus the discovery of a document containing an admission of liability by the defendant⁶ or the discovery of fraud⁷ would be a good ground for review Similarly where a decree for restitution of conjugal rights was passed and subsequently it was discovered that the parties were related as cousins such relationship rendering the marriage a nullity it was held that there was a good ground for review⁸ Again where the parties were not aware of a previous judgment passed in another case between them which if it had been placed before the Court would have resulted in different judgment there is a good ground for review⁹

In the undermentioned cases¹⁰ it has been held that it is not necessary for granting a review on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter that such evidence if admitted would be conclusive to show that the decision is wrong Thus view is against the general trend of decisions and cannot be accepted as correct

There is a conflict of opinion on the question whether the decision in another case between the same parties after the date of the judgment sought to be reviewed would be a sufficient ground for review in cases where such decision if it had been given before the date of the judgment sought to be reviewed would have resulted in a different judgment Before the date of the Privy Council decision in Kotagiri v Vellanki^{10a} the Bombay High Court answered the question in the affirmative¹¹ while the Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts

It has accordingly been held since then that a subsequent decision in another case¹³ or the subsequent reversal of a decision on the basis of which a judgment was given is no ground for review under this rule^{13a}. There are however several decisions¹⁴ which have purported to follow the Bombay view, but no reference was made in any of them to Kotagiri's case. In the undermentioned case¹⁵ the High Court of Rangoon has further held that the Bombay view cannot be said to have been overruled by the decision of the Privy Council in Kotagiri's case and that it is still good law. The reasoning is, however, not very clear. It is submitted that these decisions cannot be accepted as laying down the correct law. The word 'evidence' in this rule is not confined to documentary evidence but includes *oral evidence*¹⁶.

11 Discovery of important matter of law

The words 'new and important matter' in this Rule refer to evidence or other matter in the nature of evidence, and not to a legal authority in existence at the date of the judgment but not brought to the notice of the Court. Hence no review can be asked for on the ground of the discovery of new authorities which show that the decision is not correct.² The contrary view expressed in the cases cited below³ is, it is submitted, not sound.

But the discovery of a former decision between the same parties which operates as res judicata is a discovery of new and important matter within

12 Exercise of due diligence

In *Kesson, & Issur v G I P Railway*¹ their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows — 'Now the Code of Civil Procedure permits such applications for review on the ground of such discovery, (i e, discovery of new and important matter or evidence) 'but it enacts very strict conditions so as to prevent litigants living on their oars when they ought to be looking for their evidence—' enjoins the Judge to require the facts as to the absence of negligence to be strictly proved. Applications for review on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence ought, therefore, to be refused when such evidence could have been produced if reasonable care and diligence had been exercised.² There must be strong evidence of diligence in getting all available evidence.³ When the trial had lasted three years the Privy Council refused to admit fresh evidence as there was no reason shown as to why the new evidence was not previously submitted.⁴ The fact that evidence was found subsequently cannot itself be taken to show that due diligence could not have been exercised otherwise there could not be any case coming within this Rule.⁵ The grounds of granting a review on account of the discovery of fresh evidence, may in certain cases be grounds for extending the time under S 5 of the Limitation Act.⁶

13 Was not within his knowledge and could not be produced by him at the time

It must be shown that after the exercise of due diligence the evidence was not within the applicant's knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time.¹ The Court in fact, has no power to grant a review without calling for strict proof of such allegations.² In the undermentioned case³ the High Court of Patna has expressed the view that the words 'or could not be produced by him at the time must refer to the words was not within his knowledge and that the whole clause means that the new matters alleged were not within the applicant's knowledge and as such could not have been produced by him at the trial. In other words, it seems to be of the opinion that the availability of a piece of evidence within the knowledge of the applicant, but which, even after the exercise of due diligence, could not be produced by him at the trial is not a ground for review. It is submitted that this view is against the language of this Rule and cannot be accepted as correct.⁴

15 Mistake or error on the face of the record

In order that an error may be a ground for review it must be one *apparent on the face of the record*¹ i.e., an evident error² which does not admit of extraneous matter to show its incorrectness.³ The word error is not limited to errors of fact but includes also errors of law.⁴ But the law must be definite and capable of ascertainment.⁵ An erroneous view of the law on a debatable point⁶ or a wrong exposition of the law⁷ or a wrong application of the law⁸ cannot be considered a mistake or error on the face of the record.

A review has been held permissible in the following cases—

- (1) Where a judgment is passed without notice to the parties⁹ or in a form not legally correct¹⁰

- 4 (1874) 22 Suth W R 446 (446) Where applicant had full knowledge of the evidence but could not even with due diligence produce it it was held it was a good ground for review

Where the Court granted a claim for personal relief a prayer for which could not on a proper construction of a doubtfully worded clause in the plaint be made out, the error is not one apparent on the face of the record justifying a grant of review ²⁸ So also is the failure to give a formal finding on an issue tried and decided²⁹ or allowing the petitioner to prove fraud which was not pleaded³⁰ So also the consideration of the evidence by the Court in second appeal does not amount to an error apparent on the face of the record ³¹

It was held in the undermentioned cases³¹ that the fact that the Court had overlooked a previous ruling of the High Court on a point of law, may be an error apparent on the face of the record A contrary view has been taken in the cases noted below ³² It is submitted that the latter view is correct As was observed by the Madras High Court in Babu Vaidyan v Murugesam Pillai ³³ it is difficult to see how an error can be said to exist on the face of the record where you have to travel outside the record to see if the judgment is correct or not

Where the view of the law on which a judgment is based is subsequently overruled or modified by a superior Court it cannot be a mistake or error on the face of the record ³⁴ declared that the expression should be interpreted as meaning a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. (See in this connection Preamble Note 7 point 30) There is still a great diversity of opinion as to what is and what is not a reason "analogous" to the reasons specified. According to the High Court of Rangoon the word "analogous" is distinguishable from the expression *eiusdem generis*² and the former word, as used by the Privy Council, is wider than the expression "eiusdem generis".² The want of uniformity in the decisions on this subject even after the Privy Council decision is apparently due to the fact that in most cases it is a matter for argument whether any reason is analogous to the reasons specifically mentioned in the Rule.³ The case-law bearing on the subject has been summarised in Notes 16a and 16b infra.

16a. Cases where review was allowed on ground of sufficient reason

It has been held that a review can be granted in the following cases:—

- (1) Where the decree or order has been passed under a misapprehension of the true state of circumstances¹
- (2) Where a party has not had a fair opportunity of producing his evidence²
- (3) Where the Court has failed to consider important evidence³

The words used in the corresponding provisions of the Code of 1879 are general and hence it was held that the Court's discretion in so far as it was sufficient reason for review was not limited in any way — See for instances, the following cases —

Order in appeal from decision of Collector under Madras Act, I III of 1865—

- (5) Orders in proceedings under Ch 7 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act⁶
- (6) Proceedings under the Guardians and Wards Act appointing or refusing to appoint guardians⁷
- (7) Proceedings under S 8 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act⁸
- (8) Proceedings under the Bengal Estates Partition Act⁹
- (9) Orders passed by the commissioner under the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1923¹⁰

As to the applicability of this rule to proceedings under other Acts see the following —

- (1) S 17 Cl (2) of the Bengal Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (VII of 1887) enacts that that section shall not be applicable to cases provided for by this rule
- (2) S 15 Cl (3) of the Gujarat Taluqdars Act (VI of 1888) makes this order applicable to the decisions of the Taluqdar Settlement Officer
- (3) Under S 153 A of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) the applicant has to state in an application for review of a judgment or order under that Act the injury sustained by him and the Court cannot entertain the same unless the applicant deposits the amount if any due from him (See S 153 A of that Act)
- (4) S 251 of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) empowers the Courts to review their decisions in accordance with the provisions of this rule
- (5) S 265 sub S (3) of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908) makes the provisions of this order applicable to proceedings under that Act in so far as they are not inconsistent with those contained in that Act
- (6) Under S 388 sub S (3) of the Succession Act (XXIX of 1925) the order of a District Judge subject to the provisions relating to review of judgment in the Civil Procedure Code is final

22 Review petitions by minors

A minor can apply for a review of a judgment passed against him on the ground that his guardian has conducted the case with gross negligence¹ or on the ground that no sanction had been obtained for a compromise entered into *item*² In all such applications he will be bound by the provisions of this Rule³ There is no provision in the Code empowering the Court when passing a decree against a minor, to reserve to the minor the right of questioning the decree after attaining majority, and the absence of such provision is not a ground for review of the judgment otherwise properly passed⁴ (See also O 32, R 3, Note 5 and O 32, R 7, Note 5)

23 Consent decree

Where facts are brought to the notice of the Court showing that a compromise ought to be treated as a nullity, an application for review is a proper mode of raising the question whether the compromise should be treated as a nullity or not¹ A compromise decree entered into by a vakil or agent might be set aside on the ground that the vakil or agent had no power² There is conflict of opinion as to whether the discovery of fraud or undue influence in obtaining the consent decree can be a valid ground of review, some cases holding that it is³ and some that it is not⁴ The true view, however, seems to be that in such cases a suit is the proper remedy in the generality of cases though motions for a new trial may be convenient in some cases⁵ An application for review may be made when the consent decree is sought to be impeached on the ground of a clerical error or when it does not represent what the Court intended to decide⁶

24 Ex parte decrees and orders of dismissal for default

See also Notes 8 and 9 to O 9, R 13 The rule applies to all cases whether they are disposed of in the presence of the parties or ex parte in the absence of the defendants¹ As to whether the fact that an application under O 9 R 13 could have been preferred and that it was barred on the date of the review application is a bar to review see Note 9 to O 9 R 13 But an application to set aside an ex parte decree cannot by itself be treated as one for review² A dismissal for default other than the failure to appear is also open to review³ Where the dismissal is for default of appearance the failure to apply under O 9, R 9 or under O 41 R 19 will not, according to the High Courts of Madras Calcutta and Lahore, bar an application for review,⁴ though the reason for the failure to appear will not of itself amount to sufficient cause within the meaning of this rule and will not be a valid ground of review.⁵ The High Court of Allahabad^{5a} and Patna^{5b} have taken a contrary view. It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that where an application for restoration is made and dismissed an application for review thereafter will be barred.⁶

26 Review of decision before signing decree

Where in order to be consistent in the decree finally passed the Court has to pass orders under O 41, R 33 the same relief can be given in a petition put in by way of review.¹

27 Commissioner cannot review

A Commissioner appointed for taking accounts may, in his discretion and on proper grounds reopen the inquiry into any one or more of the items before his report is made for until then he decides nothing that is final and conclusive.¹

28 Limitation

The period of limitation for applications of review of judgments of Provincial Small Cause Courts the High Courts in the exercise of their Original Civil Jurisdiction and other Courts are respectively 15 20 and 90 days from the date of the decree or order sought to be reviewed (See Arts 161 162 and 173 of the Limitation Act 1908). In computing the period of limitation the applicant is entitled to deduct under S 12 of the Limitation Act 1908 the time spent in obtaining a copy of the decree or order¹ though as will be seen in Note 29 infra such time cannot be excluded for the purposes of the Court-fee payable on the application. But he cannot exclude the time occupied by a previous application for review.^{1a} The Court may also under S 5 of the Limitation Act 1908 admit the application after the expiry of the period of limitation on sufficient cause being shown for not making the application within the prescribed period. No definite set of rules can be laid down to govern the discretion of a Court under S 5 of the Limitation Act

1. It depends on the circumstances of each case² The fact that an appeal is pending³ or that the applicant is a minor⁴ or that applicant's legal advisers were ignorant of the contents of a document in their possession at the time of the original hearing⁵ or that a new exposition of the law has been made since the decision⁶ is not a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in filing the application within time

There is nothing in this order to suggest that the application for review must be within the same period which is allowed to a party for the alternative remedy by way of appeal or application for restoration of suit which has been dismissed for default of appearance⁷

29 Court fee

An application for a review of a judgment of the trial Court if presented on or after the 90th day from the date of the decree is chargeable with the same fee as is leviable on the plaint. An application for review of an appellate judgment if presented on or after the 90th day from the date of the decree is similarly chargeable with the same fee as is leviable on the *memorandum of appeal*¹ Such applications presented before the 90th day from the date of the original or appellate decree, as the case may be, are chargeable with one half of the fee leviable on the plaint or the memorandum of appeal^{1a} (See Articles 4 and 5 of Schedule I of the Court-Fees Act, 1870) Under S 14 of the said Act the Court may, even in a case where the application is presented on or after the 90th day, order the refund of so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day^{1a} As to refund of Court-fees in other cases see S 15 of the Court-fees Act and also the undermentioned case^{1b} The fact that an application, filed actually beyond the 90 days, may be within the time for the purposes of limitation by virtue of the application of Ss 5 and 12 of the Limitation Act, does not exempt the applicant from paying the full fee chargeable on the plaint or memorandum of appeal the two Acts are not *in pari materia*²

As to the fee payable where a portion of the judgment is sought to be reviewed see the undermentioned cases³

The word judgment in Articles 4 and 5 above referred to does not include an interlocutory order. Consequently an application for review of an interlocutory order is chargeable only like any other ordinary application⁴

The presentation of an insufficiently stamped application for review is not a valid presentation⁵

No Court fee need be paid on an application for review presented in a suit *in forma pauperis*⁶ See O 33 R 8 of the Code. But the applicant must have been declared a pauper in the suit at the time of the application. Otherwise he would have to pay the full fee chargeable on the application under law⁷

30 Appeal by one party review application by another—Clause (2)

The fact that an appeal has been preferred by one party does not preclude the other parties from applying for review¹ except where—

- 1) The grounds of such appeal are common to the applicant and the appellant or
- 2) being a respondent he can present his case in the appellate Court

The expression where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant means that the grounds of appeal and the grounds of review are the same. Where a party who has not appealed applies for review on the ground of discovery of new and important matter after the appeal by another party is summarily dismissed the ground of review is different from the grounds of appeal and therefore the application is maintainable². Where the applicant has the opportunity to present his case before the appellate Court, the lower Court has no jurisdiction to proceed with the application³. A respondent in an appeal has the right to apply for review of appellate Court judgment⁴

R. 2. [S. 624.] An application for review of a decree or order of a Court, not being a High Court, upon some ground other than the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as is referred to in Rule 1 or the existence of a clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree, shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order sought to be reviewed; but any such application may, if the Judge who passed the decree or made the order has ordered notice to issue under Rule 4, sub-rule (2), proviso (a), be disposed of by his successor.

1 Legislative changes

There was no section in the Code of 1859 corresponding to this section. The cases decided under that Code are now only of academic importance.

2 Review by successor in office

This rule must be read as a proviso to R. 1¹. The policy underlying the rule is that an application for review should be entertained and considered by the very Judge who made the decree or order.² Reading Rr. 1 and 2 as they ought to be, it follows that—

- (1) every application for review on which notice has been ordered to issue by the Judge who passed the decree or made the order may be disposed of by his successor in office³
- (2) an application based on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter or evidence⁴ or the existence of a clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the record⁵ can be entertained and disposed of by the successor in office. An application made both under O 9, R 13 and O 47, R 1 and registered as one under O 47, R 1, may, however, be changed by the successor as one made under O 9, R 13 of the Code and disposed of on that basis.⁶ A successor in office may also entertain applications for amendment of the decree under S 152 of the Code.⁷

- (3) an application based on any other ground than those referred to in the paragraph above can be entertained only by the Judge who made the order or passed the decree^{7a}. Thus a successor in office cannot grant a review of the decree or order passed by his predecessor in office on the ground that such decree or order is incorrect⁸ or on the ground that notice of hearing was not given,⁹ or on the ground that the guardian ad litem of a minor party had no sanction to refer the matter to arbitration¹⁰ or on the ground that the case was wrongly dismissed by his predecessor for default¹¹ or on the ground that the right to proceed against other properties was not reserved by the original Judge¹². It will be illegal for a District Judge to transfer a review petition filed before a Subordinate Judge to his own file¹³ or to transfer an application for review filed before him to a Subordinate Judge¹⁴. A successor in office of a Judge who has been transferred¹⁵ or who has retired¹⁶ or who is dead¹⁷ cannot entertain such application for review. Similarly, where a Court has been abolished and suits have been transferred to another Court the Judge of that Court cannot grant a review except on the two grounds mentioned in this rule.¹⁸ But where a Judge of an Additional Sub-Court was transferred as the Subordinate Judge of the principal Sub-Court it was held that the latter could review his own order passed while he was the Additional Subordinate Judge.¹⁹
- (4) an application for review of a decree or order passed by a Judge of the High Court can be made to, or disposed of by, his

R. 3. [S 625] The provisions as to the form of preferring appeals shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to applications for review

[1877—S 625]

Synopsis

Applicability of the Rule Form contents and presentation of ap plication	Note No 1 2	Application by legal representative of party Limitation	Note No 3 4

1 Applicability of the Rule

This Rule is not applicable to Small Cause Courts See O 50 As to the powers of review of Small Cause Courts see S 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and the undermentioned cases¹

2 Form contents and presentation of application

Applications for review should be drawn up in the same manner as appeals and should set forth concisely the grounds of objections to the decision of which a review is sought without argument or narrative and such grounds should be numbered consecutively¹ The Court should not travel beyond the grounds mentioned in the application^{1a} According to the High Court of Allahabad it is not necessary that it should be accompanied by the copy of the decree or judgment sought to be reviewed² while according to the High Court of Bombay it is necessary to do so³ The application should be presented to the Judge and not to the *Munsarum*⁴ The informalities in presenting a review petition cannot be raised after the decree is passed in terms of review⁵

The Rule only relates to the form of the application for review It does not extend the right of a party who goes for a review and give him a right of appeal against an order refusing to restore an application for review, by reason of the fact that an appellate order under such circumstances is appealable under O 43 R 1 (f)⁶ An application for execution made after 90 days from the date of the decree and which does not mention any circumstances to show why it could not be made within 90 days, cannot be treated as an application for review.⁷

3 Application by Legal representative of party

The legal representative of a deceased party to a suit can apply for a review in the circumstances in which the party himself could have applied.¹

4 Limitation

When filing an application for review of a judgment although it is not necessary to file a copy of the judgment the applicant is entitled to the benefit of S 12 sub S 2 of the Limitation Act if he does obtain a copy of the judgment.¹ A pauper may apply for review of judgment with the same indulgence under S 5 of the Limitation Act as to delay in making the application as a person who is not a pauper. The time occupied in prosecuting a prior application for review cannot be deducted in calculating the period of limitation.² Nor the time taken in prosecuting an appeal.⁴

R. 4. [S 626] (1) Where it appears to the Court that there is not sufficient ground for a review it shall reject the application
 (2) *Where the Court is of opinion, that the application for review should be granted, it shall grant the same.*²

Provided that—

(a) no such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party, to enable him to appeal and be heard in support of the decree or order, a review of which is applied for and

(b) no such application shall be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which the applicant alleges was not within his knowledge, or could not be adduced by him when the decree or order was passed or made without strict proof⁶ of such allegation

(a) The words and the Judge shall record with his own hand his reasons for such opinion which occurred in the concluding part of para 2 of the old section have been omitted

(b) Cl (c) of the old section has been transferred to R 2 of this Order

The other alterations do not involve any alteration in the law

By reasons of the change mentioned in (a) above the decisions mentioned below have been rendered obsolete ¹

2 Where the Court is of opinion it shall grant the same

Where an application for review is made on any of the grounds specified in R 1 and the Court is of opinion that the review should be granted it should be granted ¹ It is improper to admit a review petition and hear the case afresh and thereafter dismiss the petition, where, at the re-hearing, the Court comes to the conclusion that there is no reason to interfere, the proper course is not to pass an order dismissing the review application but to pass an order to the same effect as the one under review ²

3 Review without notice to the opposite party

Before granting an application for review it is necessary that notice of the application should be given to the opposite party Otherwise the order granting review will be a nullity ¹ A notice of an application by the plaintiff for review of an order passed in a suit must be served on all the defendants and not merely on the opposing defendants who had appeared when the decree or order sought to be reviewed was passed ² The reason is that the expression opposite party in proviso (a) of the Rule is not restricted to cases in which such party has actually appeared It includes all parties interested in supporting the order or decree sought to be set aside ³ There is a difference of opinion as to whether where an appeal is dismissed under O 41 R 11 or a suit is dismissed before summons to the defendant or an application for execution is summarily dismissed before notice to the judgment-debtor, the respondent defendant or judgment-debtor as the case may be is an opposite party within the meaning of this Rule The High Courts of Madras⁴ and Patna⁵ have held that he is, while the High Courts of Calcutta⁶ and Lahore⁷ have held that he is not

5 Discovery of new matter or evidence

The expression means the same thing as the expression new and important matter of evidence¹ in R 1 above¹ See also Notes to R 1, supra

6 Strict proof

No application for review should be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence which the applicant alleges was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him when the decree or order was passed or made, without strict proof of such allegation¹ Where a Court grants a review without calling for strict proof of the allegation that the new matter was not within the knowledge of the petitioner, the order is in contravention of this Rule and is without jurisdiction² Strict proof means anything which may serve directly or indirectly to convince a Court, and has been brought before the Court in legal form and in compliance with the law of evidence It is the formality of the proof which is prescribed and not the sufficiency in the result Hence the fact that the evidence adduced is not sufficient to prove the allegation does not make the order granting an application for review one in contravention of the provisions of this Rule within the meaning of R 7 *infra*³ It is within the jurisdiction of the appellate Court to say whether the strict proof is according to law or not⁴ though the question of the sufficiency or importance of evidence is for the Court admitting the review⁵

7 Second application for review—See O 47 R 7 below

8 Death of party pending review

The order granting review only holds the judgment in suspense The death of party does not, therefore, cause the suit or appeal to abate¹

1 Application for review in Court consisting of two or more Judges

This Rule will apply only in the case of a Court consisting of more than one Judge^{1a} This Rule applies to High Court also It is not applicable to Small Cause Courts See O 50 A review heard and granted by two Judges of a Court one of whom only was the Judge who passed the decree, is illegal¹ Similarly where one Judge of a Bench of two Judges who disposed of an appeal leaves the Court on a month's leave, the other Judge has no jurisdiction to hear an application for review since the former Judge cannot be said to have ceased to be a member of the Court or to be precluded by absence or other cause for a period of six months next after the application for review² But where a Bench of two Judges of a Court has passed a decree or made an order and one of the Judges is absent on leave thus precluding him from considering the decree or order for a period of six months from the date of the application for review, the other Judge is competent to hear the application for review³ If a review is allowed by such single Judge, the matter should be reheard by a Bench of two Judges⁴ A District Judge cannot transfer an application for review to the Additional Judge⁵

the law

Under S 378 of the Code of 1859 the order of the Court granting or refusing the review was final

2 Scope and applicability of the Rule

Under this Rule an order rejecting an application for review is not appealable. An order granting an application for review is appealable only on three grounds of objections namely that the application was —

(a) in contravention of the provisions of R 2

(b) in contravention of the provisions of R 4

(c) presented after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause

Such objection may be taken—

(a) at once by an appeal from the order granting the application [O 43 R 1 (w)] or

(b) in an appeal from the final decree or order passed or made in the suit (S 105)¹

Where an application is dismissed for default of appearance it may be restored on sufficient cause being shown for such non appearance upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit and shall appoint a day for hearing the same. But no order of restoration should be made without notice to the opposite party.

This Rule being inconsistent with S 176 of the Agra Tenancy Act is not applicable to an order passed by an Assistant Collector Second Class relating to the trial of any suit or application.^{1a} This Rule does not apply to the Provincial Small Cause Courts.² Where the Court actually granted a review though it purported to act under S 112 it was held in the undermentioned case³ that it must be treated as an order under this order and that an appeal lay against the order.

3 Order rejecting review not appealable

An order rejecting an application for review is not appealable¹ As to whether and when the revision will lie in such a case, see Note 27 to S 115 and the undermentioned cases.² As to whether an order rejecting an application for review of judgment is an order made "on appeal" from which an appeal lies to the Privy Council, see Note 5 to S 109 and the cases cited below³ As to the powers of revision under S 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act, see the case cited below⁴

4 Order granting review, if and when appealable

Under the Code of 1859 there was no appeal even against an order granting a review¹ O 43, R 1 (w) gives a right of appeal against such an order.² This Rule enacts that in such an appeal only the three grounds of objections specified in this Rule can be raised Both the Rules must be read together² and so reading them it follows that there is no appeal even from an order granting a review in cases other than those specified in this Rule³ Thus where a Court grants a review for sufficient reason the order is not open to appeal⁴ In Bombay O 43, R 1 (w) has been deleted by a rule made by the High Court under S 122 of the Code In Bombay therefore an order granting a review is in any view appealable, only if it falls under this Rule^{4a}

Where a decree passed on review cannot be attacked on a ground recognised under this Rule the case cannot be certified as a fit case under S 109, Cl (c) of the Code⁵ nor will the mere fact that an appeal is permitted under this Rule make it a fit case for appeal to His Majesty in Council⁶

It is open to the appellant to prefer an appeal against an order granting a review, without taking any steps regarding the decree itself⁷

As to an appeal from an order granting a review in suits of a Small Cause nature, see Note 19 to S 102 and the undermentioned cases⁸

5 Grounds of objection in appeal—See Note 4 above

6 Application being in contravention of R 2

An appeal will lie from an order granting a review on the ground that there is a contravention of R 2¹ A, a District Judge passed an order dismissing an appeal. While A was absent, an application for review of the order was presented to the Sub-Judge who ordered notice to issue. Subsequently A died and his successor granted a review of the order of dismissal. It was held that the Sub-Judge had no jurisdiction to order notice to issue on the application for review and that an order by the successor of A, granting a review of A's order was under such circumstances in contravention of the provisions of R 2 and an appeal therefore lay under this Rule²

7 In contravention of the provisions of R 4

It has been seen in Note 6 to R 4 ante that where a Court grants a review without notice to the opposite party or in cases coming under Cl (b) of sub R 2) of that Rule without calling for strict proof of the allegations referred to therein it acts in contravention of that Rule. An appeal will therefore lie from such order under the provisions of this Rule¹. As to the meaning of the words 'strict proof' and to the powers of the appellate Court to go in to the question of the sufficiency of the evidence see Note 6 to R 4 ante

8 After the expiry of the period of limitation

An appellate Court cannot entertain an appeal from an order granting review simply on the ground that the application was time-barred. There must also be want of sufficient cause for the delay¹. When an application made beyond the prescribed period is admitted without the Court satisfying itself that there is sufficient cause for delay then the Court acts without jurisdiction². The appellate Court can look into the sufficiency of the cause for the delay alleged³.

9 Second appeal from order granting review

No second appeal lies from the order of an appellate Court whether it confirms or reverses the order of the Court of the first instance granting an

10 Letters Patent appeal

An order refusing an application for review is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of S 15 of the Letters Patent and is not appealable as such¹ An order granting an application for review may amount to a 'judgment' within that clause but an appeal will lie on the grounds specified in this Rule²

Where a single Judge disposed of an application for review, when the other Judge was on a month's leave it was held that the order was without jurisdiction and that an appeal lay under Cl 15 of the Letters Patent³

11 Objection to order granting review may be taken in appeal from the final decree

The propriety of an order granting review can also be questioned in the appeal against the final decree but only on the grounds specified in this Rule¹

12 Order granting review in insolvency proceedings, if appealable

A Court exercising powers under the insolvency jurisdiction has the same powers as any other Court under the Code^{1a} If a review is granted, the order can be objected to in appeal only on the grounds mentioned in this Rule¹

13 Dismissal of application for review for default—No appeal

An order under O 47, R. 7 refusing to re-admit an application for review, dismissed for default is not an appealable order However, the High Court could in such a case interfere in revision.¹

There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure preventing a second application for review where a previous application for review was made and rejected, provided such second application is based on grounds different from those taken in the first application.¹

16 Review without jurisdiction—Revision

The High Court will not interfere with the order of an appellate Court dismissing an appeal against the grant of review unless there is a want of jurisdiction or there is an illegality or material irregularity in passing such an order¹ nor will it interfere with an interlocutory order granting review for a sufficient reason² But where the first appellate Court allows an appeal against an order granting review on the grounds other than those mentioned in this Rule it acts without jurisdiction and the order is liable to be set aside in revision³ Where a Court subordinate to the High Court rejects an application for review of judgment refusing to consider the grounds of the same and thus fails to perform its duty it is competent to the High Court under its general powers of superintendence to direct such Court to proceed according to law^{3a} (See also No c 27 to S 115 ante and the undermentioned cases)⁴
